NOTRE DAME'S TEAM IS UPSET BY PITT, 12-0

65,000 Watch Panthers Fight Back Gamely in Last Period.

SCORE ON LONG RUN AND FORWARD PASS

Irish Removed From Ranks of Unbeaten After Many Early Threats Fail.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The Panther, regal jungle cat and football team alike, is most dangerous when wounded; cornered, it bares its fangs for the last fight to the death.

A mighty Notre Dame eleven, hailed the greatest in the land, found that out for the first time today as the Panthers of Pittsburgh, battered and groggy, lashed out, in a dying fourth-quarter effort that stunned the Green grenadiers from South Bend, sent them reeling down to a 12 to 0 defeat, and chalked on the pages of football history one of the greatest upsets of all times.

Driven like sheep before the charge of eleven shepherds in bright green, the Panthers reeled through three periods of a struggle that held a mammoth crowd of 65,000 in the huge stadium on Pittsburgh's highest hill breathless with fear for the home boys.

Three times, once in each scoreless quarter, the Panthers staggered back under the drive of a team they say in the Midwest is the best that ever came out of the Indiana university where Knute Rockne founded the greatest of modern football dynasties.

Pitt Stubborn on Defense.

Each time the effort was greater, the plight of the hapless defenders more desperate. Each time that bitter stand had been greater than any one had expected, and the great crowd huddled against the bitter wind that swept the field seemed only to hope that from somewhere the Panther would summon strength enough to keep the raiders from the goal line up to the end.

From somewhere came that strength, and more. Into one mighty thrust Pittsburgh suddenly hurled every ounce left in the battered bodies of eleven youngsters who had taken every bit of Notre Dame's pounding for three quarters, almost without a single relief. Within the space of a single minute deep in the final quarter, the Panthers scored two touchdowns, and the cocky Green raiders who had pranced so high, dominating the play up to that moment, fell apart like an expensive toy dropped from a considerable height with the mainspring tightly wound. Within seconds, the remnants of what had been a great team were scattered all over the historical premises. Bob Hogan, Panther quarter back, who was one of the two to finish who did not start, snared one of Mike Koken's passes on his own 27-yard line, and Notre Dame pressed, as it always had been doing. Warren Heller and Mike Sebastian ripped inside Notre Dame's tackles for a dozen yards between them. Isadore Weinstock, a burly full

Storm Warning Flags On Lakes Northwest

Cleveland, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The United States Weather Bureau tonight issued the following storm warning:

"Southwest storm warning signals displayed on the lower lakes today were changed to northwest warning signals at 9:30 o'clock, Eastern standard time, tonight. Strong northwest winds, diminishing Sunday."

Mail Plane Down In Channel Gale

Lifeboats Sent to German Air Liner After Its SOS Is Received.

London, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—A German airmail liner, buffeted by a 60-mile gale in the English Channel, was forced to descend in the high seas near Dover and a lifeboat was sent out immediately in response to SOS calls from the plane.

Only the pilot and the wireless operator were aboard the air liner, whose position was believed between Deal and Dover. It is a regular night freight and mail plane operating between London and Cologne and Berlin.

An hour after its distress message was received, the gale had moderated considerably, but in the Folkstone area it was reported blowing at a rate of more than 100 miles an hour.

Virginian's Note Tells Of Kidnaping by Gang

Rockingham County Orchardist Writes Family He Is Held in New York After Being Beaten in Maryland.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Jacob Andes, Rockingham County orchardist, in a letter written to his wife from New York says he is being held by gangsters in that city.

The letter which was turned over to Commonwealth's Attorney D. Wampler Earman and Sheriff Charles R. Fawley for investigation, told of his being held up between Charlottesville and Ellicott City, Md., where he said he was badly beaten and left in the woods. In his letter, which had a New York postmark of October 22, Andes said he was leaving in ten minutes for an unknown destination.

Relatives of Andes who went to the place where he said the holdup occurred, found his truck at the side of the road. There was a hole in the windshield. A crate of beans and peppers, which he was bringing home after disposing of a carload of lambs in Baltimore was found in the truck, along with a change of clothing.

Andes' letter told of being taken by a farmer to a physician who dressed his wounds. He said he paid $15 for the medical service from $150 he had concealed in his shoe. His family estimated that the truckload of lambs sold for approximately $250.

Relatives said they had asked the New York Medical Society to try to determine who dressed the man's wounds. New York authorities said that Dr. Preston, the name given by Andes in his letter, was in Europe.

Andes complained of severe pains in his head, and said that at times his mind was blank. His family here said they believed he was so severely beaten by highwaymen that he does not know where he is.

CHINESE KIDNAPERS SHOOT MISSIONARY

Captive Lutheran Minister Slain When Troops Scare Bandits.

Hankow, China (Sunday), Oct. 30 (A.P.).—Chinese who escaped from a bandits' camp 100 miles northeast of here reported today that Bert Nelson, Lutheran missionary from Minneapolis, was shot and killed last August by the bandits.

Nelson had been held a prisoner by a Communist band for two years in Hupeh Province. The escaped Chinese said the missionary had proved an encumbrance to the Communists during a provincial military drive against them, whereupon he was shot in cold blood.

An American mission in Hupeh paid $2,100 for the release of the Rev. Bert Nelson in the spring of 1931. Various stories came from the Chinese hinterland about his long captivity, one being that the bandits were holding him in order to learn the English language. He was reported seen last summer, when it was said he was in good health and being treated well.

Chicago, Oct. 29. (A.P.).—Statisticians went back to the reign of King Edward I, of England, to find wheat prices lower than those paid on the Chicago Board of Trade in the final 15 minutes of trading today.

The December future delivery sold at 43⅜ cents a bushel, the lowest price in the history of organized markets and one that has not been equaled since 1652. In 1286 and 1287, wheat sold in England as low as 9 cents a bushel. Other future deliveries sold at the lowest levels of the season.

Elloree, S. C., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Yeggs blew the vault in a branch of the South Carolina State Bank here today and escaped with loot estimated by bank officials to be in the neighborhood of $2,500.

TRACTION MERGER FACING NEW DELAY

Action May Be Blocked in December Session by National Measures.

The District traction merger may face the Senate shelf again in December along with other pieces of perennially controversial District legislation.

The fight over local relief and District appropriations generally is expected to relegate all other District projects to the background in a session giving itself over almost entirely to matters of national concern.

Senator John J. Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, none too cheerful over his recent defeat for reelection, will return prepared to fight the merger to the bitter end.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, who also opposes power control by the new company; Senator Arthur H. Vandenburg (Republican), Michigan, who thinks the Senate should not take up its time with the matter; Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, and others, may combine to keep the issue from coming to a vote.

So many matters of local concern await action during the few weeks Congress will be in session it is inevitable many of them will get lost in the shuffle.

There is the matter of $1,200,000 in urgently needed relief funds, a point

Ingrid's Engagement To Prince Is Reported

London, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—The engagment of Princess Ingrid of Sweden to "a British prince" will be announced Armistice Day, the Stockholm correspondent of the Daily Express reported today.

The princess is now in England. Her name has been linked with both the Prince of Wales and Prince George. Ingrid's parents, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden, are expected to join her in England a few days before Armistice Day, which is also her father's birthday.

Refused to Talk About Case Until Death; "Dead Man" Reported Seen on Highway During Fight Unhurt, Police Are Told.

The hijacking gun battle near Ellicott City Friday claimed its first victim last night when Elmer Bleinberger, of Baltimore, died at Emergency Hospital. He had been shot in the abdomen, but steadfastly refused to talk about the case, saying he was a hitch-hiker struck by a stray bullet.

Meanwhile, the "dead man" reported seen in the road was not even wounded, it appeared from a story told by Asa A. Anderson, a Baltimore bakery truck driver. Anderson said the "dead man" reported by other witnesses of the battle scrambled to his feet and begged a ride after other gunmen disappeared. The driver appeared yesterday in the office of Julius Wosch, chief of police of Ellicott City, and told his story.

Anderson said that he was driving his truck about two and a half miles from Ellicott City when he came upon the injured man and his assailants. A light truck was standing in the road between two sedans. Near the cars two men, a large one and another armed with two pistols, were standing in the road. At their feet was one man, lying in the road, while another lay in the ditch nearby.

While he watched, Anderson said, the man in the road was picked up by the armed man and put in the truck. A youth of about 20, who suddenly appeared, Anderson said, also got into the truck with the large man and the three cars started toward Washington.

After they left, the truck driver continued, the man in the ditch scrambled to his feet and asked Anderson for a ride into Ellicott City. He was described as being about 28 years old and neatly dressed in a brown suit. On the way to Ellicott City he told Anderson that he and the wounded man had been driving the truck, loaded with alcohol, to Washington when they were hijacked. He said he knew who did it and "would get him in Baltimore."

Before reaching Ellicott City, Anderson told police, his passanger saw a light car approaching, and got out of the bakery truck, explaining he knew the operator of the other machine. He waved to the other driver, but the car did not stop. Anderson, fearing there would be more shooting, drove away, leaving the rum-runner in the road

AMERICA WON'T PROMISE FORCE TO BACK TREATY

Accepts French Idea of Consultation in Case of Pact Violation.

DAVIS PRESENTS U. S. VIEWS TO HERRIOT

Plan for Army Elimination Does Not Apply to This Nation, Premier Says.

Paris, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Norman Davis, America's disarmament representative in Europe, told Premier Herriot today the United States was unable to commit itself to the use of force in defense of the Kellogg pact.

It was learned in authoritative American quarters that Davis expressed this view as a personal opinion during the course of a conversation with the premier and Joseph Paul-Boncour, minister of war. Premier Herriot explained the major points of the new French disarmament plan to be presented to the Geneva disarmament conference.

The premier revealed, it was learned, that his proposal for the substitution of professional armies, with short-term conscript forces, did not apply to the United States and was confined to continental Europe, excluding even England.

Skeptical of Force.

Davis was said to have assured Herriot that the United States was interested in the faithful observance of the Kellogg pact and that it accepted the idea of consultation in case of violation of the pact, but was unable to make advance pledges relative to the use of force.

Concerning the question of American guarantees, a high French military authority pointed out references to the Kellogg pact in the Republican and Democratic party platforms and added that France considers the United States henceforth will not be disinterested when an aggression occurs.

This authority confirmed statements that the French plan does not envisage limits for American, or British armies, but embodies an attempt to make the short term of military service general throughout continental Europe.

Interpretation of Violations.

It was hoped to secure adhesion by a maximum number of European nations.

Concerning violations of the Kellogg pact, the military authority said France believes the criterion of aggression acceptable to Europe is whether an army of one nation penetrates territory of another, though

Policeman Faces Charge of Assault

Policeman Elmer R. Shoemaker, of the Ninth Precinct, faces trial in a justice court of Fairfax County, Va., on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon, as the result of an altercation following a traffic accident.

The altercation occurred Friday on the Columbia pike, on the outskirts of Alexandria. The policeman, it was reported, was riding with his brother-in-law, Grady E. Cooper, of 713 Eighth street northeast, when their car was in collision with an automobile driven by Arthur F. Hawkins.

An argument ensued, and Shoemaker is alleged to have wielded a blackjack, rendering Hawkins unconscious. Several Negroes, who were attracted by the altercation, were forced to leave the scene when the policeman is said to have threatened them with his revolver.

County police were summoned and arrested Shoemaker and Cooper. The policeman was released in $1,000 bail on the dangerous weapon charge, while Cooper posted $50 collateral on a reckless driving accusation.

HOOVER STARTS PREPARING FOR NEW YORK TRIP

Leaves Tomorrow Morning; Another Western Swing Is Planned.

KLEIN SAYS SPEECH WILL BE "HOT ONE"

President Defends G. O. P. Rule in Talks on Train Coming From Indiana.

(Associated Press.)

Definitely decided upon another and more protracted journey into the Middle Western political arena—a trip to be marked by three or four speeches—President Hoover late yesterday returned to the White House for a brief stop before carrying his campaign to the Eastern seaboard.

The President plans to leave here tomorrow morning to swing through Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, and then late Wednesday or Thursday he will turn Westward once more.

Although his plans now are tentative, with details still to be decided, Mr. Hoover probably will go through Chicago, Minneapolis, Springfield, Ill., and St. Louis, in the order named. Dozens of rear platform appearances would be arranged for this route.

West Coast Trip in Doubt.

Some of the President's closest advisors now are somewhat doubtful that he will make a trip to the West Coast, but most of his plans have been arranged so that an eleventh-hour shift would be possible.

As he traveled back yesterday from Indianapolis and his fourth major address in the interior, the Chief Executive took no rest from his drive for reelection.

At half a dozen halts in West Virginia and Western Maryland he told audiences ranging from the hundreds to several thousand, as estimated by police, that the "forces of depression" are in further retreat.

Once he resumed the atttack upon Democratic tariff policies on which he centered in the Hoosier capital. Between stops he worked upon campaign speeches still to come.

The theme on which he centered at Keyser, W. Va., early yesterday afternoon, ran through most of his brief addresses throughout the day.

Defends G. O. P. Course.

"Many of you realize the difficulties we have passed through in the last three years, and the battle which we have made to protect our country from great disasters," he said. "You know that we have succeeded in a great defensive battle against the sweep of destruction and chaos. You know that we have now turned the forces and agencies in our control toward restoration of employment and the restoration of agriculture.

"You have seen during the past few months evidence of recovery from these difficulties. They are evidence that the Republican party has conducted the country wisely; that it has met the Nation's difficulties with courage; that it has devised the means and methods by which our people have been protected and by which they shall continue to make progress to recovery."

As early as 9 o'clock yesterday morning, while light mists still hung

Chicago Daily News And Post Are Merged

Chicago, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Chicago's two oldest afternoon newspapers were consolidated today, the Daily News purchasing the Evening Post. The Daily News, founded in 1875 by Victor F. Lawson and Melville E. Stone, former general manager of the Associated Press, a few years ago bought out the Chicago Daily Journal.

Today's consolidation left the Nation's second largest city with only three afternoon newspapers, the Daily News, the Evening American and the Daily Illustrated Times. The Tribune and the Herald and Examiner remain in the morning and Sunday field, with the Journal of Commerce, a business and financial publication, publishing six mornings a week.

Capt. Kelly Transferred Back to Command of Third Precinct.

The first major administrative move of the newly appointed superintendent of police, Ernest W. Brown, was made known last night with announcement of the designation of the Crime Prevention Bureau as a unit of the Detective Bureau, and with reduced personnel.

Capt. Edward J. Kelly, appointed a few weeks ago to head the crime prevention unit by erstwhile Police Superintendent Pelham D. Glassford, was transferred back to the Third Precinct command, in compliance with his request.

Sergt. E. W. Reed was named to head the crime prevention unit, under supervision of Inspector F. S. W. Burke, chief of the Detective Bureau.

DEMOCRATIC MONEY METHOD DENOUNCED

(Associated Press.)

The Republican national committee last night issued a statement saying that G. A. Eddy, president of the Goss Printing Press Co., Chicago, has complained to Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, that his campaign organization had approached him with a "flagrant attempt at political blackmail" in seeking campaign funds.

"In mid-October, A. P. Homer, director of the marine committee of the finance division of the Democratic national committee, Hotel Biltmore, New York City, sent two letters to Mr. Eddy soliciting funds for the campaign," the Republican statement said.

"In the first, Mr. Homer called attention that Gov. Roosevelt, 'while Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was the man who personally saw that your contract was reinstated after its cancellation on Armistice Day,' and then requested Mr. Eddy to send a campaign contribution in the form of a check to F. C. Walker, treasurer of the Democratic national campaign committee.

"On the next day (October 14) Mr. Homer sent a second letter to Mr. Eddy, toning down the first, but at the same time setting forth that 'in view of the friendly relations between Mr. Roosevelt, while Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and your company, I feel sure that you will be glad to send a substantial check to help with his campaign.'

"It was on the basis of this letter

ROOSEVELT CHEERED BY NEW ENGLANDERS

Will Spend Today With His Son in Massachusetts; Ely Meets Him.

Groton, Mass., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Franklin D. Roosevelt followed the beckoning hand of Alfred E. Smith into Massachusetts today to a friendly welcome in half a dozen towns through which he passed to Groton.

The Democratic presidential candidate was met at the State line by Gov. Ely, who placed Smith's name in nomination at the Chicago convention and was a sturdy supporter of the 1928 nominee. The governor and a group of State Democratic leaders accompanied Mr. Roosevelt on the sweep down the Mohawk trail through Williamstown, North Adams, Greenfield, Orange, Athol, Gardner, Fitchburg and Ayer.

At Ayer, in the early evening, the New York Governor made the first talk he had made during the day. A large crowd had gathered in the public square and jammed into the streets.

"I am glad to see you, my friends, again," he said into the microphone of the loud-speakers. "I think I can say my old friends. Many of you were here when I was here 40 years ago. I have been coming to Ayer for a long time. We used to come over here skiing from Groton. On one certain occasion, 30 years ago, I used to teach Sunday school here. It is good to be back."

The governor spoke from the back seat of the open car in which he had ridden since noon. A heavy overcoat was buttoned tightly about his throat and the collar was turned up to shut

Six Wounded in Kentucky As Mountain Feud Flares

Members of 2 Families and 3 Bystanders Are Victims of Gun Battle, While Hundreds Are Imperiled by Bullets at Courthouse in Pineville.

Pineville, Ky., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Two Kentucky mountain families shot out their differences in front of the courthouse here today and sent several hundred persons scurrying for shelter in a fight in which six persons, three of them bystanders, were wounded.

Three of the alleged participants were arrested and a fourth was taken to a hospital after city and county officers broke up the battle.

Ill-feeling between the Lee and McGeorge families, distant relatives, over a recent killing was blamed by authorities for the outbreak.

Stephen Lee, 58, and his 17-year-old son, George, were said by officers to have been on one side, with Elijah McGeorge, 40, and his brother, Martin McGeorge, 21, their opponents. From fifteen to twenty shots from pistols and rifles were fired across a 30-foot wide street during the brief encounter.

The Lee and McGeorge families, who live in the mountains about ten miles from here, came to town today with the usual crowds always on hand for Saturday trading and circuit court sessions.

Clad in overalls and the father carrying a long rifle, the Lees neared the courthouse, witnesses said, when the elder Lee opened fire on the McGeorge brothers.

The McGeorges ducked behind automobiles, returned the fire, and then fled, firing as they ran. A fifth man, not apprehended, was reported to have entered the fray after the first shots were exchanged.

Several hundred people near the courthouse at the time fled into stores, hid behind trees and automobiles, or lay flat on the pavement as bullets whizzed by and smashed against the courthouse, parked automobiles and business houses.

Deputy Sheriff Jim Tom Wagner disarmed Stephen Lee and Police Chief Pearl Osborne ran down the McGeorges. Stephen Lee and the McGeorge brothers were arrested, and George Lee was taken to a hospital.

BUFFALO HEARS SMITH IN PLEA FOR ROOSEVELT

6,000 BRAVE SEVERE STORM TO HEAR HIM

Tells Wildly Cheering Crowd "Handwriting on Wall" Is Across U. S.

Music Hall, Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Alfred E. Smith brought thunderous cheers from a crowd estimated by police at 6,000 as he wound up a campaign speech for the Democratic State ticket by declaring he had found "pretty nearly a united opinion that the hope of this country for relief * * * lies absolutely in the election of Frank Roosevelt."

He made this observation, he explained, on the basis of his campaign tour in the interest of his old political ally, Gov. Roosevelt—the man whom he had opposed at Chicago for the presidential nomination.

"I talked to men who had their hands on the public pulse," he said, "and I found out the people in the East, as well as in every other section, agree that the present Republican administration is a dismal failure.

Recalls 1928 Promises.

"Four years ago they promised us the earth—and they agreed to put a white fence around it for good measure.

"The Republican best minds are not competent. * * * They are not there today.

"I find pretty nearly a united opinion that the hope of this country for relief from present conditions, for a forward-looking, progressive policy to prevent another catastrophe such as we are passing through, lies absolutely in the election of Frank Roosevelt——"

The throng, which had swished through one of the worst rain and wind storms of the season to hear their former governor, roared their approval and cut Mr. Smith short.

When the tumult had died, Democracy's 1928 standard bearer added: "—and in the election of a Democratic Senate and House of Representatives."

Biblical Incident Cited.

Mr. Smith's final words were a reference to the Biblical incident of an ancient king who unwisely ruled his nation, and who saw the "handwriting on the wall."

"That handwriting said, 'You have been tried in the balance and found wanting'," Smith quoted, then added: "That's written in the record today—across the United States."

Smith spoke almost entirely about State issues.

Earlier in the day he had explained this would be his principal speech for Herbert H. Lehman, the man he and Roosevelt fought for in the State Democratic convention, and that he would go back to national issues in his two New York City speeches.

He called the Boston gathering at which he made a ringing appeal for

Woman Shot by Mistake For Chicken Thief Dies

Mrs. Bertha Counts, 28, who was accidentally shot on the night of September 28, on the farm of L. R. Sabine, near Gaithersburg, Md., where she was employed, died last night in Montgomery County General Hospital.

Mrs. Counts was shot by Curby Brent, colored, also employed on the farm, when he mistook her for a chicken thief. Brent was exonerated after an investigation. State's Attorney Stedman Prescott said last night that in view of Mrs. Counts' death he might reopen the case. Mrs. Counts had worked on the Sabine farm for a year. She was from Virginia.

CURTIS RAPS RECORD OF ROOSEVELT FIRM

Says Concern Got Charter in Canada to Speculate in German Marks.

Ashtabula, Ohio, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Vice President Curtis asserted in an address here tonight that Gov. Roosevelt, as president of United European Investors, had the company incorporated in Canada "so he might do speculative business in German money with the United States."

"Perhaps he had more sympathy with speculators than he would care to admit today," the Vice President asserted in his prepared address. "That company did business in German marks, a speculative business, and many investors suffered great less."

Curtis, showing few signs of strain despite his 10,000-mile stumping tour of the last nine weeks, vigorously defended the Republican tariff policy and criticized that of Gov. Roosevelt.

Points to Records.

"Just what shall be done for farm relief is a problem," he said. "That agriculture should be stabilized and brought back to profit and prosperity is admitted. If you voters are to decide which major party is best fitted to solve the problem fairly, you must consider their records.

"I want you to notice the Republican party is on record favoring extension of general Republican principles of tariff protection to our natural resource industries. I challenge any Democrat to show one bill for relief of American farmers which Democrats sponsored in the last Congress and reported out of committee for a vote in the House. They did not report one."

He asserted the Republican party's pledge to revise tariff schedules as economic changes require is agriculture's only salvation in maintaining parity of protection with other industries.

Cancellation of Debts.

"Roosevelt wants to let down bars so foreign countries can repay our cash with their commodities," he continued. We Republicans are against that.

"We will keep up the bars and save the American market for the American producer.

"The Democrats also talk about cancellation of foreign debt. Republicans are opposed to that also. We want the debts paid in cash or commodities we can not produce here."

Vivian Duncan Files Suit To Divorce Nils Asther

Los Angeles, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Listing several alleged acts of cruelty as the reason for her action, Vivian Duncan, member of the Duncan sisters' team of "Toppsy and Eva" fame, today sued Nils Asther, film actor, for a divorce.

Prominent among her complaints was the charge that Asther and his mother always conversed in Swedish so she could not understand what they said. Miss Duncan insisted those conversations constituted extreme cruelty.

Doomed Man Saved By Gov. Roosevelt

"Cock-Eye" Gordon, Character of Underworld, Escapes Electric Chair.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Benjamin "Cock-eye" Gordon, New York underworld character, escaped death in the electric chair on murder charges today when Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt commuted his sentence to life imprisonment.

Gordon, who had escaped the chair nine times on respites, was convicted of slaying Anthony Grisolia during robbery of a Bronx garage, July 28, 1928. His conviction was affirmed by the Court of Appeals.

Roosevelt, in a memorandum, said Gordon's sentence was commuted because of services he rendered the State. He was, the governor said, instrumental in bringing about the arrest and conviction of Jack Zaroff, on charges of slaying Patrolman Maurice O'Brien, in New York County in 1930. The district attorney of New York County recommended the commutation because of Gordon's service in the case.

$1,454,179 Outlay Reported In Republican Campaign

Receipts Total $1,478,791, With Balance of $120,264; Leading Donors Listed; Nutt Says Drive Is Being Financed Successfully.

(Associated Press.)

The Republican national committee yesterday reported it had expended $1,454,179 in the presidential campaign between June 1 and October 26.

The report, filed with South Trimble, Clerk of the House, by J. R. Nutt, of Cleveland, treasurer of the Republican national committee, said gross receipts collected amounted to $1,478,791, of which $289,043 had been collected by the national committee as agent for State committees.

The report said that on October 26 the committee had an unexpended balance of $120,264.

Expenditures of $888,918 by the national committee for administration and other expenses were reported in the period from September 1 to October 26.

Other Expenditures.

Other expenditures included $55,086 for use of congressional committees and $123,500 for State committees. Altogether $1,067,505 was expended from September 1 to October 26, the report said.

Contributions of $100 or more in the period were $1,373,815, making a total to date of $1,442,221, with contributions of less than $100 in the period amounting to $104,976, bringing their total to $112,595.

Total contributions from June 1, the report said, to October 26 amounted to $554,817 and expenditures from September 1 to October 26 were $1,356,548.

The report said several of the large contributors made contributions at various times. Some of the donations included:

Mrs. Edward S. Harkness, $12,000; Andrew M. Stewart, $5,000; Richard A Strong, $5,000; F. G. Coburn, $5,000; George F. Baker, $5,000; Mrs. George F. Baker $5,000; Frederick B., George D., Harold I. and Herbert L. Pratt, $2,500 each, all of New York.

Additional Contributors.

Other contributors were M. K. Nutt, treasurer of the committee, $2,000.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The Republican campaign this year will not cost half as much as that in 1928, J. R. Nutt, treasurer of the party's national committee said today. He did not mention specific figures.

"I think we'll be able to finance the campaign," he said, "but I don't want that statement to discourage anyone from making a contribution. We need all we can get."

Farley Issues Denial.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, said tonight that "neither I nor any member of the (Democratic finance) committee ever gave anyone authority to solicit funds in such a manner" as described in a Republican national committee statement quoting correspondence G. A. Eddy, of Chicago, said he had received from A. P. Homer, of the Democratic finance division.

Farley's statement said:

"I want to state most emphatically that neither A. P. Homer nor anybody else had any authority whatever to write such an absurd letter; and if the letter was issued it was written by Mr. Homer on his own responsibility. No such letter was ever submitted to me, to Treasurer (Frank C.) Walker or any member of the finance committee.

"Neither I nor any member of the committee ever gave anyone authority to solicit funds in such a manner and we roundly condemn it if it was written."

DEMOCRATS' REPEAL PLAN CALLED FATAL

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Stimson, in an address last night at the University club, said the Democratic proposal on prohibition repeal is "fatally defective."

He referred to the platforms of both parties and said:

"It is only when you come to look into the difference of method, by which it is proposed that these aims shall be carried out, that you find a difference as wide as the difference between sham and reality.

"The Democrats propose to repeal the eighteenth amendment entirely and remit the whole subject of liquor control to the situation where it was before that amendment was adopted. They propose to thrust the protection of the dry States solely to the power of the Federal Government to regulate interstate commerce in the same way that it could do so prior to 1919. They propose to prevent the return of the saloon solely by pious requests to the various 48 States not to permit it to return in their separate jurisdictions.

"They do not propose to give the Federal Government any additional power to insure that these two things be done.

"On the other hand, the Republican party proposes that the National Government shall be vested with sufficient constitutional power to accomplish both these ends in case it is necessary. * * *"

The Secretary referred to the difference as "vital," and said he believed "that the Democratic party has chosen the slowest and most difficult way of solving the puzzle of the eighteenth amendment, and the one which will excite the most bitterness, the most opposition, and which will do the most lasting damage to the morale of the American people."

Democrats Reminded "Dollar Day" Is Near

With Democratic "dollar day," set for Wednesday, almost here, E. Roy Lewis, vice chairman of the finance committee of the central Democratic committee, yesterday appealed to contributors not to delay until they could call at headquarters, but to mail their donations to him at the headquarters, 1320 G street northwest.

Many, he pointed out, have called personally at the committee headquarters with their contributions. The response so far, he said, has been gratifying, and has assisted the committee materially in the work it has undertaken in furtherance of the party's success.

Reed Hits G. O. P. Rum Stand at Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, in a campaign address tonight, vigorously assailed the Republican party's attitude toward prohibition.

The Republican platform, he asserted, brings "into the realm of personal ethics and national law a new principle, namely, geographic morals." Under the plan sponsored by the Republican party, he said, "it may be made a crime against national government to drink a glass of beer in Wisconsin, and in Iowa the exercise of a high constitutional right."

Winners in Democratic Pageant Announced

Award of prizes to the winners of the States' pageant, which was held in connection with the Democratic carnival at Georgia and Alaska avenues, was made yesterday following announcement of the winners at the Tivoli Theater.

First prize, consisting of a complete costume and accessories, including a "permanent," went to Miss Naomi Miskill. These prizes were donated by various shops and business firms.

Other winners were the Misses Hazel Bywaters, Rita Redmond, Kitty Wells, Lois Lainhart, Olga Lofgren, Frances Trott and Doris Rosedale.

"New Hoover" Arouses Interest, Hebert Says

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The President was described as the "new Hoover" today by his party's Eastern chairman, Senator Felix Hebert, who said "his fighting mood has aroused the interest of the entire East" in the Chief Executive's visit to New York Monday.

Declaring the interest in the Republican rally at Madison Square Garden Monday night "is unprecedented in recent presidential campaigns," the senator said: "People want to see, as well as hear, the new Hoover that has been revealed to them by the President himself."

Mrs. Roosevelt Leaves Boston to Attend Rites

Boston, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Miss Marguerite Le Hand, Gov. Roosevelt's secretary, left by train tonight for Potsdam, N. Y., where the latter's mother, Mrs. Mary J. Le Hand, will be buried tomorrow. Mrs. Le Hand died at her Somerville home yesterday and Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied Miss Le Hand from Albany to Somerville for local funeral services. Two brothers of Miss Le Hand also left tonight to accompany the body to Potsdam.

Mrs. Roosevelt visited the home of her son, James, in Cambridge, today to see her daughter-in-law, the former Betsy Cushing, and the couple's infant daughter, Sarah Delano Roosevelt.

$292,171 Contributed To Wet Organization

(Associated Press.)

Charles H. Sabin, of New York, treasurer of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, yesterday filed the organization's preelection report with the House clerk.

He listed total receipts from January 1, 1932, to October 24, at $292,171, which includes two loans amounting to $17,000, from the Guaranty Trust Co., New York, Pierre S. Dupont, of Wilmington, contributed a total of $40,500, and Irene Dupont gave 2,000 shares of United States Rubber preferred, the value of which was not stated. Expenditures between September 1 to October 24, were placed at $59,423, with total expenditures from January 1 to October 24, at $297,414.

Associated Charities Routs Hunger From Needy Homes

6 Members of Cates Family Restored to Health and Hope in Drive.

"At the side of every man, woman and child who sits enjoying a substantial Sunday dinner there is a shadow—the shadow of someone who has scarcely a crust of bread to satisfy the pangs of hunger." Thus did Walter S. Ufford, head of Associated Charities, express himself on one phase of the grave emergency confronting the citizens of Washington.

"Anybody who doubts this," added Mr. Ufford, "should visit our agency and hear the stories of those who call for help. Ordinary troubles disappear into thin air before the heartbreaking tragedies which are every-day occurrences for our unemployed."

The story of the Cates family proves this, and it is only one of hundreds—yes, of thousands—of similar cases.

The average boy of 18 is mainly bent on having a good time. He is probably a member of the school basket ball team or perhaps playing half back on his college eleven. Not so Frank Cates, for Frank, by the death of his father six months ago, was made the sole support of his mother, three younger brothers and a 9-year-old sister.

Frank had a job then, in a meat market, but a month later the meat market closed and the family's income stopped abruptly. The boy canvassed the city trying to find more work, but without success. One Saturday night he realized that only $1 remained with which to buy food, and the rent was due Monday.

When the family could not pay the rent, they were forced to move, and the only place they could find was a deserted house on the outskirts of the city. The man who owned the property agreed to allow them to live in it temporarily, so the mother and younger children trudged bravely out to their new home, while Frank hauled their few belongings in a cast-off street cleaner's cart.

The new home was a shelter in name only. The roof leaked, several of the window panes were broken, and boards were out of the floor in many places. It was impossible to keep warm, and the children soon were coughing and sneezing.

With a few odd jobs, Frank managed to buy enough food to keep the family going for several weeks, but the food was so scanty that mother and children showed the effects of lack of proper nourishment. Then the jobs stopped, and there was not a bite of anything to eat in the house.

This child needs the Community Chest. There are many in Washington in need, as she is, of food, clothing, shelter and medical attention. Poverty is more grim in winter.

Only then did the indomitable Frank seek aid from a charitable organization. He went to the Community Chest and was sent directly to Associated Charities. When he approached the worker there, his eyes were as hopeless and disillusioned as an old man's. He was ashamed to be asking for help; all he wanted was work; he was only there because somebody had told him his mother and the children would be given enough to eat, and they hadn't had enough for two months.

Thanks to Associated Charities and their share of the Community Chest funds, the Cates family now has enough to eat and a decent place in which to live. And the children have sufficient clothing so that they can go back to school. Frank is still looking for work, but with hope in his heart, instead of despair. He has found a friend in Washington.

out the autumn chill. A few minutes later his automobile drew up in front of the Parents Home on the grounds of the Groton School for Boys, and his son, John, a tall lad, came racing out to hug the candidate. Franklin, jr., another student at the school, suffered a broken nose in football scrimmage several days ago and is being treated in Boston.

Mr. Roosevelt planned to spend both tonight and tomorrow night at the Parents Home and will leave at 8 a. m. Monday morning for an automobile trip to Portland, Me., returning the same night to speak in Boston.

Joined By Gov. Ely.

The candidate left Albany at about the same time today as did Smith, with whom he had a friendly visit last night at the executive mansion.

Leaving Albany, his automobile caravan swept out into the open country through the Vermont hills. A small crowd had gathered at Pownal, Vt., near the Massachusetts line, to cheer his arrival there.

A few miles farther along, he was joined by Gov. Ely, Joseph A. Maynard, State Democratic chairman, and several other party leaders. From that point onward, the crowds grew larger at each successive town. At Williamstown, a group of Williams College students came out to send up three cheers for the candidate.

At Grenfield, a little later, a drum corps, dressed in brilliant red uniforms, met the caravan as it came into the town, and marched before the candidate's automobile through the main street while the crowd cheered his arrival. Near the center of the town the crowd swarmed thickly about his automobile during a brief stop. Just back of the point where Mr. Roosevelt stopped a huge banner was strung across the street.

Has Hot Dog for Lunch.

"Vote Republican," it said. "Secure your job. Reelect Herbert Hoover. Play safe. Further economic recovery depends on Hoover. Vote the Republican ticket."

Gov. Roosevelt ate a hot dog for lunch at a roadside stand high up in the Berkshire Hills.

After climbing high up into the hills along a road that zigzagged its way up above the valley, the automobiles drew to a stop at a store and restaurant that nestled in a cove.

The candidate was brought a hot dog and coffee which he ate while seated in his automobile chatting with Gov. Ely and Senator Marcus Coolidge, of Massachusetts. A little later the caravan passed through Millers Falls. A football game was in progress but many of the spectators left to line themselves along the roadway to watch the candidate.

"Where's Al?" asked a man in the crowd as the automobile passed. The crowds grew larger as the party moved on. Several of the cities brought out bands and drum corps to march ahead of the candidate's machine. Horns and cowbells sounded among the applause in several places.

Flares Are Lighted.

The caravan slowed at each place and several times came to a halt to allow friends to crowd up to shake hands with the nominee. As the chill New England evening came on, red flares were lighted along the route of his passage through several places. Many children stood in the lines, holding aloft the flaming brands.

One of the largest crowds turned out to see Mr. Roosevelt at Fitchburg. For a mile or more, men and women lined the route of passage and cheered.

In the villages through which he passed men and women clustered on the street corners, and women stood in the yards in front of their neatly painted white houses to wave at him. Children stood in various places to wave flags. Throughout his line of travel through Fitchburg, he was preceded by a boys drum corps, in neat, white-belted uniforms that marched smartly through the principal business district and then aligned themselves along the street to stand stiffly erect until the procession had passed.

SMITH ASKS BUFFALO TO BACK ROOSEVELT

Roosevelt-Garner support on the part of his own 1928 supporters, "the largest political meeting I ever saw in the world."

"I thought I actually was running again myself," he said, and the hall echoed with shouts and cheers.

Applause punctuated Smith's vigorous and extended criticism of Col. William J. Donovan, Lehman's Republican opponent.

Earlier in the day, Mr. Smith said definiately he and Gov. Roosevelt will appear at the same time on the platform at New York City rallies next week.

The standard bearer of four years ago, his advisers said, at the Brooklyn and in Madison Square Garden, will make a final appeal to all his 1928 supporters, throughout the country, to throw their full support behind the ticket headed by the man he vigorously opposed for the 1932 presidential nomination.

The general prediction among the Smith advisers, who traveled through New England and up into New York State with him, was that his Boston speech, his conference with Roosevelt, and his final appearance on the stump alongside the presidential nominee would swing any "doubtful" Eastern States into the Roosevelt-Garner column November 8.

Cutting Declines to Talk For Progressive League

Santa Fe, N. Mex., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—United States Senator Bronson Cutting (Republican), New Mexico, today declined an invitation to make an address under the auspices of the National Progressive League for Franklin D. Roosevelt at Cleveland, Ohio, next week.

The junior senator from New Mexico said other engagements prevented him from accepting the invitation to speak over the radio. Last Wednesday at Denver he announced support of Roosevelt.

Strayer's College Poll Gives Roosevelt Lead

Roosevelt is leading in the race for President on the local business college track, to judge by a poll of students at the Strayer's Business College here, who gave the Democratic leader more than 50 per cent more votes than fell to Hoover.

Two hundred and seventy-one declared for Hoosevelt, 160 for Hoover and 3 for Norman Thomas, the Socialist candidate.

3 MORE ARRESTED IN FLOGGING PROBE

Are Identified by Victims as They Appear Before Florida Jurors.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Identified by flogging victims and witnesses in the anteroom of the grand jury chamber, as participants in the attacks, three additional men were arrested today and taken before the jurors.

Officers said the jury probably would return indictments Monday. Six others arrested previously also were identified by the victims in the police line-up. Six others held as suspects were released. Thirteen victims and eight witnesses reviewed the line-up. The newly identified men were booked as Oscar Bessant, Hugh Laseter and Leslie Nettles.

Those previously held and free under bond are J. C. Godwin, Horace Starling, W. A. Jacking, L. C. Bowers, C. C. Rabb and E. M. Rabb.

New Contract Bridge Rules Start Tuesday

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Millions of people the world over, in the opinion of Charles M. Schwab, will find additional enjoyment in the game of contract under new rules, which will be announced Monday, to take effect Tuesday.

Mr. Schwab is president of the Whist Club of New York, which is promulgating a code in cooperation with the Portland Club of London, the Commission Francaise du Bridge and representatives of all outstanding American bridge organizations.

Heavy Damage Is Done By Michigan Blizzard

Calumet, Mich., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Two miles of telephone poles and wire between Calumet and Houghton lay in a twisted mass today following a 12-inch snowfall, driven by a 52-mile wind last night.

Electric power line poles were snapped and trees blown down over a wide area. The wet, heavy snow came without warning, overwhelming the highway department and halting traffic.

TARIFF IMPORTANCE IS UPHELD BY HURLEY

Kansas City Rally Is Told Republican Party Is Farmers' Friend.

Kansas City, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Criticizing campaign utterances of the Democratic presidential nominee, Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War, stressed what he termed the "utmost importance of the tariff issue in this Western area" at a Republican rally here tonight.

While giving assurance of adequate protection for the products of agriculture, the Republican platform has extended its tariff principles to include natural resources, the speaker asserted. He pointed to some measure of increased protection recently for natural resources through "new duties on oil, copper, coal and lumber."

Declaring the Republican party proposes to reserve the domestic market "to our farmers," Secretary Hurley declared "except for the present tariff it would be possible today to sell foreign pork, lamb and beef products, butter, beans and wool in this country at prices from 25 to 50 per cent, below even the present low prices. Our corn and wheat would be further depressed by imports from the Argentine."

Departing from the tariff, the speaker asserted President Hoover is convinced provisions of the agricultural marketing act, under which price stabilization operations were conducted, should be repealed.

"He will so recommend to Congress together with other revisions of that act, which the experience of the past few years has shown to be desirable."

Assemblage of Masons To Hear Bishop Friday

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will be the principal speaker at the celebration of the 118th anniversary of the initiation of George Washington into Masonry, the eighteenth anniversary of the Washington Centennial Lodge No. 14, F. A. A. M. and the annual ladies' night of the lodge at the Willard Hotel Friday night.

A host of distinguished persons, including members of the Diplomatic Corps, in Washington, are expected to attend. Following the main program, there will be dancing until 1 a. m. Local talent will provide entertainment.

Federal Bridge League Starts With 20 Teams

The Federal News, weekly publication of the National Federation of Federal Employes, has organized a Federal Bridge League, the first of its kind in Washington.

The league will operate like a baseball organization, with approximately twenty teams from various Government bureaus, seeking pennants in the contract and auction sections. The teams will meet each Tuesday, beginning November 1.

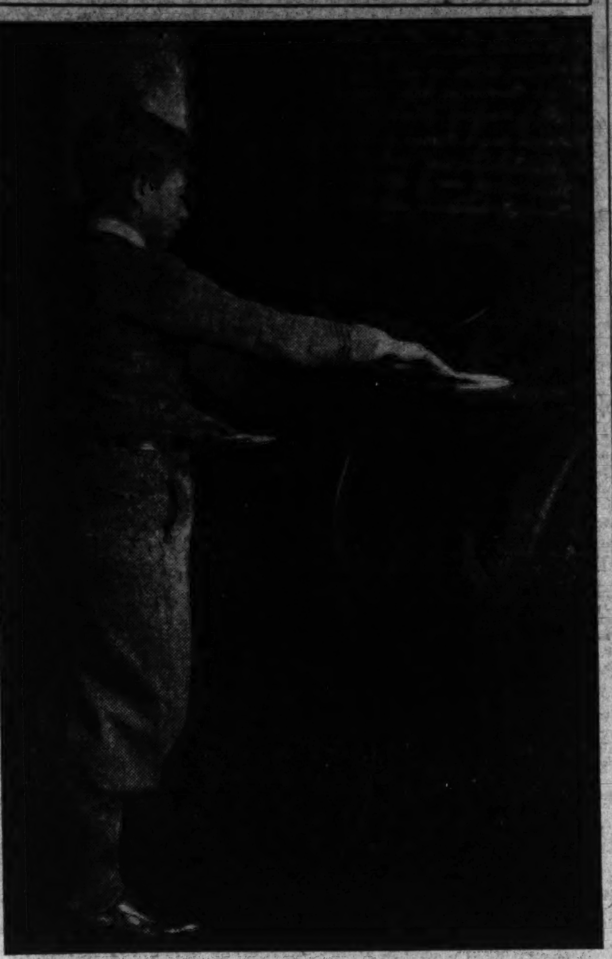
PREPARE FOR MRS. HOOVER'S VISIT



Bachrach.

Mrs. Hoover has accepted an invitation to plant a tree in observance of the fifth anniversary of the opening of the Gordon Junior High School. All of the work incident to receiving their honored guest was done by the students themselves. In the picture is Jackson Mallory printing the invitations. Lacking money to buy flowers for Mrs. Hoover, the boys of the school made her a fine brass tray and the girls will present her with a comic doll which they made. A stand for the exercises was built by the boys in the manual training shop.

MORE MARYLAND AID FOR COUNTIES ASKED

Movement Crystallizes at Eastern and Western Shore Conferences.

Demands, frequently heard since the depression set in, that the State of Maryland contribute more generously, have crystallized recently with conferences of county commissioners on the Eastern and Western Shores of the State.

Several weeks ago the Eastern Shore conference was held and specific demands were made. Last week the Western Shore followed suit, in a conference held at Frederick on Friday, when two of the Eastern Shore resolutions were adopted. The two sections will make plans to work together at a meeting of commisisons from both areas, which will be held in Annapolis the third week in November.

It appears from this that loud demands for a diversion of State funds to the counties will be made on the Legislature when it meets in January. The county commissioners, who have lived for two years with complaints about high county taxes, will be behind the pressure, while all the forces of the State government will be arrayed against any change.

Complication for State.

Increased State aid will mean that county taxes can be lowered, with the credit going to the boards of commissioners who set the tax rate. And the county commissioners and the delegates to the Legislature, be it remembered, live close together when the Legislature is not in session, and know one another by their first names.

On the other hand, money to run the counties must come from somewhere, and to throw the burden on the State would mean an increase in the State tax rate. The State would be blamed for this, and furthermore, State officials are very proud of their tax rate, which is the lowest since the war. They can't see why they should change the present system and take the blame for raising taxes, while the county commissioners get credit for lowering the county levy. So their opposition will be determined.

The exact means of changing the present system of State aid, particularly in the school set-up, is highly complex. Briefly, if a county has a school tax of 67 cents per $100, but doesn't realize enough from it to keep the schools up to the State standard, the State will give enough to keep them up. The Eastern Shore has proposed that the 67 cent figure be reduced by from 15 to 30 cents. This would mean that the total county tax would be reduced by this much, at the same time increasing the State aid.

Upkeep of County Roads.

For the roads, the commissioners ask that a part of the gasoline tax be paid back to the counties for the upkeep of county roads. This request is based on the statement that the system of State roads is nearly complete, and that little further State construction needs to be made. Less than all of the tax receipts will be sufficient to keep up present roads and build what few new ones are needed, it is said, and this will mean that the present county road tax, of from 15 to 25 cents, may be reduced.

These two resolutions were those adopted by the Western Shore commissioners, who took no action on other suggestions made by those in the eastern part of the State. These included a cut in all State salaries over $1,000 a year and the elimination of pensions for elected officers. They may be included in the program made up at the Annapolis meeting.

But at any rate, it seems there will be pressure exerted on the road and schools front when the Legislature comes to Annapolis next year.

Eagle Scouts Plan Nov. 11 Observance

Will Honor Unknown's Tomb and Other Arlington Graves.

A group of Eagle Scouts, representing the troops of the District of Columbia Council, will participate in an Armistice Day ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier on the morning of Saturday, November 12. "Taps" will be sounded and a wreath will be placed on the tomb on behalf of more than 1,000,000 Scouts of America.

Following the service at the tomb, Scouts will proceed to the grave of the late vice president of the District of Columbia Boy Scouts of America, Brig. Gen. Lloyd M. Brett, where "Taps" will be sounded. The ceremony will also include the sounding of "Taps" at the graves of William Howard Taft, late honorary president of the Boy Scouts of America, and past Scouts, Lieut. Edward Comegys, Lieut. Maurice Snyder and Sergt. Lawrence Azbell.

Yaden Again Heads Community Center

Is Reelected President at Meeting of Council; Recreation Indorsed.

The Community Center Council of the District of Columbia, at a recent meeting, unanimously reelected its three officers, J. G. Yaden, Miss Edith Grosvenor and Mrs. Gabrielle Pelham, to the offices of president, vice president and secretary, respectively, and officially went on record as indorsing many of the extensive programs of community recreation in the city centers.

In a report of the work of the Community Center Department during the past summer, Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peoples, director of the department, gave as the organization's outstanding achievements the Fourth of July celebration, said to have been the most successful held here in many years, and the summer festival programs at the Sylvan Theater, given in cooperation with the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks.

The Community Center Department is comprised of sixteen community centers, located in 32 public school buildings. It is the plan of these centers to provide as much recreation as possible at very low cost to the individual.

Wilson's Daughter To Address Clubs

Ritchie and Tydings Also on Campaign Program With Mrs. Sayre.

Mrs. Jessie Wilson Sayer, daughter of Woodrow Wilson, wartime President, will be the princippal speaker at a luncheon of the United Democratic Women's Club of Maryland and the City-Wide Women's Democratic Club of Baltimore, which will be held Thursday at the Hotel Rennert in Baltimore.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and Senator Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, also will talk. Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee, national committeewoman from Maryland, will preside at the luncheon. Among the guests of honor will be the Democratic congressional candidates for Maryland; Mrs. Frank Phillips, president of the City-Wide Club, and Mrs. C. E. Roach, of Montgomery County, chairman of the U. D. W. C.

The luncheon will be a feature of the annual convention of the United Democratic Women's Clubs of Maryland, and a business session of this group will precede the luncheon. Officers will be elected at the business meeting. The executive board of the State organization will meet Wednesday night to discuss final plans for the affair.

Bonus Army Camp Site Clearing Bids Opened

The opening bids for the clearing, grading, fencing and inclosing the site of a former bonus army encampment yesterday by the Treasury Department furthered the plans of the Federal Government of making the section bounded by Pennsylvania and Missouri avenues, Third and Sixth streets northwest into a park area. The Hechinger Engineering Co., of this city, was the low bidder, at a price of $3,333.

It was in this section the Metropolitan Police battled with the bonus army, and where the Federal troops used tear gas to rout the invaders. Part of the area, near Sixth street, will be used for the extension of Constitution avenue into Pennsylvania avenue.

Growing Need of Family Aid Reported by Bureau

The Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor yesterday announced that the increasing number of families needing relief has been the cause of a rapidly mounting expenditure by public and private agencies for relief grants and also for costs of administration for such service.

Statistics from eight large industrial and farm areas, according to the report, show an expenditure of $2,414,388 for relief in 1930 and $5,555,999 in 1931, an increase of 130 per cent. The increase of administration costs during this period was 67 per cent.

Xaverians' Play to Be Thursday.

The Xaverian Players will present "The Whole Town's Talking," the Emerson-Loos comedy, at Immaculate Conception Hall Thursday night. Receipts will go for the benefit of the poor and unemployed.

FOX HUNTERS START EVENTS TOMORROW

Country Around Rockville to Be Scene of Runs by National Society.

Fox hunters from far and wide, blooded hounds and horses from the Carolinas to New England, are in Washington ready for a week of sport and competition. The occasion is the thirty-ninth annual field trials, hound show and horse show of the National Foxhunters Association.

For a week Reynard will be sought through the fields and hedge rows in the country surrounding Rockville. Headquarters for the hunters will be at the Wardman Park Hotel, while dogs and mounts will be kept at the Rockville fair grounds.

To Begin at Dawn.

At daybreak tomorrow the first cast will be made. For three successive mornings the Twelfth Chase Futurity hound trials will be run. There will be a first prize of $1,000.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday mornings will be devoted to the running of the all-age trials of the national association. The winning hound of this competition will be proclaimed the 1932 national field trial champion.

The horse show at the fair grounds Tuesday afternoon is expected to draw hundreds of persons. Some of the finest hunters in this section will compete in the eight scheduled events.

Hunt Ball Tuesday Night.

A hunt ball will be held on Tuesday night at the Wardman Park Hotel. The national foxhunters bench show will be held at the hotel Friday night. It will be opened to hounds that have run in the field trials.

William Carl Hunt, of 3405 Rodman street northwest, is president of the national association. Herman C. Page, of Newark, N. J., will be master of hounds.

Mrs. Mitchell Carroll To Lecture on France

A new series of illustrated lectures on France will be given by Mrs. Mitchell Carroll, in the auditorium of the Arts Club, 2017 I street northwest, Friday afternoons during November.

The subjects selected for this series are "In and Out of Paris," "Down the Valley of the Rhone," "Famous Places of Southern France" and "Beautiful and Historic Coasts of France."

Holy Comforter Club To Have Tacky Party

The Wheeler Club of Holy Comforter Church will hold a masquerade and old-fashioned "tacky" party in the school hall at 8 p. m. tomorrow night. There will be games, contests and dancing. Al Neft is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Hard of Hearing Plan Halloween

Washington League to Give Function Tomorrow Night; Picture Thursday.

A Halloween party will be given tomorrow night by the Washington League for the Hard of Hearing, at the league's club rooms, 826 Connecticut avenue northwest. Guests are requested to come in bonnets and shawls.

A talking picture, Maurice Chevalier in "The Big Pond," will be presented by the league, Thursday night at 8 o'clock, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth near Harvard street northwest. The hall will be wired for group hearing aid for the benefit of the hard of hearing.

Preceding the show, a turkey supper will be served at 6:30 p. m. in the hall.

Bible Class to Receive American Flag Today

An American flag will be presented to the Junior Bible Class of the Brookland Baptist Church, Sixth and Monroe streets northeast, at 9:45 a. m. today by the Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent of the Daughters of Union Veterans. The presentation will be made by Mrs. Genevieve Craig, patriotic instructor of the tent.

A committee of the tent will meet tomorrow with the Sons of Union Veterans and its auxiliary to plan the annual veterans' night banquet on November 19, the anniversary of Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Prof. Robinson to Make Howard Honor Address

Prof. Hilyard Robinson, who recently returned from a year's study and observation in Europe, will deliver the annual address at the celebration of honor day at Howard University, Wednesday noon.

Students who have maintained a grade of "A" in all subjects during the past school year will be presented by the president of the university, and the ranking freshman student of last year will be awarded the scholarship cup donated by the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity.

Jewish Center Will Honor P. Himmelfarb

Paul Himmelfarb, who recently returned from a trip through the Holy Land, will be the guest of honor at the celebration of the fifteenth anniversary of the Balfour Declaration to be held in the Jewish Community Center Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Prior to the celebration there will be a short business meeting, when officers of the District Zionist organization will be elected for the coming year.

Mrs. Mims Heads Legion Unit.

Appointment of Mrs. Joseph H. Mims, of 1724 Sixteenth street southeast, as division chairman of community service and unit activities of the American Legion Auxiliary for the eastern district, was learned yesterday.

PACKARD

To Present and Future Patrons of the Packard Washington Motor Car Company:

There will appear October 31st an announcement that this Company will add to the distribution of its complete line of Packard cars those of another prominent maker.

These cars splendidly supplement our Packard line, beginning at the lowest price in the six-cylinder field up to several hundred dollars below the most moderate priced Packard.

For fifteen years these cars were distributed in Washington by the same representative whose recent retirement made possible our taking over their distribution.

By no means the least of the important factors of this arrangement is that it will enable us to give added employment and to make full use of our exceptional facilities and equipment.

Service provisions for the new line are separate both as to location and personnel, thus avoiding any confusion or interference with the standard of service to which our Packard clientele is accustomed.

To date this year a greater number of Packards have been purchased from us than in the same period last year. Our Packard ownership is now above twenty-nine hundred. To our knowledge a large number of these have, in the past, found it necessary in purchasing additional cars of lesser size and cost than Packard to do so elsewhere.

The quality of the new cars, the policies and ideals of the manufacturer, are so in keeping with those of Packard—in which our personnel has been trained for ten or more years—as to now make possible our filling, to the satisfaction of the motoring public, their every automobile need, thus becoming an organization which, under one roof, may supply and service cars of the entire price range.

In assuming the additional distributorship, our Company takes over a valuable account—a car ownership of over nine thousand—and a successful dealer organization in the surrounding counties. With our opportunities thus substantially broadened, our Packard patrons may anticipate from us even improved attention to their requirements.

President,
Packard Washington Motor Car Company.

FARLEY SEES PEAK REACHED BY PARTY

Nation Has Made Mind Up to Vote for Roosevelt, He Declares.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—James A. Farley, the party's chairman, said today "the Democratic chances are at the peak."

The country, Farley said, "has made up its mind to vote for Roosevelt. There is not one State in the Union of which the Republicans can be sure. There is no possible combination of States that could give Mr. Hoover a majority in the Electoral College."

Commenting briefly on the financing of the campaign, Farley said sufficient funds have been contributed to make unnecessary any curtailment of the Democratic activities.

Of the President's address in Indianapolis last night, the national committee chairman said:

"Mr. Hoover made it quite clear that so far as he is concerned, he has great fears as to what will happen to this country if Mr. Hoover is not reelected. It might be news to Mr. Hoover to learn that the Hoover 'superman' myth has long since been exploded and is now given credence only by Mr. Hoover."

Cites G. O. P. Activities.

Since last July, Farley said in amplifying his claims of victory on November 8, "the Republicans have pinned their faith on the hope that a change of sentiment should give their candidate some strength and destroy the majority that was evident for Roosevelt. * * *

"The President's cabinet, almost to a man, have been out on the stump explaining how perfect is Mr. Hoover's program. And when those gentlemen failed they drew their candidate out of his preferred isolation and sent him against his will upon the stump. * * *

"They pulled out the fairy tale of the gold standard scare. They made an inventory of every scheme that the Democratic convention rejected and vainly tried to substitute it in the public mind for the constructive Democratic platform. They pictured our candidate as being both evangel of Bolshevism and the plagiarist of all President Hoover's ideas and policies."

Legge Denies Plant Closing.

The national committee published today a letter written by Alexander Legge, president of the International Harvester Co. and former chairman of the Federal Farm Board, denying a report that his company's plants would close down if Roosevelt were elected.

The letter was written by Legge to the Chicago Tribune, dated October 21, and said in part:

"The letter published on the editorial page of today's Chicago Tribune from a contributor signing himself Charles Tyler is untrue and unjustifiable and is calculated to injure the business of the International Harvester Co.

"There is no truth whatsoever in Mr. Tyler's statement that we called a meeting of Harvester employes in the Moline-Davenport area and informed them that if the Democratic nominee were elected, we planned to close down our factory there for two years * * *

"The Harvester company's plans and programs depend upon economic conditions, not on political conditions. We have firm faith in the future of American agriculture."

TRIP TO NEW YORK PRESIDENT'S NEXT

about the nearby countryside, Mr. Hoover took up again his Friday night's tariff attack.

Of a group at Clarksburg, W. Va., he asked "Whether the fate of your city and your community and your State" would be "safe" in the hands of a party which promises "a reduction in these protective tariffs?"

Many Evidences of Recovery.

"That's the stuff," some one shouted from the crowd.

The President predicted that the Tariff Commission inquiry ordered by him into the differences in costs of production due to depreciated currencies abroad would result in recommendations for higher duties.

"Since the adjournment of the Democratic House of Representatives," he continued, "we have seen every day evidences of constant recovery. You will notice if you look at the business statistics of the country the increasing employment month by month. You will notice the increased car loadings which show again the increasing movement of goods. You will find in every quarter of the country the signs of recovery. * * *

"We have carried the first line of trenches by the reestablishment of confidence in the stability of the United States. And if we can proceed with the battle without change or halt we shall win a victory for the American people that will assure their safety."

Arrives Early on Train.

Despite the almost constant activity of his day Friday, Mr. Hoover rose early yesterday. He appeared on the rear platform of his special train to say "Good morning" to equally early risers during unscheduled stops at Pennsboro and West Union, W. Va. A little later he remarked to another crowd:

"I have come to believe that the people of West Virginia arise earlier in the morning than the citizens of any other State. In order to manage my job I have to get up about 6 o'clock in the morning, but I believe, from the great crowds that welcome me early each morning as I pass through this State, that you rise even earlier than that."

Mr. Hoover also spoke briefly at Grafton—where Senator Hatfield, of West Virginia, left the train after a short ride—at Oakland, Md., and Piedmont and Martinsburg, W. Va.

Arriving at Union Station at 4 p. m., the President and Mrs. Hoover were greeted with a burst of handclapping that began as they passed the engine of their special train and continued as they walked across the concourse to the presidential waiting room.

Mr. Hoover went directly to the executive offices, without pausing in the White House proper, and immediately called into conference with him Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

The President let it be known it was his intention to concentrate last night and much of today on preparation for his political journey tomorrow. He will speak first at Baltimore at 11:30 before going on for speeches at Philadelphia, Newark, N. J., and Madison Square Garden in New York, with several briefer speeches in between. He plans to leave New York at midnight tomorrow returning to the Capital at 7 a. m., Tuesday.

Capital War Hero Is Sent Bravery Medal by France

Edward F. Wilson, Post Employe, Saved Many Wounded Men.

By HOWARD F. WENTWORTH.

Bursting shells, dreaded nights on the battlefields of France and the horrible memory of a 42-hour siege when life itself hung in the balance, echoed back through the years to Edward F. Wilson, a member of The Post composing-room staff, when a medal for bravery awarded by the French government reached him through the mail last week.

It was just fourteen years ago this month—October 16, 1918—that Wilson, as a member of the Thirty-third (or "Prairie") Division, A. E. F., distinguished himself in line of duty.

The night was bitter. Low, hanging clouds spread accross the lonely road, which trailed into the distance beside the Meuse River. Headquarters Company of the 129th Infantry carefully picked their way in the inky darkness. They were returning from the Argonne, foot-sore and weary.

The incessant firing had momentarily ceased, and there was an uncanny stillness. The men plodded on in silence. Suddenly a blinding flash—a terrific roar. Then again—silence.

But not for long. Shrieks of the wounded, moans of the dying, split the air. Then the dread whistle of flying shells. The deafening percussion as they burst on all sides.

A lone figure rose from the small group of those who escaped the first bombardment. Private Ed. Wilson, his body swaying from side to side, dashed madly across a nearby field.

Never heeding the calls of his comrades, Wilson, his lone figure a target in the half light of a breaking dawn, sped on directly into the line of fire.

His one object was to reach the side of those who fell in the first sudden attack. A shell exploded a few yards to his left. He plunged, face down, into a soggy mire.

But to the astonishment of his watching comrades, Wilson again rose, and, with agile movements, succeeded in dragging many wounded men to safety.

For his work Wilson was later cited by the late Maj. Gen. George Bell, jr., then commanding the Thirty-third Division. Gen. Bell told of Wilson's "bravery, gallantry and splendid performance."

Wilson, during his service overseas, took part in twelve engagements. He was gassed, but never once hit by gunfire. A chaplain of his company later wrote his mother, declaring Wilson's return to this country alive "was a miracle."

He spent 42 days with his company holding a defensive line against the enemy, being relieved by French troops only after rescue seemed impossible. His division, during service in France, captured 3,924 prisoners and occupied three dangerous sectors, surrounded on all sides by the enemy.

And now, fourteen years after his name was placed on the honor roll of the "Prairie Division," Wilson has received a fitting reward for his valiant efforts.

First Lady at White House After Memorable Journeys

Brings Home Loads of Flowers Bestowed Upon Her Wherever President Went in Midwest Swing; Mind Pictures of Stirring Scenes.

(Associated Press.)

With enough flowers to decorate the whole White House, gifts from people in a score of towns, and a bushel basket of Maryland apples for good measure, Mrs. Herbert Hoover yesterday came home for a brief Sabbath stay. Tomorrow will see her again in campaign action, bound for New York and a rally in that famous excitement center, Madison Square Garden, after four trips this month into the Midwest.

Coincidental with the arrival of the presidential party here, there came definite reports of a fifth Midwest swing to start shortly after the return from New York. Thus today's Sabbath stillness will give Mrs. Hoover her one brief respite in which to enjoy her flowers and sample her apples, before the clock-around flurry of the last week before November 8.

Always close at her husband's side, Mrs. Hoover has spent a colorful October of personal contact with the voters. In Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Pennsylvania and West Virginia towns she has exchanged pleasantries with the people, smiled into their cameras, beamed over their bouquets.

Des Moines, Cleveland, Detroit and Indianapolis have given her individualistic and characteristic greetings. Vivid have been the memory-pictures they have made for her.

The Iowa capital, with its five-story-high picture of her husband, swung between the two tallest buildings, was the "old home State" mosaic, seen along the route of a 9-mile parade. Not the famous corn song, but the reiterated strains of the wartime "Long, Long, Trail" set the pace for double files of marching legionnaires.

Cleveland was a moonlit city, with a great illuminated tower in its heart, and four crowd-filled auditoriums to be successively visited.

Noisy was Detroit, first with full-throated "boos" from crowds near the station bearing banners marked "Workers Ex-Service Men's League," and later with a prolonged ovation at the Auditorium.

That proud civic center of Indianapolis, where stands the tall soldier's monument was a confetti and serpentine swirl. This was the scene which brought the President to his feet in his open car, and set Mrs. Hoover to waving enthusiastically.

"FLAGRANT BLACKMAIL EFFORT" IS CHARGED TO DEMOCRATS

that Mr. Eddy wrote to Gov. Roosevelt expressing his amazement and outrage at the 'flagrant attempt at political blackmail,' and adding that 'If your past services in a minor governmental capacity are now being made the basis for financial levies in connection with your aspiration for the Presidency, I shudder to think what may be condoned in the future if you are successful.'"

The statement went on to quote the following letter which it said was from Eddy to Gov. Roosevelt:

"Dr. Mr. Roosevelt:

"Mr. A. P. Homer, of your campaign headquarters, has written me as follows:

"'Dear Mr. Eddy—Referring to our conversation of the day before yesterday, in view of the friendly relations between Mr. Roosevelt while Assistant Secretary of the Navy and your company, I feel sure that you will be glad to send a substantial check to help with his campaign. Will you be good enough to have the check made by an individual, payable to F. C. Walker, treasurer, and forwarded to me in the inclosed envelope as promptly as possible.

"'Thanking you for your assurances of good will, I am

"'Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) "'A. P. HOMER.'

Amazed and Outraged.

"I am amazed and outraged by this flagrant attempt at political blackmail, and am loath to believe that it could have been made with your sanction. At the same time, however, the information upon which the demand upon me for funds is made apparently must have come from you. I do not suppose that I am the only one upon whom similar pressure has been exerted, and certainly if your past services in a minor governmental capacity are now being made the basis for financial levies in connection with your aspiration for the Presidency, I shudder to think what may be condoned in the future if you are successful."

Next, the Republican statement contained a communication which it described as "Mr. Homer's original letter to Mr. Eddy." It follows:

"Dear Mr. Eddy: Referring to our telephone conversation, Gov. Roosevelt, while Assistant Secretary of the Navy, was the man who personally saw that your contract was reinstated after its cancellation on Armistice Day. He is, as you well know, interested in naval affairs, and realizes thoroughly the necessity of naval forces. I am writing to ask you if you will be so good as to send a check made out to F. C. Walker, treasurer, in the enclosed envelope at your earliest convenience. We are conducting as economical a campaign as possible, but you realize that in order that Mr. Roosevelt's speeches and various pieces of campaign literature can be sent where they will do the most good, it takes a great deal of money, and we are asking all of our friends to contribute liberally."

"Crudeness" Detected.

Referring to the letter just quoted, the Republican statement said "apparently some one in the Democratic headquarters saw a copy of this letter after it had been mailed and decided that it was too crude," adding:

"A substitute letter was written, signed by Mr. Homer and sent to Mr. Eddy. This substitute is the letter which Mr. Eddy quotes in his letter to Gov. Roosevelt."

The statement concluded with a recital of the history of the Goss Printing Co.'s dealings with the Navy Department. Department records, it showed, showed two contracts for gun-mounts totaling $5,025,000 and signed for the Navy by "F. D. Roosevelt" as "Acting Secretary."

Navy correspondence files show, the statement said, that "On April 26, 1918, Mr. Roosevelt, still Acting Secretary of the Navy, sent a letter remitting interest on $200,000 which had been advanced "to the Goss Co. in connection with one of the contracts."

CRIME PREVENTION BUREAU IS REDUCED

manding the Third Precinct, was transferred to the Fourth Precinct, and Capt. J. E. Bobo, now commanding the latter precinct, was assigned to administrative headquarters.

Maj. Brown also announced that Inspector James F. Beckett, now assigned to headquarters, would act as relief inspector at times when Inspectors O. T. Davis, Albert F. Headley and Thaddeus R. Bean are detached from their respective commands of the three inspection districts.

The Crime Prevention Bureau, which now numbers sixteen men, will be immediately reduced by three men, Maj. Brown said, and it is understood Inspector Burke will cut this down to eight.

Activities of the Crime Prevention Bureau, hitherto confined in the main to vice suppression work, will dovetail with the general routine of the Detective Bureau, it was learned. All the changes are effective Tuesday.

LABOR GROUP PLANS WET DRIVE IN STATES

Woll Tells of Program to Render Change in Volstead Act Effective.

(Associated Press.)

Matthew Woll, chairman of labor's national committee for modification of the Volstead act, yesterday announced a drive to change prohibitory State laws to permit the sale of beer immediately, if and when Congress modifies the Volstead law. Woll's organization operates under the instructions of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

"We are so confident of the impending success of our campaign (for modification)," said Woll, "that we have set in motion a plan to meet the situation in States.

"We are consulting with attorneys and with friendly and cooperating organizations for the purpose of immediately offering to our members in the various States drafts of proposed legislation to meet each case. This proposed legislation will have the support of every organization working for modification of the Volstead act."

Six States Without Restriction.

Pending draft of such bills, Woll distributed to all members of his committee an analysis of the legal situation in regard to beer in each State. During the coming week a report analyzing the situation expected to obtain in the coming short session of the old Congress and in the first session of the new, will be issued.

The situation of the 48 States in regard to prohibition was analyzed by Woll as follows:

Six—Maryland, New York, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Montana and Nevada—have no restriction on liquor production and could take immediate advantage of any Volstead law change.

Seven others—Connecticut, Louisiana, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Minnesota and California—already provides by law for accepting the definition of intoxicating beverage which may be adopted by Congress. The Supreme Court of Missouri held this provision would constitute unwarranted delegation of legislative power to Congress, so, Woll said, from the legal standpoint there is some doubt about the matter. Otherwise, he said the States "already have their houses in order for the beer modification of the Volstead act."

State Referenda on Repeal.

He said referenda on repeal of State enforcement acts will be held in November in California, New Jersey, Oregon, Washington, Louisiana and Michigan. Illinois in the past voted by referendum to repeal its dry law, but the ensuing repeal action by the Legislature was vetoed by the governor. He listed eighteen States as having constitutional prohibition: Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, North Dakota, Utah, West Virginia and Wyoming. Of these Wyoming will have a November referendum on repeal of the eighteenth amendment, while Arizona, Colorado, Michigan, North Dakota, Ohio and Oregon, Woll said, have moves under way either for repeal of the eighteenth amendment or for change of their own State constitutional provisions.

Seventeen States, he said, are dry by statute, permitting change by action of their Legislatures: Alabama, Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, South Carolina, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Virginia and Washington. Of these, however, Alabama, Kentucky, Mississippi and Virginia have no session of the Legislature next year.

RITES FOR DR. RINEHART.

Services Held at Family Residence and Burial at Arlington Cemetery.

Funeral services for Dr. Stanley M. Rinehart, prominent physician and husband of Mary Roberts Rinehart, noted novelist, who died Thursday at his home, 2419 Massachusetts avenue, were held yesterday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at his late residence followed by burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

A native of Pittsburgh, Mr. Rinehart first came to Washington ten years ago as director of tubercular work in the Veterans' Bureau. He retired in 1924 and devoted his time to writing articles on medicine.

J. L. Rollins Dies; White House Aid

File-Room Employe Falls Victim to Heart Attack in Office.

Death yesterday claimed J. Lester Rollins, stricken with heart disease in his office in the file room of the White House while he was being taken from the White House to the Naval Hospital in an ambulance. He was dead on arrival at the hospital.

Mr. Rollins, who was 54, had been employed at the White House for more than twenty years, fifteen of them in the file room. He was a native of Virginia, but moved to nearby Maryland more than 30 years ago, when he entered the Government Printing Office. At the time of his death he was living in Berwyn, Md., but had formerly resided in Branchville, where he was prominent in the Citizens Association. He is survived by his widow and one daughter, Geraldine. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Mr. Rollins had been ill for several days, and yesterday became worse at his desk. He was making his way to the dispensary in the basement of the White House when he collapsed. Dr. Joel T. Boone, the President's physician, was absent, and Mr. Rollins was treated by Chief Pharmacists' Mate George H. Fox, who called an ambulance after giving emergency treatment.

MRS. JANE HUGHES RITES.

Funeral Services Will Be Held at St. Joseph's Church Tomorrow.

Funeral services for Mrs. Jane Hughes, a resident of Washington for more than 50 years, who died Thursday at her home, 115 Third street northeast, will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's Church, Second and G streets northeast, followed by interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Widow of Capt. William Hughes, who served throughout the Civil War, Mrs. Hughes first came to Washington from Ireland in 1873. She is survived by six children, nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

HIGH MASON

STANLEY HARRIS RIDINGS.

STANLEY H. RIDINGS FUNERAL TOMORROW

G. P. O. Official's Remains to Be Interred in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Funeral services for Stanley Harris Ridings, prominent Government Printing Office official and Masonic worker, who died Friday night, will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Ninth Street Christian Church, Ninth and D streets northeast, at 2 p. m. Interment will follow in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Ridings, who was 54, was born in Middle Grove, Monroe County, Mo., the son of Dr. Overton Harris and Sallie Wittenberg Harris Ridings. He came to Washington in 1901 to accept a position in the Government Printing Office, where he gained promotion rapidly, serving in many positions, including copy editor, chief of the monotype section and foreman of printing.

Mr. Ridings was honored repeatedly by Masonic groups in which he was active, and held many posts in various branches of the order. At the time of his death he was secretary of Federal Lodge, No. 1, oldest Masonic lodge in the District, and had served as worshipful master in 1920. He was a member of Columbia Chapter, No. 1, R. A. M.; Columbia Commandery, No. 2, Knights Templar; Almas Temple, Shrine; Adoniram Council, No. 2; Trestleboard Club, and of Esther Chapter, No. 5, O. E. S., of which he served as worthy patron in 1927.

For many years secretary of the Missouri State Society, Mr. Ridings was also a member of Columbia Lodge, No. 10, I. O. O. F.; Potomac Council, No. 208, National Union; Camp No. 11464, Modern Woodmen of America, and of the Columbia Typographical Union.

Mr. Ridings was for 27 years a member of the Ninth Street Christian Church, serving for 18 years as its treasurer and member of the official board. He was also a member of Stanton Park Citizens Association and the Sibley Hospital Guild.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jessie May Ridings; one daughter, Mrs. Davita Ridings Thompson, and four brothers, Clifford F., of Hamilton, Mo.; Hugh, of Brookfield, Mo.; Harry, of Wichita, Kans., and Willard, of Fort Worth, Tex.

G. B. Starkweather Funeral Tomorrow

Founded Biogenetic Foundation and Forest Lake Cemetery.

Funeral services for George Briggs Starkweather, author and founder of the Starkweather Biogenetic Foundation, who died yesterday at his home, 1619 Seventeenth street northwest, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at Murray's Chapel, 2007 Nichols avenue southeast, followed by burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Born in Hartford, Conn., Mr. Starkweather came to Washington in 1880 to accept an appointment in the Patent Office. He became interested in aviation and during his experiments on the "box-kite" theory he wrote a book entitled "The Secret of Wings."

In 1895 he founded the Forest Lake Cemetery, now Cedar Hill Cemetery, and spent many years planning and developing Forest Lake. In 1913 he wrote two books expounding his theory on the propagation and dissemination of eugenics and longevity, the book being called "Biogenetic Marvels." Besides his wife he is survived by seven children and fourteen grandchildren.

Turkey Celebrates Anniversary.

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Members of the diplomatic corps, including United States Ambassador Sherril, went to Angora today to attend the celebration of the Turkish republic's ninth anniversary. The chief foreign visitor for the occasion was the Foreign Minister of Persia, Feroughi Khan.

E. F. HILL IS NAMED KIWANIS' GOVERNOR

District Convention Pledges Cooperation in Economic Reconstruction.

The fourteenth annual convention of the Capital Kiwanis District here closed yesterday with selection of Edwin F. Hill, president of the Washington club, as governor of the district. Asa W. Howard, of Roanoke, Va., was renamed secretary-treasurer.

Resolutions pledging help of Kiwanians in economic reconstruction, attendance at Kiwanis training schools, appreciation of the service of Russell Perkinson, international trustee, and thanks to the Washington club for its convention arrangements, were adopted before adjournment.

Mr. Hill succeeds Harry A. Converse, of Harrisonburg, Va., as governor of the district, which comprises Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and Delaware. First entering Kiwanis work at Charles Town, W. Va., Mr. Hill has been active ever since. He transferred to the Washington club in 1925 and is connected with the Potomac Electric Power Co. here.

Prizes for Attendance.

First prize for clubs having 150 or more and showing the largest attendance at the convention, went to the Washington Club; Newport News was the winner in the 100 to 150 class; Petersburg, Va., in the 50 to 100 member class, and the Victoria, Va., club in the division of clubs having less than 50 members.

Park W. T. Loy, Hagerstown, Md., was elected lieutenant governor of the first division, succeeding Jesse C. Oakes, Winchester, Va. The clubs in the first division are Alexandria, Arlington County, Fredericksburg, Manassas, and Winchester, Va., and Cumberland, Frederick and Hagerstown, Md., and Washington, D. C.

In the second division James T. Catlin, jr., Danville, Va., will succeed R. S. Weaver, jr., Victoria, Va., as lieutenant governor.

Other Lieutenant Governors.

The third division will have E. Broaddus Chewning, Roanoke, Va., as lieutenant governor, to succeed F. B. Fitzpatrick, East Radford, Va.

The new lieutenant governor for the fourth division is T. J. Roper, Portsmouth, Va., who will succeed D. N. Frazier, Richmond, Va.

E. I. Carruthers, Charlottesville, Va., was elected lieutenant governor of the fifth division, to succeed George H. Vermilya, Clifton Forge, Va.

In the sixth division C. Walter Cole, Towson, Md., will succeed Joseph F. MacSweeney, Rehoboth Beach, Del., as lieutenant governor.

Donovan Pledges Cut Of Budget, if Elected

Washington Hollow, N. Y., Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Col. William J. Donovan, Republican candidate for governor, told 12,000 persons at a rally today that if elected he would apply "ordinary common sense to wipe out extravagance in government."

"Wild Bill," as he was called on the battlefields of France, spent the day campaigning in the home section of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, whom he criticized for mounting costs of New York's government. After a whirlwind tour of Dutchess County, Donovan attacked the governor's attitude toward farmers.

Record Number Ready To Vote in New York

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The greatest number of voters in the history of New York State—5,349,213—have qualified to vote in the general election November 8, according to an announcement by Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn today.

of controversy last term between Senate and House. The District asked $650,000. Congress allowed $350,00.

There is the matter of $4,000,000 in additional District taxes, voted by the House, but still tied up in the Senate District committee. The committee probably will report out these bills in greatly revised form, but there is some doubt the Senate will enact them.

The fight on the District appropriations bill will center, as usual, around the Federal contribution toward local needs. The Senate, champion of a larger lump sum, is awaiting Bureau of Efficiency recommendations on the House resolution to abolish the old 60-40 organic act.

Some fourteen favorably reported District bills await action on the House calendar, and as many more on the Senate side. Measures pending include the Blaine "blue sky" securities bill, and the Patterson kidnaping bill, which have passed the Senate, as well as measures requiring automobile liability insurance of major traffic offenders, and regulating local bank and trust companies, which have passed the House.

THE MORRIS PLAN

The terms of Morris Plan Loans are simple and practical—it is not necessary to have had an account at this Bank to borrow.

For each $60 borrowed you agree to deposit $5 a month in an account, the proceeds of which may be used to cancel the note when due. Deposits may be made on a weekly, semi-monthly or monthly basis as you prefer.

Amt. of Note	Monthly Deposit For 12 Months
$120	$10
$180	$15
$240	$20
$300	$25
$360	$30
$540	$45
$1,200	$100
$6,000	$500

Loans are passed within a day or two after filing application—with few exceptions.

MORRIS PLAN notes are usually made for 1 year, though they may be given for any period of from 3 to 12 months.

20-YEAR TERM GIVEN IN SWEATBOX DEATH

Convicted Prison Guard in Florida Gets Limit Penalty.

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Twenty years at hard labor—the limit of the law for manslaughter—was the court's answer today as George W. Courson, former prison guard, pleaded for mercy in the death of Arthur Maillefert, strangled to death in a sweat box last June.

At the same time Judge George Couper Gibbs denied Courson a new trial. Bond was fixed at $10,000 pending an appeal, for which 90 days was allowed.

"Your act was so culpable, so negligent, and with such disregard for the life of the deceased," Judge Gibbs told the prisoner, "that while it is with deep regret and sorrow I must now pass sentence, it is now my duty to remand you to the sheriff of Duval County, to be turned over to the proper authority at the State penitentiary, to serve the full term in this cause, twenty years at hard labor."

Courson, a huge figure of 285 pounds, stood apparently unmoved as the sentence was pronounced, swaying slightly from heel to toe and back again as the judge spoke. He sat down with his attorneys while the amount of the appeal bond was argued, and one of his sons came over to pat him on the shoulder.

Previously, State's Attorney Charles Durrance had told the court the "jury has given this defendant every bit of mercy he is entitled to in returning the manslaughter verdict."

Courson and Solomon Higginbotham, another guard, were indicted for first degree murder. The State demanded the death penalty for both, but the jury acquitted Higginbotham and found Courson, acting captain of Sunbeam Camp at the time of the Westfield, N. J., youth's death, guilty only of manslaughter.

London's Jobless In Battling Mood

Idle Planning Mass Meeting Today and Police Fear Rioting.

London, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Where Nelson's column rises in Trafalgar Square thousands of Great Britain's unemployed will gather tomorrow for a mass meting, and the police are prepared for trouble.

There may be some street fighting, as there was last Thursday at Hyde Park. Fifty years ago John Burns, the famous labor leader, precipitated in the square one of the most bitter riots in the memory of old-time Londoners.

Since Thursday's troubles the jobless here have been entirely orderly. Two thousand men, who came into the city in the "hunger march" from many parts of the island, have been sleeping in various institutions, spnding part of their time soliciting funds in the streets.

Today a delegation of two men and a woman appeared at the House of Commons to ask that they be permitted to plead the case of the idle in the house Tuesday. But Parliament was not in session and they were taken over to Prime Minister MacDonald's office, where they left a letter asking his assistance and urging the release of the men who were arrested after the Hyde Park fighting.

Blizzard Victim's Corpse Recovered

Searchers Continue Hunt for Two Companions of Wyoming Youth.

Basin, Wyo., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—From the blizzard-swept Big Horn Mountains a rescue party arrived here today with the body of Dillon McKinnon, 17-year-old Greybull, Wyo., youth, one of three hunters believed to have perished in the storm.

McKinnon was trapped in the rugged mountain region at the same time Fred Demmel, of Sheridan, Wyo., and Dell F. Yoakum, of Columbine, Wyo., disappeared following the first severe storm of the season. A party of 22 men continued their search today for trace of Demmel and Yoakum.

The youth's body was found on the western slope of the Big Horn range by Roy Williams, of Hyattville, a guide, and three Casper hunters. The body was buried under a deep layer of snow. Eight inches of new snow fell over the district yesterday.

Williams said the boy had walked about 11 miles from where he was last seen on the morning of October 17. His gloves were found in his pocket and he had constructed a bed of pine boughs. His shoes were found near the bed.

Striking Miner Accused In Shooting of Woman

McAlester, Okla., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Andy Emory, striking miner, was held tonight under charges of assault with intent to kill after another flare of violence in the McAlester coal district had brought shot wounds to the wife of a nonunion worker.

Mrs. Adam Gularski, whose husband is employed in an Arkansas open shop mine, was peppered with buckshot last night when the Gularski home at Hartshorne was fired upon. She was not injured dangerously. Officers who arrested Emory said they found a recently fired shotgun on the porch of his home.

People Urged to Vote With Brains, Not Feet

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior and college classmate of President Hoover, asserted today the Democratic party is attempting to win its way to office on the basis of an emotional reaction among the voters.

"I think the Democrats are mistaken," he said, "and I think that the people will use their brains, instead of their kicking apparatus. Will the majority sit up and look at the facts, or will they merely go to the polls and vote the depression?"

Economist Blames Governors.

Cleveland, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Dr. William Truant Foster, Newton, Mass., economist, today told the Northeastern Ohio Teachers Association that continuance of the depression was due to the failure of governors of the 48 States to follow President Hoover's advice to put $3,000,000,000 into public works.

CULBERTSON TRAILS IN CONTRACT MATCH

Burnstine Team Leads His in Semifinals of Play for Vanderbilt Cup.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Ely Culbertson's contract forces trailed by 1,120 points at the end of the first half of the semifinals in the Vanderbilt Cup tournament today.

The foursome of P. Hal Sims, however, favored to reach the finals in the lower bracket, had an edge of 1,505 over its opponents.

The tension of the players heightened today as the tournament narrowed down. Culbertson upbraided a waiter for serving glasses of ice water while he was playing a hand, and later had a group of spectators ejected from a balcony above his table because, he said, they "make me nervous."

Finals Postponed.

The other half of Culbertson's quartet, Theodore A. Lightner and Michael T. Gottlieb, were unruffled as they played Richard Frey and Charles Lochridge.

Simms and his team—Willard S. Karn, Waldemar von Zedtwitz and Harold S. Vanderbilt, were matched against Walter Malowan, Julius Barth, H. Huber Boscowitz and Sherman Stearns for the two sessions of 24 boards each today and tonight.

The tournament rules were changed again today to postpone the finals, which had been scheduled for play Sunday. This was at the request of Vanderbilt, donor of the trophy.

There was some opposition to playing the final on Monday, however, and whether it will be played then or on Tuesday will be decided later.

Players Superstitious.

The players, always superstitious, declined to meet the request of Referee Alfred M. Gruenther for a decision until it was determined which of them were to be the finalists.

Astute bidding brought the Malowan team through its quarter-final match by a 2,400 margin. Here is a sample:

NORTH.
S.—K, J, 8, 5.
H.—9, 3.
D.—K, 10, 8, 7, 4, 2.
C.—2.

WEST.	EAST.
S.—9, 7, 6, 2.	S.—A, 4.
H.—10, 8, 7, 6.	H.—K, Q, J, 2.
D.—A, 6, 5, 3.	D.—Q, J, 9.
C.—10.	C.—Q, 9, 8, 5.

SOUTH.
S.—Q, 10, 3.
H.—A, 5, 4.
D.—Blank.
C.—A, K, J, 7, 6, 4, 3.

East and West were vulnerable, North and South were not, and South dealt. Stearns and Boscowitz were North and South.

Sample of Bidding.

Boscowitz bid a Club, West passed; Stearns bid a Diamond and East passed. Boscowitz then saw he could make four Clubs, but decided to see if he could lure his opponents into doubling it. Although blank in Diamonds he bid two no trump.

West passed, Stearns bid three Spades, and East passed. Boscowitz tried again with three no trump. This time, after two passes, East doubled.

Boscowitz called four Clubs. East bid again and doubled.

The strategy gave Boscowitz 510 points when he made the contract, instead of 80, and a top for the board. The Ace of Diamonds was the opening lead.

Wife of Missing Banker Wins $100,000 Verdict

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 9 (A.P.).—Mrs. Emma Norwood won a $100,000 jury verdict today against the Southland Life Insurance Co. on the allegation that her husband, missing seven years, is legally dead.

Suit was brought for collection of $100,000 insurance policy on the life of the husband, Sidney B. Norwood, Cleburne, Tex., banker, who fled in 1921 after an alleged shortage of $1,000,000 in his depository. Answering two questions in the affirmative, the jury held that Norwood is dead and that he died before October 23, 1928, when the policy was said to have lapsed.

19 Bandits Die in Battle With Mexican Soldiers

Mexico City, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Nineteen bandits were killed today in a battle with federal forces near Ocampo, State of Guanajuato, the newspaper Grafico reported.

Gen. Rivas, commander of the federals, was wounded.

Mrs. Shouse Gets Divorce in Kansas

Illness of Her Mother Is Responsible for Quick Action.

Hutchinson, Kans., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Mrs. Marian Shouse, wife of the former chairman of the Democratic national executive committee, today was granted a divorce a few hours after the filing of her petition.

Mrs. Shouse and her daughter Elizabeth testified Shouse abandoned the family July 1, 1931, and since had refused to live with Mrs. Shouse. She testified a property settlement had been agreed upon in Washington.

An emergency was declared to make possible the quick action on Mrs. Shouse's petition. She testified in establishing an emergency, that her mother is a semi-invalid in Washington and needs her services.

BEYOND NOVEMBER.

On several different occasions it has been reported that Gov. Roosevelt would, if elected, call Congress into special session to enact his program of reconstruction. This seems to be a fair implication from Gov. Roosevelt's numerous speeches, yet he has not definitely made his plans known. The country is still anxiously waiting to hear what course would be followed in the event of a Democratic victory.

If Gov. Roosevelt should be elected, it is quite probable that he would carry with him a Democratic majority in both the Senate and House. That would give the Democrats complete control of the Government—excepting the judiciary. Sweeping changes in policy could be anticipated. Democratic criticism has run the whole gamut of Republican policies. It is only logical to assume that those policies would be changed at the earliest possible moment after the Democratic party had obtained control.

Among the vital questions that would confront an extra session under Democratic control would be the tariff, farm relief, taxation, and prohibition. Presumably the Farm Board would be abolished, and its nationwide program of cooperative marketing would be disrupted. Democratic spokesmen have nothing but abuse for the Farm Board. They have not made plain what would be substituted for it, but it is apparent from Gov. Roosevelt's addresses that he contemplates an entirely new and untried program of farm relief.

In the Pittsburgh address Gov. Roosevelt said that the task of balancing the budget would have to be done all over again. This indicates that he would recommend a new tax bill, probably after a Democratic Congress had put into effect the $1,000,000,000 in economies promised in the platform.

It is not known what immediate measures Gov. Roosevelt would recommend to lift the country out of depression. He has partially approved the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, while stating that its methods are wrong. Here again the lack of definite information as to how the governor would supplement the Hoover relief program is a source of worry to business and industry.

Tariff reduction would certainly have to be undertaken in the proposed extra session, if for no other reason to save the faces of those Democrats who have so savagely attacked the Smoot-Hawley act. Regardless of what the outcome of such an undertaking might be, it would certainly be a disturbing influence of the first magnitude, and business would halt, awaiting the outcome.

There is danger, of course, that the demand for beer might take precedence over economic measures in an extra session and thus delay any action on farm relief, the tariff and economy for a year, or maybe two years. During all of that period uncertainty would prevail, and business recovery necessarily would be delayed.

Bonus legislation will certainly be forced to the front, whether or not an extra session is held. At the last session the Patman bonus measure was passed by the Democratic House. That performance may be repeated. Gov. Roosevelt has indicated that he would sign a bonus bill if the status of the Treasury would permit it. With that attitude on the part of the President there would not be much possibility of blocking the bonus in the Senate.

All of these practical problems should be thought through by the public. By all means Gov. Roosevelt ought to assist the public in this effort by making his plans clear. Probably the first two years of the new administration would be required to make the changes of policy that have been outlined. Some of these proposed changes, such as the special tariff concessions, would constitute a sweeping alteration of American economic policy. The whole course of the Government can not be changed without producing far-reaching effects upon industry and business. Less oratory about raising the purchasing power of the farmer and more consideration of these practical issues would greatly aid the public in making an intelligent decision at the polls.

FRAUDULENT MONEY.

In his speech at Indianapolis President Hoover said:

> One of the most important issues of this campaign arises from the fact that the Democratic candidate has not yet disavowed the bill passed by the Democratic House of Representatives, under the leadership of the Democratic candidate for Vice President, to issue $2,300,000,000 of greenback currency—that is, unconvertible paper money. That is money purporting to come from the horn of plenty, but with the death's-head engraved upon it.

Throughout this campaign Gov. Roosevelt has been asked to indorse or disavow the record made by his party in the House of Representatives, and he has failed to respond. It is important that he should take a stand for or against his party's record in the House, for the reason that millions of voters are waiting for his answer.

Tens of thousands of former soldiers believe that if Congress will print pieces of paper and call it money that money will be just as valuable as any other money—that it will be exchangeable for gold. They can not understand why Congress should refuse to print this "money" and distribute it to veterans. Some of the former soldiers have had their suspicions aroused as to the actual value of this proposed paper money, but they count upon spending it before its worthlessness is detected. They do not realize that the issuance of over $2,000,000,000 of bogus money would drive real money into hiding, leaving every one holding worthless stuff which can not be passed off for groceries or anything else.

When one branch of Congress actually commits the financial crime of passing a law to adulterate American money it can not be said that there is no danger to the public. The danger is imminent, because another attempt to create bogus money is about to be made. Congress will convene early in December. The House is still in control of the members who voted for bogus money with which to swindle former soldiers. The same Speaker will preside. Veterans demand this stamped paper and are willing to take their chances in passing it off as money.

President Hoover will veto the bonus bill that carries the provision for bogus money, if the bill should pass both houses of Congress. "Of one thing I will assure the veterans," he said, "and that is when they are paid they will be paid in real money."

Gov. Roosevelt does not do himself justice when he fails or refuses to take a stand alongside President Hoover in defending the integrity of American money. The Democratic platform declares that the integrity of the American dollar shall be preserved, and yet the Democratic House of Representatives votes to destroy that integrity. Gov. Roosevelt can well afford to stand upon the Democratic platform and against the Democratic House. His failure to take a stand raises doubts as to his future intentions, and thus causes many voters to fear that the Seventy-third Congress will vote to palm off bogus money upon the veterans and that Gov. Roosevelt, if he should be President, will not veto the bill. These voters know that veterans would not be the only sufferers from bogus money. The whole public will be defrauded if poisoned money gets into the bloodstream of business that is based upon an honest 100-cent gold dollar.

WORLD WHEAT.

Wheat prices dropped to new low positions last week, sending a fresh wave of discouragement into farming communities. The weighted average price for late October was 51 cents per bushel in the United States. Reports from Liverpool are to the effect that wheat prices there are lower than at any time during the last 340 years.

It is obvious that American farmers can not go on producing wheat at this price. Large carryovers from previous years, unusual crops in European countries, the prospects of larger crops this winter in the southern hemisphere and a reduced demand for wheat due to the depression have driven wheat prices far below the cost of production in this country. Argentina and Australia may be able to continue producing wheat at these prices, but United States farmers can not.

Germany and France are producing just about enough wheat for their own consumption this year. Both protect their wheatgrowers with high tariffs. Consequently, wheat sells in Berlin for about $1.35 per bushel, and in Paris at about $1.15. Italy will have to import a small quantity of wheat. The price in that country is about $1.40 per bushel.

The United States also maintains a substantial tariff on wheat, but it is ineffective at present because farmers in this country produce more wheat than the domestic market can consume. About 17 per cent of the American crop is exported in the form of both wheat and flour, and the price obtained for these exports determines, in a large measure, the price obtainable for the entire crop. At present prices this year's wheat crop will bring about $365,000,000. At current prices in Germany the same crop would bring $962,000,000.

To reduce the domestic wheat crop by 20 per cent would cost farmers about $73,000,000 in loss of volume. But it would raise the price of wheat to at least $1 in the United States and thereby put $206,000,000 into farmers' pockets, even with their reduced acreage. It seems incredible that farmers do not make use of their cooperative associations to bring about a uniform reduction of wheat acreage.

The hope of extending foreign markets for wheat is purely fanciful. Germany, France and Italy pay a premium for wheat so as to encourage their own producers and to enhance their self-sufficiency in case of war. Great Britain prefers to buy wheat in the dominions so as to strengthen the ties of the British commonwealth of nations. Cheap Australian wheat can undersell the American product in the Orient. The argument for extending foreign wheat markets is a delusion and a snare. If any extensive foreign demand should develop, it could be supplied by Argentina and Australia at prices below the cost of production here. It is time for wheatgrowers to face these realities and to take effective steps toward reduction of their crops to the needs of the American market.

EFFICIENT READING.

The reader who plods through literature carefully pronouncing the words to himself is usually unable to grasp the contents as well as the reader who appears to be skimming through the written words rapidly. This conclusion was reached by Prof. William S. Gray, of the University of Chicago, after conducting an extensive investigation among the students at the university. It was discovered that the slowest student read less than two words a second, and the most rapid read more than seven. Thus the rapid reader could cover 63 pages while the slower one read but 18, and in comprehension the rapid reader scored more than three times as high as the slow reader.

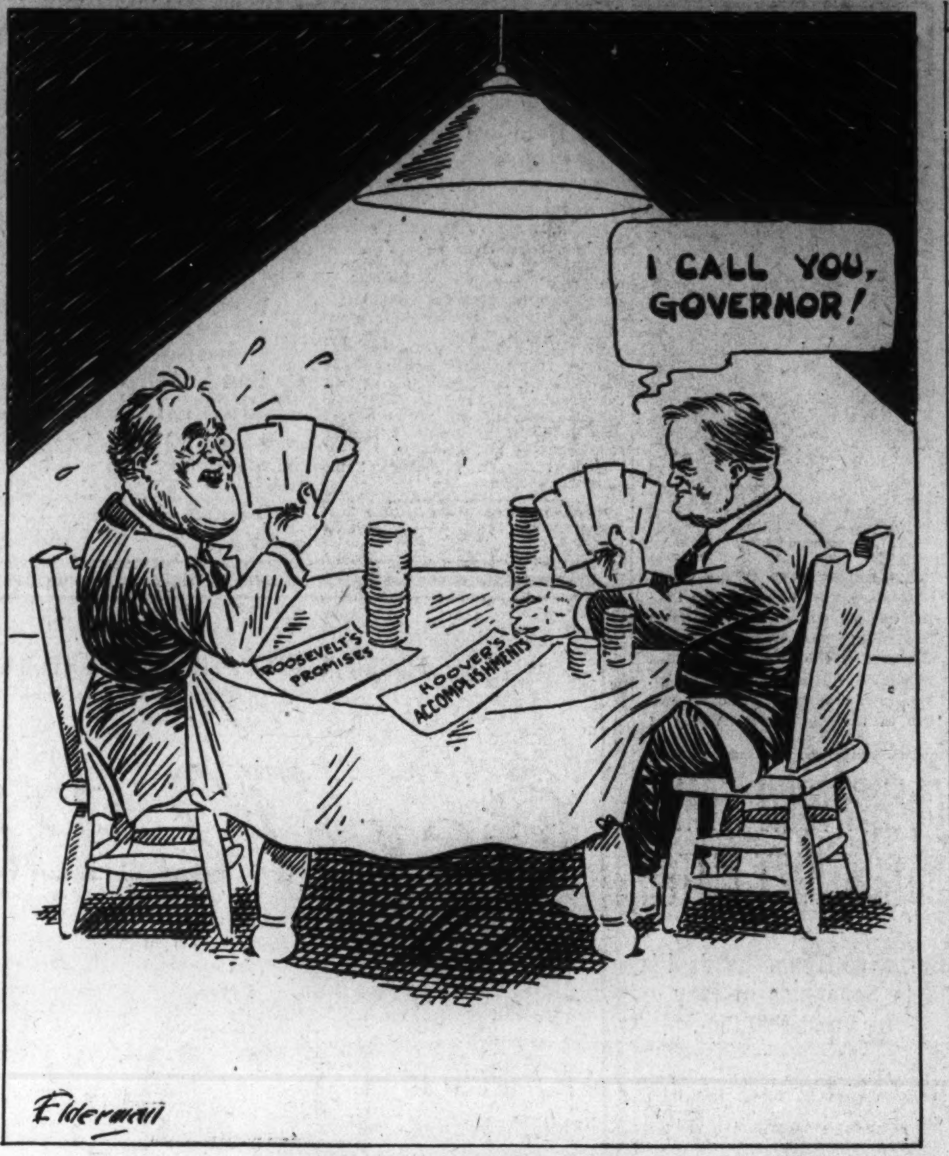
Photographs of the eye movements of the various readers showed that those who scored high on the reading tests usually exhibited fluent habits of recognition and interpretation, while those who scored low usually were slow, with halting, confusing movements characteristic of immature readers. For college students handicapped by this deficiency Prof. Gray advocates a special course in reading, as the lack may retard the student seriously in his studies.

For the many people who have finished school and enjoy reading, the suggestion may prove valuable that a little thought as to the way they read may result in improving their method. It is a habit of many to pronounce the written words mentally when reading. This is essential when reading poetry and some types of prose, but for most kinds of literature words should be taken in groups as a single image.

Hi Johnson did a fairly good job in calling Hoover names, but he is too green a Democrat to hope to rival Jim Reed in classy vituperation.

Mr. Hoover couldn't be supported by Senators Norris, Johnson, Cutting, Blaine and Brookhart and still be right.

Judging by President Hoover's speech at Indianapolis Gov. Roosevelt is not the forgotten man.



And New Shuffles Barred.

POST HASTE

President Hoover seems to have forgotten all those synonyms for a spade.

A new name is needed for the hybrids who support Roosevelt but still want to remain hyphenate Republicans.

Farmer Frank having returned from the West to his Hyde Park mansion, Financier John leaves the East for his Texas farm.

Senator Hi Johnson is mighty regular in his habit of denouncing party regularity. Can't he be a little Progressive, for a change?

Speaking of the cause of the depression, it was just about the most unkindest cut when the President sliced the possible effect of the American tariff to one-eighteenth of world trade.

Not as a kibbitzer, but as one sitting in the game, President Hoover discovers that Gov. Roosevelt's tariff views already require a new shuffle.

Human nature is funny, as witness Al Smith, most deeply stabbed by the bigotry dagger, first to turn it in the wound.

Al Smith goes to Albany to tell the Governor that New England is in the bag, but the pig in that poke may open their eyes in nine days.

Secretary Mills challenged the Democrats to name twenty products on which they would reduce the tariff. Not getting an answer he compromised: "Well, then," he said, "name one;" and still awaits reply.

After six speeches Democrats still wonder how much Al Smith means it when he asks for support of the national ticket.

Hiram Johnson spoke under the auspices of the California Progressive Republican Roosevelt League. The Hash party for short.

Political prognosticators would be in a bad way at this stage of the campaign if they could not declare the trends of sentiment. Do they know how you intrend to vote?

It is a big surprise to the European nations that have set up emergency tariffs to bolster depleted treasuries to learn that their real motive was retaliation against Senator Smoot.

Both parties agree that a strong political drift has set in, but there is some difference of opinion as to which will get the tidal wave and which the snow drift.

How it doth beguile an intelligent electorate to hear fairy stories of the politician who carrieth thousands of them in his vest pocket.

Beer slogan: Let who will write constitutional amendments, we are content to legalize the content.

Even from the far Philippines Teddy Jr. couldn't stand the sight of a fifth-carbon cousin casting a Roosevelt in the role of Sancho Panza on the donkey.

Just think, if today had only happened yesterday the election would all be over day-after-tomorrow.
PAUL HUDSON.

THE "RIGHT" OF CONQUEST

By HERBERT WRIGHT, Professor of International Law, Catholic University of America, in the Commonweal.

The report of the League of Nations commission of inquiry in the Manchurian affair brings to the fore again the remarkable note of January 7, 1932, of the United States Government to China and Japan, in which it virtually refused to recognize the "right" of conquest.

Of course, strictly speaking, there is no "right" of conquest, and no nation which has ever waged a war against a weaker nation with the resultant loss of territory to the latter is likely to admit that it waged a war of conquest. Still, conquests have existed and do exist, no matter under what pretext made or under what title maintained. There is scarcely a nation of modern times which has not added to its territory in some such more or less reprehensible fashion.

Nevertheless, the idea that any nation may acquire territory from another nation without at least nominal compensation or formal consent of its former sovereign and the general approval of the world is growing very unpopular. Not that the thinkers of the ages have not always decried conquest as a just cause of war. St. Augustine denied that conquest could be the proper end of war. Vitoria goes still farther when he says, "Extension of empire is not a just cause of war," adding, as if it were a commonplace, "This is too well known to require proof."

But now governments are beginning to follow the trail blazed by the moralists. It is possible to point out a few landmarks. In January, 1916, a group of jurists of the 21 American republics constituting the American Institute of International Law met at Washington and formulated a document entitled "Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Nations," in which the signatories in their individual capacities agreed that "every nation has the right to territory within defined boundaries" and that "every nation entitled to a right by the law of nations is entitled to have that right respected and protected by all other nations." Of course, this was a private undertaking and therefore was not binding on the governments of the individuals signing.

In 1928 the United States joined with France in the initiation of the so-called Briand-Kellogg pact for the renunication of war. It provided that war be renounced "as an instrument of national policy" and that "the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts, of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means." The pact became formally effective in 1929, and has now been adhered to by 62 nations. Although the word "conquest" is nowhere mentioned in the pact, its repudiation is clearly to be inferred from its very terms. For how can there be room for conquest when war is only to be employed in defense against an actual aggressor, and international difficulties are to be settled only by pacific means, that is, by means which are satisfactory to both sides?

But the United States note of January 7 of this year makes this inference officially and formally a part of its policy. It notified China and Japan that it would not recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which might be brought about by means contrary to the obligations of the Nine-Power Treaty of 1922 and of the Pact of Paris of 1928.

The first article of the former treaty contains the agreement of the nine powers, including Japan, "to respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China." Therefore, any acquisition of Chinese territory by Japan, even if made by a process falling short of technical "war," would violate at least the Nine-Power Treaty. The position of the United States was reiterated by Secretary Stimson in a letter to Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, February 23, 1932. This letter adds the following significant statement:

"If a similar decision should be reached and a similar position taken by the other governments of the world, a caveat will be placed upon such action which, we believe, will effectively bar the legality hereafter of any title or right sought to be obtained by pressure or treaty violation, and which, as has been shown by history in the past, will eventually lead to the restoration to China of rights and titles of which she may have been deprived."

The "similar position" referred to in Secretary Stimson's letter was actually taken March 11, when the action of the United States Government was indorsed by the assembly of the League of Nations at a meeting in which 50 nations were represented. A resolution was adopted unanimously, Japan alone refraining from voting, in which the assembly declared that "it is incumbent upon the members of the League of Nations not to recognize any situation, treaty or agreement which may be brought about by means contrary to the covenant of the League of Nations or to the Pact of Paris."

Herein is embodied almost universal repudiation of the "right" of conquest. As Secretary Stimson stated in an address before the Council of Foreign Relations in New York, August 8, 1932: "When the American Government took the responsibility of sending its note of January 7 last, it was a pioneer. Its own refusal to recognize the fruits of aggression might be of comparatively little moment to an aggressor. But when the entire group of civilized nations took their stand beside the position of the American Government, the situation was revealed in its true sense."

Let us hope that the nations will "stick by their guns," metaphorically speaking, of course, in their efforts to preserve one of the oldest rules, if not the very oldest, governing international relations, "pacta sunt servanda" (treaties must be observed), and to repudiate one of the oldest pseudorights, if not the very oldest, the "right" of conquest.

FINALE.

Now she is still, who never yet was still,
The little feet lie quiet in the bed,
The nimble wit, that no mischance could kill—
They tell us she is dead.

She was no saint if it be sin to love
The world so well that you must drink it deep
To relish life, nor cast your eyes above,
To laugh when saints might weep.

She was no saint, yet to another's plight
Gave kindness—to her own a ready jest;
And I have seen her tired, but till tonight
I never saw her rest.

Strange that the sense of death is incomplete,
Strange that the sharpest sense of all we lose
Comes with the sight of little, quiet feet,
And little empty shoes.

DIOCLETIAN'S PALACE.

The first of the great "show places" of the Dalmatian Riviera is Split (Spalato), a town of 30,000 inhabitants. The city has a history running back to the times of the Roman Empire. It was the favorite residence of the Emperor Diocletian (himself a Dalmatian by birth), who built a magnificent palace there. This palace, with its baths and temples, is one of the most interesting survivals of the Roman period.

The palace is of rectangular form and is 216 meters long and 179 meters wide. It is entered by three gates, on the north by the Golden Gate (Porta Aurea), on the west by the Iron Gate (Porta Ferra) and on the east by the Silver Gate (Porta Argenta). Each of these gates is flanked by two octagonal towers. There was yet another gate on the southern front, leading to the sea, and adorned with 50 columns, part of which is still to be seen. A quadrangular tower defended each corner of the palace.

The most beautiful portion of the building is the open peristyle, still serving as the vestibule of the mausoleum of the great Emperor (now the Cathedral) and to the Temple of Jupiter (now the Baptistery). The classic beauty of these buildings and the decorative architecture of the Porta Aurea, the Loggia and the arcade of the southern facade and, last but not least, the marvelous subterranean constructions excite the admiration, not only of tourists but also of engineers and architects.

Turks' Head Seeking End of Humility

Kemal Would Give Nation a Soul—Descendants of Hittites, He Says.

ISTANBUL, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—While statesmen the world over are toiling to give their nations balanced budgets and balanced trade President Mustapha Kemal of Turkey is throwing himself, heart and mind, into an effort to give his nation a soul.

Turkey, in a sense, lost her soul when she lost her old blind faith in Moslem ideals. Kemal destroyed that faith—now he is creating a new one.

By reconstituting ancient Turkish history and by recreating the Turkish language he is striving to form a proud national consciousness which never existed in the conglomerate Ottoman empire.

It is not jingoism, but a solid pride in racial origins and cultural achievements, which the gazi says he wants.

Just as modern Italy uses emblems of ancient Rome to fan nationalistic pride, so Kemal would dig up the buried past of the mighty Hittites and say to his people, "These are yours."

The president's historical studies are aimed at one goal: to prove that the Turks are descendants of the Hittites and, therefore, have been one of the most potent civilizing factors in world history.

• • • •

HE is trying to give self-pride and the will to succeed to his Anatolians, long bowed down by Moslem fatalism and sultanic neglect. He is trying by the same means to take an historic reef in the melancholy backbone of Turkish youth.

Kemal not only devotes most of his own time to research (he sometimes pores over ancient documents sixteen hours a day), but also has put all the country's leading intellectuals on the same job.

An historical commission, divided into many subcommissions, is working to reconstruct Turkish history. One section is occupied with intellectual and social institutions, another with military art, another with literature, another with music—there is even a subcommission for dancing.

The gazi's revolutionary reform of the Turkish language is the second phase of his national soul-forming process. A huge linguistic congress of 2,500 is trying to make the language 100 per cent Turkish. Arabic words, now forming 50 per cent, and Persian 25 per cent of the current speech of Turkish literates, are to be replaced by archaic Turkish words.

• • • •

ANATOLIAN peasants from the hills and plains, who have never heard the high falutin speech of imperial Istanbul, are being brought to the congress to teach the intellectuals unadulterated straight-from-Adam Turkish speech. That Adam himself was a Turk is one of the Kemalist tenets, for "adam" is the Turkish word for "man."

Kemel will enforce the language reform, just as he enforced the alphabet reform, by iron decrees. Already, the municipality of Dort-Yol is fining citizens who use Arabic and Persian words.

On top of the Hittite idea and the language reform, the gazi is using as a third instrument to shape his cultural ends, a shake-up in the faculty of Turkey's one university in Istanbul. Thirty old professors have been dismissed.

King Reduces Rent

Sandringham, England, Oct. 29. (A.P.).—King George has reduced the rent on some of the land which he lets to the Dersingham Parish council for use as workingmen's gardens. About 60 men now will pay only $3.50 an acre.

Would End People's Humility

THE DIPLOMATIC POUCH

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN

Dollar Princes.

THE stability of the dollar in the midst of monetary revolutions during the past three years has caused a quiet shifting to American currency of the bank accounts of royal families. From the Napoleonic era, royalty have invariably placed their family fortunes in British banks. The solidity of the pound sterling and the fiduciary value of British consols were the standards by which all other valuta were judged. But when Great Britain abandoned the gold standard, the financial advisers of the King of Italy, the former King of Spain, the uncrowned King of Roumania and other lesser monarchs whispered to their royal clients the desirability of dollar accounts.

Financial advisers to great monarchs have in the past, won social positions as well as great wealth whenever they were able to put His Majesty on to a "good thing." The Rothschild greatness flowed from the favor of the Great Elector of Prussia. Ernest Cassel, afterward knighted by King Edward, won his advancement because of his shrewd counsel of financial matters affecting the private income of the House of Windsor. Alexander P. Moore, the late American Ambassador to Spain, who called his most Catholic Majesty, "Chief" was the voice behind the royal bank account. In the midst of the stock market boom, the King of Spain made millions along with every one else because of the wise counsel of the American Ambassador. Switzerland enjoyed with Great Britain the reputation of being the haven of foreign fortunes.

But Swiss financiers have so reduced the interest paid on cash deposits, that changellors of the exchequer wisely leave on deposit there only a small percentage of the royal balance. Other funds they have been transferring to American banks where they draw a higher rate of interest, much to the relief and satisfaction of their crowned possessors. French banks are winning back the confidence of blue-blooded depositors gradually, although the action of the French government under the direction of M. Poincare in devastatingly reducing the French franc to one-fourth of its prewar value, was a mortal blow to those who believed in the faith of the franc.

King Carol of Roumania, keeps deposits on hand in French banks but his account is about evenly divided between the Credit Lyonnais and several American banks. His minister here, Charles A. Davila, now in Roumania, has consistently urged the king to divert more of his holdings to American banks. The richest monarch in the world is King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. The wealth of the House of Savoy is estimated to be considerably in excess of that of the English royal family. Some Indian princes, such as Nizam of Hyderabad, the Gaekwar of Baroda and the Maharajah of Kashmir, the erstwhile famous "Mr. A.," are credited with having great fortunes also but in their case the money lies "frozen" in Indian palaces. King Victor Emmanuel formerly forwarded to his bankers in London a very large percentage of the emoluments granted him by the Italian government every month. These same funds are now deposited in New York banks and carried under various financial accounts in dollars, Swiss francs and Dutch guilder.

Dutch Minister J. H. van Royen has presented to the State Department a picture of his earliest predecessor, the good Pieter Johan van Berckel, who presented his letters of credence to President Washington in 1783. The ministers from the Low Countries stayed in the United States in New York and in Philadelphia until 1788.

Tycoons Struggle.

THE financial aspects of international diplomacy at various stages since the war threaten to overshadow many political developments that occur and throw the financial protagonists into the bold relief hitherto reserved for statesmen. Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, is certainly as much in the popular mind as is Ramsay MacDonald, and Eugene Meyer, his prototype in the Federal Reserve Board, is as well known to the Iowa farmer as is President Hoover.

Underneath the surface of Franco-British politics at the present time a struggle is going on between the two dominating figures in French and British financial life, between Montagu Norman, the mystical dilettante financier of the Bank of England, and the snub-nosed governor of the Bank of France, M. Clement Moret. The differences between the two men have become so bitter that at one point in the recent conversations between Premier Herriot and Prime Minister MacDonald over the details of the economic conference, where Norman and Moret were present, the French premier threatened to leave the room unless Norman was removed from the conference. A compromise was finally achieved, however, when both Moret and Norman were asked to leave the scene to the two statesmen.

The French want Norman to be retired from the banking scene because of his anti-French attitude, and they are bringing into play the powerful influences of French deposits in the British bank. The pound sterling is sinking under the long range assaults of French gold withdrawals, and the weakness of sterling on the exchanges of Paris, Warsaw, Bucharest and wherever French influences controls the money market. Rumor hath it that Norman is retiring.

South African Minister Eric Hendrik Louw and Secretary Eugene Kevin Scallan are relatively better paid now than the British Ambassador and his staff, the Canadian Minister and his or Minister MacWhite and his legation. The reason is that the Union of South Africa is the only one of the British Dominions that has not gone off the gold standard. All other British diplomatic representatives take a 30 per cent reduction in salary due to the fall in value of the British pound. The South African government still pays in gold.

Ambassador De Freyre States Peru-Colombia Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An editorial published in your issue of October 25 contains certain appreciations on the recent controversy between Peru and Colombia, to which I beg leave to reply.

It is alleged that Peru committed an unwarranted aggression, thereby implicating the Peruvian government in the seizure of Leticia by a group of Peruvian civilians. My government has repeatedly insisted that they neither incited nor abetted the seizure of Leticia; they had no previous knowledge that it was being planned and were completely foreign to its execution.

The treaty between Peru and Colombia, signed in 1922 and executed in 1930, has not been in force for ten years, but only for two. The eight years which elapsed between the signature of the treaty and its execution are ample proof of the resistance the treaty met. Its terms were not made known for a long time and only through pressure from high quarters was it approved by Congress, in the midst of public censure, especially from the affected regions.

But Peru does not question the validity of the treaty. The treaty has been accepted as binding, despite its congenital defects. For this reason no protest was lodged against its provisions, so long as it proved to be viable. But when some of these provisions provoked outbreaks, such as the seizure of Leticia, it became evident that the treaty ceased to answer its purpose as an instrument of amity and required being altered in parts.

It is a mistake to refer to the upper Amazon district in Peru as waste land, an uninhabited jungle, a res nullius, the disposal whereof affects merely an abstract geographical line. Since the middle of last century, at the time of the rubber boom, Peruvians flocked to the upper Amazon. Iquitos was founded by Peruvians. Peruvian enterprise, Peruvian brains, Peruvian brawn and Peruvian wealth developed the region. Leticia itself was built by Peruvians and the plans of the small city were laid by a Peruvian engineer. In its adjacent surroundings property was acquired by Peruvians; 800 families made their homes there. A wireless station was erected; commerce and business have always been in the hands of Peruvians. We are dealing, therefore, with a territory thoroughly Peruvian, inhabited by Peruvians, worked and owned by Peruvians. The transference of this territory to a foreign power touches directly the population, alters its nationality, bears upon its interests.

That these Peruvians should have at first endeavored to accommodate themselves to the new rule, speaks in their favor. That they should finally have revolted seemed unavoidable. It is not the first time in history that men have forcibly shattered irksome fetters from abroad and decided to be masters of their own destiny. It certainly would be regrettable that the discredited policy of passing entire sections of one country to another, without the consent of the population, should be revived, and, if revived under unusual circumstances, should be regarded as an immutable act beyond repair.

The uprise at Leticia awakened an echo of sympathy in the whole Peruvian Amazon district. The neighboring countrymen of this handful of denationalized Peruvians, who wished to return to the fold, offered them support and aid. From the Amazon district this wave of sympathy spread throughout the country.

What faced the Peruvian government then, was not a local boundary outbreak, such as frequently occurs, but the determined will of an entire district, seconded by public opinion everywhere in Peru, to have an international pact revised in accordance with what the settlers deemed to be their rights.

In view of this unmistakable evidence that the treaty of 1922 ceased to be wholly applicable, the Peruvian government followed the natural course of inviting the Colombian government to discuss the matter, for the purpose of reaching a common ground for compromise. The treaty has not been repudiated, but modifications within the treaty by mutual agreement became so patently necessary that Peru strove to persuade Colombia to descend from the realms of doctrinism to the rougher but more solid ground of reality.

Either the high contracting parties, in the spirit of the times, seek to compose their differences by reasonable and reciprocal concessions, or they resort to cutting the Gordian knot.

Would any one suggest that it is wise to obtain by force a solution to the controversy, when other and better means are available? Would any one maintain that it is fair to impose upon the population of a territory a rule they reject? Does it sound good sense to pretend to suppress the symptoms of an ailment and leave the root of the evil untouched? Is coercion a lasting remedy and does it not imply persistent repression with the constant danger of revolt?

Peru does not claim to press her views. She merely suggests that the cause of this trouble should be looked into, through impartial agencies constituted for this purpose, so as to establish an equitable and enduring understanding between both countries. This, I venture to believe, is neither unreasonable nor beyond the compass of human power to attain.

M. DE FREYRE Y SANTANDER,
Ambassador of Peru.
Washington, October 26.

A CAMPAIGN LOG

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN

ONE of the warmest economic debates in American history now is rising to a throbbing crescendo with two violently conflicting explanatons of last winter's money panic projected in sharp detail. The Republicans declare that the collapse of banking and credit in central Europe in the spring of 1931 set in motion a long train of panicky reactions which culminated in England's abandonment of gold in September. From this point the disaster swept across the Atlantic to America.

This sequence, Gov. Roosevelt has characterized repeatedly as an "alibi" calculated to hide the consequences of Republican economic policies. The truth, he adds, is that the world panic moved from Wall street in 1929 to Europe; that the American tariff act of 1930 completed the job of wrecking world trade and finance; that the 1931 experience was "the inevitable harvest of Republican misrule."

The final judgment of the electorate as between these two pictures easily may weigh as a decisive factor in the presidential balloting on November 8.

As Europe Sees It.

IN these circumstances, a European view of the history at issue is of timely interest. Does reputable economic opinion in Europe sustain President Hoover or Gov. Roosevelt?

Only ten days ago the annual report of the National Economic Bank of Poland for 1931 was distributed in the American financial community. It describes the world crisis of the last year in these words:

> "While in 1930 the main characteristics of the crisis was a pronounced drop in production and trade, the year 1931 was principally characterized by adverse developments in the realm of money and credit. The events in this domain were, on the one hand, a natural result of the general disappearance of profits in industry, while, on the other, they were brought about by the lack of confidence, caused by the aggravation of the political situation in Europe in the course of the year.
> "The first sign of the approaching financial crisis was the failure of the Austrian Credit-Anstalt in May, 1931, which caused general unrest and the withdrawal of foreign deposits from almost every debtor country. The withdrawal of depositors primarily affected Germany, which depended to a great extent on foreign credits. The initiative of the President of the United States, Mr. Hoover, which resulted in postponement for one year of the payment of war debts and reparations, was unable to delay the disaster, which began on July 30 with the suspension of payment by the Darmstadted & National Bank.
> "The German government, with a view to mastering the situation at any cost, started on that day an energetic policy of exceptional measures which largely encroached on private business life. Owing to the strict interdependence of the international money markets, the financial crisis could not, however, be localized and spread from the debtor to the creditor countries. The suspension of the gold standard by the Bank of England and the drop in the value of the pound sterling by 30 per cent brought about a world panic. Many other countries, particularly those which are closely linked up with Great Britain by economic ties, followed the lead. At the close of December seventeen countries had abandoned the gold standard; the currencies of twelve countries were below parity and in eleven other countries the gold standard and the gold exchange standard, respectively, have only been maintained by means of exchange regulations and restrictions. These 40 countries, involved in the currency crisis, represent more than one-half of the world trade."

• • • •

Effects on World Trade.

AS the money panic spread through Europe like a prairie fire, in June and July, 1931, commercial credits disappeared entirely in several of the principal industrial countries. As bank loans were called, the resultant forced liquidation of sound assets demoralized values in every European market. Hard money went into hiding, commerce and industry slackened almost to the point of utter paralysis. Tracing out the influence of these forces on international trade, the directors' report of the National Economic Bank of Poland continues:

> "As a consequence of these disturbances on the money markets, the crisis in industry and trade grew more intense. On the commodity markets, the decline in prices became more accentuated after England abandoned the gold standard. The position of the grain markets improved slightly, owing to smaller crops, but stocks carried over from previous years prevented a substantial rise in prices. The currency crisis compelled many countries to introduce a system of import quotas and even to prohibit imports altogether, thus exercising a disasterous effect on world trade, which has been reduced to a level not recorded for many decades."

In reviewing the months of the acute crisis recently in his Pittsburgh address, Gov. Roosevelt expressed vigorous disagreement with the National Economic Bank of Poland. "The foreign-cause alibi," he said, "is like ascribing measles to its spot rather than to its characteristic germs. No, we need not look abroad for scapegoats. We had ventured into the economic stratosphere on the wing of Mr. Hoover's novel, radical and unorthodox economic theories of 1928—the complete collapse of which brought the real crash in 1931."

Method of Electing President Expounded by Reader of Post

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the last column on page 13, The Sunday Post of October 23 published an article on our method of electing the President. This interesting article, prepared by the Associated Press, is unfortunately marred by several inaccuracies. The author of the article, it seems, has altogether lost sight of the twelfth amendment to the Constitution.

It is incorrect to say that the present electoral college is "the method by which every President has been formally chosen since George Washington back in 1789," and it is just as inaccurate to say that "the present method was written into that document (the Constitution) by the convention which framed it."

The truth is that the present method of electing the President dates only since the adoption of the twelfth amendment to the Constitution in 1804. Under the original provisions of the Constitution (article II, section 2) the electors voted simply for "two persons" without any indication as to whom they preferred for President, and the person having the greatest number of votes became President, if such number was a majority. Only four presidential elections were held under that indeterminate system, which collapsed utterly in 1800, when the electors for the first time represented two distinct political parties. As a result of the ensuing confusion the twelfth amendment was proposed December 12, 1803. It was declared in force September 25, 1804. Since that time the electors have voted for President and Vice President separately.

Concerning the present method the Associated Press article states correctly that "in each State the electors will vote the second Monday in January, certify their ballots and send them to Washington"—but errs when it says "with each State vote going as a unit for the candidate favored by a majority of the State electors." There is no such thing as unit voting—quite the contrary. The twelfth amendment expressly provides that the electors "shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President and of all persons voted for as Vice President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate."

The vote of a State goes to a candidate as a unit only in case all his electors obtain a plurality; otherwise the votes will be split. It is true that the splits occur but seldom, but they occur, nevertheless. In 1892 Ohio gave 22 votes to Harrison and 1 to Cleveland; Michigan gave 9 votes to Harrison and 5 to Cleveland, and South Dakota gave 1 vote each to Cleveland, Harrison and Weaver. Maryland split its electoral vote in 1904 and 1908; West Virginia in 1916.

Half true and half wrong is the statement concerning the election of the President by the House of Representatives. The Associated Press article says:

"In the event any candidate (sic) lacks a majority when the electoral votes are formally counted in the Senate, the President would be elected by the House of Representatives and the Vice President by the Senate. Only twice has this happened. In those instances, in 1800, the House elected Thomas Jefferson and in 1824 John Quincy Adams."

The truth is that only once, in 1824, no candidate had a majority. The trouble in 1800 was exactly of the opposite kind; there were two candidates, Jefferson and Burr, both with the same majority of the electoral votes—73 out of 138, and the House decided between the two. In 1824 the House voted on the three highest candidates, none of whom had a majority.

There are undoubtedly more ways than one in which our system of electing the President might be improved.

FROM A SENATOR'S DIARY

By the 97th Senator

Wednesday.

PERHAPS the biggest job ahead of Congress is the raising of money necessary to keep the Federal Government going. The committees charged with the duty of preparing revenue measures are the ways and means committee of the House and the finance committe of the Senate. These two committees will be the most powerful in Congress and their personnel, therefore, is a matter of national interest.

It is interesting to look into the future and contemplate the prospective leadership of the two groups which will wield so much influence in the shaping of the financial legislation required to keep the National Treasury solvent. In the first place, there will be a sweeping shake-up of the ways and means committee without regard to outcome of the election. The primaries already have swept into the discard the senior members of the committee on both sides. The first to go down to defeat was Willis Hawley, the ranking Republican member, who held the position of chairman prior to the Democrats gaining control last December. Hawley's name, along with that of Reed Smoot, is attached to the last tariff law. His Oregon constituents retired him in favor of a comparatively unknown opponent. The leadership of the Republican ways and means members therefore will be transferred to Allen Treadway, of Massachusetts; that is, assuming that he is reelected.

Drastic changes have taken place on the Democratic side of the committee. Collier, chairman of the committee, was retired in the reapportionment tangle in Mississippi. The next in line, Charley Crisp, after his unforunate efforts to pilot the tax bill through the House, sought election to the Senate, was beaten, and finally landed on the Tariff Commission by President Hoover's appointment.

The elimination of Collier and Crisp will make Rainey, of Illinois, the senior Democratic member of the committee, but Rainey will not be in a position to accept the chairmanship because he already holds the important post of floor leader. This will put the chairmanship, if the Democrats retain control of the House, in the grasp of the Hon. Bob Doughton, the North Carolina mountaineer, whose fame rests chiefly on his leadership in the successful fight to scuttle the sales tax after it had been recommended by the ways and means committee last winter.

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE.

If the Democrats gain control of the Senate, the chairmanship of the finance committee will pass into the hands of none other than the Hon. Pat Harrison, whose talents lie more in the direction of rough-and-ready debate than in painstaking and profound study of fiscal affairs. On the Republican side of the committee the two oldest members in length of service—Reed Smoot, chairman, and Jim Watson, are facing the hardest fights of their long political careers to hold their seats in the Senate. Senator Shortridge, of California, another veteran member, has already been eliminated in the primary. If Smoot and Watson meet defeat, Dave Reed, of Pennsylvania, will be the senior Republican member, and, if in spite of their defeat the Republicans should keep control of the Senate, Reed would become chairman.

Thursday.

MANY "deserving Democrats," as Mr. Bryan used to describe them, are grooming themselves to succeed Jack Garner as Speaker of the House on the assumption that Jack will move over into Charley Curtis' chair in the north end of the Capitol on March 4.

Henry Rainey, the white-haired 72-year-old Democratic floor leader, of course may be expected to make a bid for the Speakership. It may be argued that he has a prior claim on the post. The custom is to elect the floor leader to the Speakership.

But the South has no intention of meekly acquiescing in the selection of Rainey, and it is possible that a spirited sectional battle may ensue. The Alabama Legislature already has indorsed Representative McDuffie for Garner's job, and McDuffie is likely to command considerable support among Southern members. Rankin, of Mississippi, one of the most ardent of the bonus advocates, is a candidate for the honor. A boom is getting under way for Byrns, of Tennessee, the chairman of the appropriations committee.

REPRESENTATIVE RAINEY.

It must be kept in mind, however, that Jack Garner is handcuffed and shackled to the Federal pay roll. He has maneuvered himself into a position where he simply can't lose. He may disappoint all the speakership candidates by getting beaten for the Vice Presidency. In that event, he will simply keep his old seat in the House, for his Texas constituents are almost certain to reelect him in that capacity. Jack is feeling very comfortable over the outlook. If he loses the Vice Presidency and the Democrats keep control of the House, he will continue to sit tight in the Speaker's chair. If the Democrats lose the presidential election and control of the House also, Jack will still have his salary as a congressman.

On the other hand, if the Republicans gain control of the House, Bert Snell, of New York, no doubt will have a clear field for the Speakership.

Friday.

FOR many years the Insurgents have been assailed by the taunt: "They do a lot of oratorical bolting between elections, but in presidential years they are regular." The taunt was pretty close to the truth. Even in 1924 only three of them could be induced to follow their leader, the elder Bob La Follette, when he ran on a third ticket. In 1928, only two of them—Norris and Blaine—declared openly for Al Smith, and some of them, notably Borah and Brookhart, supported Hoover heartily.

This year apparently the taunt got under their skin. The La Follettes, Senator Bob and Gov. Phil, have gone over bodily to the Democrats. Blaine has gone along with them. Smarting from their primary defeat, they are determined to throw the entire support of their organization to Roosevelt in Wisconsin and to exercise all the influence they have to carry neighboring States for the Democratic nominee. It will be interesting to watch the returns from the La Follette strongholds to see how many votes they can actually deliver to the Democrats.

Hiram Johnson's declaration for Roosevet was a surprise. His dislike of Hoover, of course, has been well known, but it was not expected that he would come out openly for Roosevelt. George Norris, duplicating his performance in 1928, is on the stump for Roosevelt. Bronson Cutting, the New Mexico Insurgent, is also completely off the reservation, supporting the New York Governor. Most of the other Insurgents are against Hoover, but they haven't declared for Roosevelt.

The question arises: Will the bolters be chastised in the interest of party discipline? Will they be punished for their desertion of the party? The answer, I think, is "no." Punishing the recalcitrants was tried in 1924 and it did no good. They were soon welcomed back into the fold. No attempt was made to discipline George Norris for supporting Al Smith in 1928. He was permitted to retain unmolested the chairmanship of the judiciary committee, one of the choicest posts in the Senate. Besides, it is a fairly safe bet that, left to their own devices, the Insurgents soon will be insurging against their new allies, the Democrats, just as strongly as they are now insurging against the Republicans.

Decrease in Number of Horses Seen Hard Blow to Farmers

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to the United States census of 1930, the number of horses on the farms and ranges of the United States fell off to the extent of 6,200,000 in the decade 1920 to 1930.

Estimates of the number of horses in cities and villages show a decrease of 2,000,000 in the same period. Most of the change from horse power to motor power in the cities had been done in the preceding decade.

The rapid change from horse power to motor power on the farms and the revolution of transit in the cities from the horse to the auto and motor truck has a very vital connection with the whole problem of relief from the present depression. Before permanent relief may be had there must be an insight into causes of conditions.

One of the primary causes of great overproduction and low prices for farm produce has been the rapid turning of 40,000,000 or more acres, formerly devoted to pasturage for horses and growing oats and hay for horses, to use in producing foodstuffs for man.

An appreciation of the extent of the acreage which formerly was needed to produce the Nation's horses and to maintain their horse power will show how serious is the problem confronting the farmer because of this loss of a very large part of the business of the farm.

Farmers in large numbers are turning back from the tractor to the horse. Rigging has been devised so that several teams of horses may be hitched to a gang plow. Thousands of other farmers are getting back to the one-team, one-plow, one-man combination and are leaving the tractor idle.

The horse is coming into its own again for purposes of the shorter-haul city delivery. All this return to the horse is helping to restore an equilibrium and to increase demand for the products of the farm.

Insofar as such change from machine to horse is economically advantageous to the individual it is very manifestly of advantage to the whole country. There remains, however, the obvious fact that a very large part of the demand for horses for motive power is gone forever. That leaves still a vast acreage of farm land which will never be called upon to furnish sustenance to the horse. What to do with that land without glutting the world markets is one of the most serious problems facing the farm and the Government of the United States.

THE COMPLAINING WIND

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Sometimes I wake in dead of night
And hear the north wind moan and sigh
As if rebellious at its plight,
A plaintive whimperer, as I.

I lie and hear it round the eaves
Grumbling that it must rush along,
Telling the last few autumn leaves
With bitterness that all is wrong.

I hear the scared trees make reply,
Lamenting all their glories fled,
I'm sure as dolefully as I
When some bright hour of mine has sped.

Then with a smile: "Dear Lord, I say,
And all the company of saints
Who have to hear us day by day
You must grow weary of complaint!"

India Frees Much Gold; U. S. Profits

Sacred Buildings and Coffers of Princes Giving Up Precious Metal.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—With a lavish hand, India now is distributing gold among other nations.

Once the despair of Occidental economists who feared that in time she would deplete the world's monetary gold stocks because of her historic practice of draining the metal from other countries and sinking it in the coffers of Indian prices and in her sacred buildings, India now has reversed herself.

European and American economists hail this change as a development of far-reaching importance. It means, they say, that a vast supply of gold, which for centuries had been "lost" in India, now is being returned to the world where it can again be used as a base for credit and currency.

Not because she has relinquished her love of the ornamental and valuable metal, but because she can realize a substantial profit on its sale in the world markets, India has ceased to be the world's greatest hoarder of gold.

Due to the severe depreciation of her silver rupee, which, however, still commands a high value within the Indian boundaries, the nation's owners of gold are selling the metal for British pound sterling, American dollars and other currencies.

Such proceeds, in turn, are used to buy silver rupees at home—and, measured in terms of domestic purchasing power, the bargain represents a handsome profit for the seller.

THE latest Federal Reserve bulletin shows that India has sent, in the first eight months of this year, $213,243,000 in gold to England and $8,302,000 to the United States. The movement, in its present volume, began last November. In the last two months of 1931 she shipped $43,457,000 to England and $8,060,000 to the United States.

Thus, for the ten months ended last August 31, India bolstered the gold stocks of England by $256,700,000 and sent $16,362,000 to the United States—a total of $273,062,000, or a monthly average of $27,306,200.

While England's share of the Indian gold distribution has been roughly fifteen times greater than that of the United States, the American portion assumes greater interest because of the possibility that this country may soon obtain an increasingly large part. While still the logical destination for most of India's gold exports, England is meeting more competition than she did earlier this year.

The American dollar has strengthened in the foreign exchange market to such an extent that it now is in a position to go directly to Bombay to bid there for Indian gold, instead, as formerly, of bidding for Indian supplies in the London market, where it was in competition with European currencies.

• • • •

AN indication of this strengthening position of American buyers has been furnished in the shipment, during a recent week, of $1,625,000 gold to New York from Bombay. About $3,125,000 was also reported to be on the way here from India, this being part of a total shipment of $5,900,000, of which $2,775,000 was consigned to Europe.

Accurate figures are not available as to the probable gold holdings of India. They have been estimated at $1,500,000,000, but no one knows because so much of it is outside of the Indian banks. However, India probably ranks third only to the United States with its $4,000,000,000 of gold and to France, which holds upward of $3,000,000,000.

Total world holdings of monetary gold are placed at approximately $11,000,000,000.

Tariff Tinkering Seen Dangerous

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: History repeats itself every so often, and now it seems that another turn of the cycle is about to occur.

To those of us who are old enough to remember the Cleveland election it will be recalled that when he took office we were on the eve of a panic. As in almost every case, the Democratic party laid the ills of the country to the tariff. Nothing except its revision would stop it, and, to avoid the dire consequences of such appalling conditions as faced the country, Mr. Cleveland called the Congress in extra session for that purpose. If I recall the date, Congress met in April and started the revised tariff on its way, but it was in the latter part of August or the first of September before anything was done. When the bill was finally passed it did not meet the approval of the President, but he signed it, nevertheless, and Congress adjourned.

It did not stop the panic, or depression, which descended on the country just as this panic did, and during all of those weary, slowly creeping months that the House of Representatives was wrangling [illegible]ness stood still. Banks, ma[illegible]turing enterprises and farm business crashed. Cotton went down to 4 cents a pound for lint, dressed hogs sold for 3 cents per pound. The bottom dropped out on the prices of corn, wheat and other cereals. A first-class milk cow could be bought for $10, a horse for $20; in fact, farmers sold for just what they could get. Poverty, hunger, bread lines were everywhere, and Coxey led his hunger-stricken army on Washington demanding that Congress do something about conditions. The only answer that was forthcoming was that the tariff must be revised. Still the bickering in rates went on.

Now, in this crisis, just when the country is beginning to recover from the effects of the panic, the howl goes up from Mr. Roosevelt and other Democratic speakers, that the tariff must be revised. May the good Lord save us if they win the election, for business will again see the repetition of that devastating period when the Democratic party wasted months revising the tariff. Instead of recovering from present conditions, the whole country is going to slump back into the mire from which we have been climbing under the Hoover reconstruction policies.

The prices of farm products will again slump, going lower than they have been. Railroad shipments will decline, laborers will again be forced to lose their jobs, and poverty, hunger and want will be greater than it has been, for it will take many months for the Democratic Congress to pass a new tariff bill, and "Rome will be burning" while this is being done, if history repeats itself.

ALEXANDRIA LEGION TO SPONSOR DANCES

Masons to Attend District Lodge Tomorrow Night at Quantico.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU,
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The Drum and Bugle Corps of Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, will give the first of a series of dances and entertainments tomorrow night, for the purpose of raising funds to send the drum corps to the State convention of the legion next year in Bristol. The dance, which will be in the auditorium of the Virginia Public Service Co. building on South Washington street, will be a Halloween costume affair, and prizes will be awarded for the best costumes.

H. B. Lemon is general chairman, and is being assisted in making arrangements by Stewart Kimball, secretary of the drum corps; H. N. Jones, treasurer; George Wilsey, J. S. Kimball, G. Raymond King, Marc Freeman, J. T. Preston, jr., J. H. Berman, Christopher Newton, Joseph J. Young, L. Leonard Gibbs, Joseph Starry, Robert Weber and Peter Quirk.

A number of Alexandria Masons will attend the district meeting of District, No. 1, in the John A. Lejeune Lodge of Masons at Quantico tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The meeting will be held in the interest of all Masonic lodges comprising District, No. 1, including Alexandria-Washington and Andrew Jackson Lodges, of Alexandria, and the lodges of Falls Church, Occoquan and Quantico.

Members of the two Alexandria lodges will leave in automobiles at 7 o'clock, starting from the Cameron street entrance to the Masonic Temple.

A verdict of $1 damages was awarded Dr. Harry R. Bybee of Norfolk, in his suit to recover damages of $10,000 from Dr. John R. Stoke, of Roanoke, Va., the case being heard in the Alexandria Corporation Court, Judge William P. Woolls presiding.

The suit was based on a letter alleged to have been written by Dr. Stoke which, it was claimed, reflected on Dr. Bybee. Both men are chiropractors. The jury deliberated only 30 minutes.

The Alexandria City Council will hold a special meeting at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon to consider a report of the standing committee relative to an audit of the city's books recently ordered by the council, and to submit a report of the bids received for the work.

A number of accounting firms have been invited to inspect the books of the city and bid on the audit.

Paul A. Crist, of 1313 King street, Alexandria, reported to the police yesterday that his home was entered either Thursday or Friday and silverware and other valuables to the value of $400 taken.

The articles reported missing include a calfskin lady's coat, a chest of silver, minute style, bearing the initial C; table lamp and shade. Entrance was gained to the house by prying open a trap door in the rear.

Alexandria young people will celebrate Halloween tomorrow night with the usual parade on King street. Many dances and parties are planned by the grown-ups.

The police have been instructed to be on the lookout for any disorderly conduct.

Arlington Legion Plans Clebration

Will Join Other County Societies in Observance of Armistice Day.

Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, is planning a huge Armistice Day celebration in Arlington County in cooperation with numerous other organizations, according to an announcement made yesterday. Robert Lecompte is chairman of the committee in charge of the program.

The festivities will include a street parade that will terminate at the Memorial Monument at Clarendon, a street festival, dancing and other features.

The participating organizations include the Firemen's Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs, the Business and Professional Women's Club, the Retail Merchants Association, the Rosslyn Business Men's Association, the Arlington County Civic Federation, the Parent-Teacher Associations of the county, the Bar Association, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the County Board and the County School Board.

Col. Wise Will Speak Saturday at Culpeper

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 27.—Col. Jennings C. Wise, special Assistant Attorney General of the United States, will address the voters of Culpeper next Saturday. The meeting will be held in the Municipal auditorium at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Col. Wise is a grandson of the late Gov. Henry A. Wise, who was Virginia's governor at the outbreak of the Civil War. It was Gov. Wise's order that sent Robert E. Lee with Virginia's Militia to Harper's Ferry to quell the John Brown invasion of Virginia. Col. Wise is a brother of Henry A. Wise, Republican candidate for Congress from Virginia. He has announced that the theme of his Culpeper address will be the exposure of the "Roosevelt-Smith-Raskob-Hearst-Tammany liquor plot."

VIRGINIA REVENUES CONTINUE DECLINE

Further Reductions in State Appropriations Forecast at Richmond.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—State Tax Commissioner C. H. Morrissett today sent to Gov. Pollard a tax department report indicating a "substantial downward trend of the State revenue."

The report caused the Richmond News Leader to prophesy "a continuation of the reduction already made in the salaries of State employes."

"The reports before me," Gov. Pollard said, "are not decisive of any action. I shall have to gather more data, and ponder the problem further, before my course can be made clear. The whole matter is pending."

Warning of Reductions.

Recently the governor, after receiving a report from Director of the Budget J. H. Bradford showing an increased criminal cost for the quarter ended September 30, had said:

"If we can't do something to curb these expenses—and so far every effort has failed—I shall be obliged to make another reduction in departmental and institutional appropriations. I have already ordered one 10 per cent cut, in addition to the pay cut directed by the General Assembly."

The report showed that assessments of taxes on intangibles and individual and fiduciary incomes appearing on the books of the commissioners of revenue for 1932 are $637,823.11 below the corresponding totals in 1931. The total for 1931 exclusive of supplemental assessments was $3,856,220, and the total for 1932 is $3,227,296.89.

Decreases Are Noted.

Mr. Morrissett's report showed a $118,788.10 decrease in taxes assessed on bonds, notes, &c.; a $12,257.04 decrease in the money tax; a $11,559.91 decrease in the tax on moneyed capital coming into competition with the business of the national banks, and a $188,316 decrease in the tax on capital. There was an increase of $457.43 in penalties.

The total 1931 assessment of taxes on intangibles was $2,703,922.81 and in 1932 the total was given as $2,373,546.63, the decrease being $330,446.18 net.

In the individual and fiduciary income bracket, the 1931 total on the books was $1,161,227.19 and the 1932 total $853,850.26, a dcrease of $307,376.

Negro Junior High Will Be Dedicated

Arlington School to Bear Names of E. C. Hoffman and Ella Boston.

County School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp and County Manager Roy S. Braden are announced as the principal speakers at the dedication exercises of the Colored Junior High School at Arlington View.

The school will be named in honor of Edward C. Hoffman and Miss Ella N. Boston, now deceased, who served more than 30 years in the county.

Preceding the exercises there will be a parade, which will form opposite the Mount Olivet Baptist Church near the south gate of Arlington National Cemetery. A special feature of the exercises will be an exhibition drill by the Machine Gun Troop, Tenth Cavalry, from Fort Myer.

Arlington Supervisors to Meet.

The County Board will hold a special meeting at the Arlington Courthouse tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock to approve and sign the pay roll for October.

4,000 IN BERRYVILLE WITNESS BIG PARADE

Two-Day Fall Festival Ends With Torchlight March; Prizes Awarded.

Special to The Washington Post.

Berryville, Va., Oct. 29.—A two-day fall festival terminated here last night with a torchlight parade about 1 mile long, composed of 25 floats and decorated machines depicting the most important enterprises of Clarke County as well as its foremost organizations. There were seven military companies of the National Guard, from Martinsburg, Alexandria, and Frederick, Md., besides the local company, which were reviewed by Brig. G. C. Walker, of Richmond, and Maj. Mills Neal, of Richmond, commander of the Richmond Blues.

There were also two fire companies from Charles Town, the Independent and the Citizens, with the three bands from out of town, the Third Cavalry, U. S. A., Fort Myer; the Handley High School, of Winchester, and the drum and fife corps of the Alexandria Post, American Legion.

Four thousand spectators lined the parade route.

As Clarke County is famous for its horses, it was fitting that the Clarke County Horse and Colt Show Association's float should be awarded first prize, and that, as her greatest enterprise is apple-raising, the second went to Moore & Dorsey, apple packers, float. One machine carried a large picture of Roosevelt at the front, while on either side were Miss Democracy (Miss Rose MacDonald) and the donkey. Other enterprises of the county well carried out were the 'possum hunters and the mountain stills.

Domestic Science Displays.

In the home demonstration department, which was judged by Misses Pauline Hudson and Katherine Watson, of Middletown, there was on display cakes, pies, breads and fancy work made by both adults and children under 13, jellies, jams, canned goods and an interesting display of spreads, both antique and modern, the most beautiful of which was 200 years old, in perfect repair, made entirely by hand, the property of Mrs. Chares Levi.

Other prizes in that class were as follows; Knitted spread, Mrs. Oscar Carr; crocheted spread, Mrs. French Ramsey; silk quilt, Mrs. W. H. Holiday; old quilt, R. L. Fowler. In the garden display H. C. Barthel won first prize. He also won the prize of a ton of coal for the best buy-at-home slogan. The apples from the Luke orchard, displayed by George Cockran, won first in all classes. Little Lola Taylor, 11 years old, captured first for her angel food cake and another little girl, Dorothy Kackley, carried off firsts in the candy and cookie classes, and Anne Nevil Barnett for her chocolate cake.

Baby Show Is Popular.

Mrs. Benjamin Pulliam was first in the canned goods, and Mrs. W. H. Holliday for her jams and jellies and pickles. For the best ten ears of yellow corn, J. F. Royston won and for the white corn C. H. Young won. The baby show, with its 53 entries, held yesterday afternoon in the courthouse, drew a large crowd and its sponsor, Mrs. B. L. Tessier and her able assistants, the Misses Annie Stribling, Mary O'Fallon and Mrs. J. D. Griffing, felt fully repaid for their labor. Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Funk and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ashwood's little ones under 1 year were judged 100 per cent perfect.

Little Margaret Lee Moyer and Billie Hooker won firsts in the red-headed classes; Richard and Maxine Elsea, children of Mr. and Mrs. Marshal Elsea, won first in the twin class. In the 3 to 5 year class Roy Allen and Margaret Russell, daughter of Mrs. J. J. Russell, were first. Miss Stella Moore won first for the best decorated automobile in the parade; Miss Louisa Smith and E. Jacquelin Smith for the best costumed couple, and the Berryville schools for the best group of costumed paraders, and to G. C. Sponseller went the flower prizes.

FINAL COUNTY DRIVE SET BY TWO PARTIES

Torchlight Parade Planned by Arlington Democrats Saturday Night.

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Climaxing an intensive campaign in Arlington County in behalf of the Democratic ticket, a giant torchlight procession will be held Saturday night commencing at 7 o'clock from the American Legion Monument in Clarendon. Leaving that point the procession will traverse all sections of the county, at the conclusion of which a rally will be held in the Washington-Lee High School auditorium.

Among the speakers will be Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, former chief of the Air Corps, United States Army, and Representative Howard W. Smith. Rear Admiral R. E. Coontz, United States Navy, retired, head of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has been invited to address the meeting.

Among organizations participating will be the Arlington County Democratic executive committee, the Women's Democratic Club, the County Democratic Club, Young Democratic Club and a large delegation of veterans, headed by the newly organized Arlington County Unit of the Democratic Veterans League.

Other Activities Planned.

Other activities planned by the Democratic organization for the week include:

Tomorrow night, at the headquarters in Clarendon, the Arlington County Women's Democratic Club will hold its weekly meeting. Plans for aiding in the distribution of the informative ballot will be made.

Wednesday night there will be a mass meeting in the Cherrydale Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock. State Senator William A. Wright is announced as the principal speaker.

Thursday night at the headquarters there will be a special meeting at 7:30 o'clock, when Representative Howard W. Smith will speak on the proper method of marking the ballot. At 8 o'clock he will address the meeting of the Young Democrats of Arlington County.

Not to be outdone by the Democrats, L. C. MacPherson, chairman of the county Republican committee, announces that plans have been completed for a grand wind-up of one of the most aggressive campaigns in recent presidential years.

Republican Program.

Tomorrow night in the Odd Fellows Hall, the committee will stage a Grand Old Party dance. The committee in charge of arrangements follows: H. S. Omohundro, chairman; Grayson Ahalt, John G. Clarkson, Dr. Victor Meyers, Mrs. Frances Harris, Mrs. Myrtle O. MacMahon, Mrs. L. C. McNemar and Mrs. Eva Fay Pumphrey.

Wednesday night there will be a meeting of the Young Republican Club at the headquarters at Clarendon. Thursday night there will be "general round-up meeting" at the headquarters at which all members of the county committee and all other organizations assisting in the campaign, including the League of Republican Women, the Men's Club and the Young Republican League, will assist. At this meeting final plans for work on election day will be made.

Friday night the seventh of a series of mass meetings will be held at the Cherrydale firemen's hall. Among the speakers will be Leo A. Rover, District Attorney for the District of Columbia, United States Marshal Edgar C. Snyder and Miss Helen Cunningham, of Washington.

Red Cross to Meet Thursday.

The executive committee of the Fairfax County Red Cross Chapter will meet Thursday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, in the boardroom of the courthouse at Fairfax. This will be followed by a meeting of the County Welfare Board at 3:30. The two organizations have been cooperating in taking care of the needy families in the county. Plans will be formulated for the winter program.

PIEDMONT OLDEST OF FAUQUIER HUNTS

Extensive List of Fixtures to Begin at Its Kennels Near Upperville.

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 29.—Among the list of recognized hunts in this country, 25 are listed in Virginia and of Virginia's quota Fauquier County has six, or practically one-fourth.

The six Fauquier County hunts are: Casanova Hunt Club, the Cobbler Hunt, Delaplane; Orange County Hunt, The Plains; Piedmont Hunt, Upperville; Old Dominon Hunt, Crest Hill, and Warrenton Hunt. PARIS ARMS PLAN IS APPROVED HERE

(United Press.)

American reaction to France's new disarmament plan yesterday was distinctly favorable. Officials thought it a realistic approach to the main problem of land disarmament—Franco-German tension. Hence it was considered a valuable contribution.

It is virtually certain, however, that the present administration will not sign a consultative pact of the sort mentioned in Premier Herriot's plan. The premier's remarks in the chamber Friday night, however, encouraged hope that he might be willing to accept Secretary Stimson's statement of August 8 in lieu of a pact.

Stimson then said that a promise to consult was "implicit" in the Kellogg pact. His speech clearly indicated that the United States would consult with other powers in time of trouble. There is reason to believe that Stimson meant to tell France, through that speech, that the United States already considered itself bound by a consultative pact.

Quotable State Department reaction was withheld yesterday because Secretary Stimson had not had time to study the Herriot plan personally and because his assistants lacked the official text of it.

Disarmament experts have, talking on the basis of press reports, found no impediment to American acceptance of the plan unless Herriot insists on a consultative pact. As understood here, the plan will not affect the United States or British armies, but applies solely to the European continent. It leaves the international naval question for settlement under some other plan. Hence officials see no reason why the Hoover and Herriot schemes should conflict. And the previous French plan for a "league army" which the United States opposed, appears to have been modified to a plan for regional military cooperation under league direction in time of trouble.

The salient point about the Herriot plan, in the view of American officials, is that it offers Germany relief from the expense and relative weakness of a small standing army and offers to substitute conscription. Recent statements of German leaders indicate that is what Germany wants. At the same time, the plan provides for regional pacts and for arbitration to give France its long-cherished security.

U. S. AGAINST FORCE FOR KELLOGG PACT

A foreign office spokesman said Davis, who arrived last night from London, sought information regarding various points of the plan, which Premier Herriot outlined yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies.

Davis was said to have been particularly interested in the manner France would use in presenting the new scheme at Geneva. It was said that he did not touch upon his conversations in London. On this point Premier Herriot referred the American delegate to Joseph Paul-Boncour, the Minister of War.

The interview had been scheduled for early morning, but was postponed until late afternoon because of a severe cold Davis caught en route from London to Paris. His condition, however, is not serious.

Papers Praise Herriot.

Newspapers favorable to the government saw in Herriot's arms move an opportunity for Germany to return to the disarmament conference and called the French proposals a big step toward conciliation with Germany. It said Premier Herriot had indirectly recognized Germany's right to equality, by virtually renouncing military stipulations of the Versailles treaty.

The new French proposals call for substitution of conscript armies for Europe's regular armies and for an international system of armaments control, giving any power the right to demand an investigation of another's armed forces.

Just what France expects the United States to contribute to the security provisions of the new plan is still a matter for speculation. The premier's outline of the project, which is still unknown in detail, said:

"The United States would accord those guarantees of security which it had envisaged itself."

Reich May Rejoin Arms Conference

Stipulates Other Powers Be Bound Equally to Agreements Reached.

Berlin, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Germany may consent to resume participation in the world disarmament conference at Geneva, government officials said today, as a result of the new French proposal for abolition of mercenary and standing armies in favor of militia forces. There would be one important proviso, however, namely, that the other powers first agree that any agreements achieved shall apply equally to all signatories, including Germany.

These opinions, although expressed by authoritative persons, were entirely informal and unofficial.

London, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Hope that Germany will return to the Geneva disarmament conference was revived today with reports from Berlin that the new French disarmament plan appeared to be acceptable there as a basis for discussion. The British foreign office declined to comment on the plan before the French text has been examined, but the hope was expressed in some quarters that it will be accepted, at least as a possible means of reopening the disarmament negotiations.

D. C. Bridge Tourney Is Planned This Week

The second annual duplicate bridge tournament for the 1932 championship of the District of Columbia will be held at the Shoreham Hotel Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, it was announced yesterday.

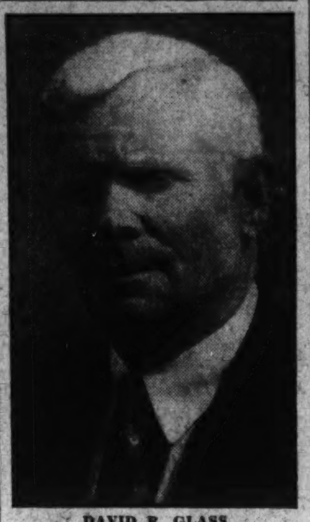
Preliminary entries indicate that more than 200 players will participate. Teams from Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Wilmington and other cities are expected.

U. S. Employes' Union Plans Job Classification Survey

President Shaw Announces Glass Will Conduct Research Campaign.

A thorough survey of classification, which will have for its objective the formulation of a plan acceptable to all classes of labor, will be undertaken at once by the American Federation of Government Employes, it was announced yesterday by President John Arthur Shaw. He pointed out that this is something never before done by Government employes themselves.

The work will be done by David R. Glass, first vice president of the organization, who served as its provisional president from the time it received its charter in August until its first annual convention nearly two weeks ago. Though urged to accept the presidency of the federation Mr. Glass declined that office so he would be able to devote his entire time to personnel and research work.



DAVID R. GLASS.

"In making a thorough survey of classification," said Mr. Shaw, "the American Federation of Government Employes proposes to do a real piece of constructive work, and we feel fortunate indeed in having Mr. Glass available to undertake this activity. He has had broad experience in personnel work in the Federal service.

"During his service with the personnel classification board, Mr. Glass devised the coding system in the survey of the field services, and handled more than 68,000 Government employes' job sheets, in addition to more than 20,000 job sheets gathered from private establishments.

"Employes in the departments in Washington, as well as those in the field, have been called upon to supply information as to their positions, also information regarding industrial positions in the vicinity of their employment. Data so collected will be compiled into a comprehensive report on the entire subject of classification and retirement."

The survey, which will start at once, is one of the major projects to be undertaken by the A. F. G. E. during the next year.

"There are many defects in the classification plan now in effect in the departmental service in Washington," said Mr. Glass. "Many of these become evident in the administration of the act, since it is a fact that no law which is deficient can be administered to the complete satisfaction or benefit of those whom it concerns.

"Auditing property accounts is neither clerical nor professional work, yet it will be found in either classification. The Federal translators have been trying ever since classification became effective to be classified as professional employes, and as yet they have been unsuccessful. Yet their duties are of a highly professional character."

In addition to planning improvement in classification, an intensive study of retirement also will be made by Mr. Glass. As much of the results of this study as will be feasible will be submitted to Congress at the forthcoming legislative session.

BALLOT AID OFFERED HOOVER AND CABINET

Absentee Voting Facilities of Republican Club Are Made Available.

President Hoover and members of his Cabinet whose home States allow them to vote by mail, have been invited by Samuel J. Prescott to use the absentee voting facilities at the National Republican Club.

Mr. Prescott, who is chairman of the League of Republican Organizations and of the Republican State committee of the District, wrote the White House yesterday that the information bureau of the club was at the President's disposal. Similar invitations were sent to Secretary of State Stimson, Secretary of the Treasury Mills, Attorney General Mitchell, Postmaster General Brown, Secretary of the Navy Adams, Secretary of the Interior Wilbur and Secretary of Commerce Chapin.

Two members of the Cabinet, Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, of Missouri, and Secretary of War Hurley, of Oklahoma, will have to vote in person, as their State laws do not provide for balloting by mail. Secretary of Labor Doak is expected to vote at his Virginia home.

Mr. Prescott, in urging citizens of other States living here to vote by mail, pointed out that in all but four States the ballots must reach their destination by November 7 or 8. In three cases they must be there even earlier, he said. Oregon ballots must arrive by November 2, while in Texas and Nevada they must be in by November 5. Colorado ballots must be in the mail by 7 p. m. on November 8; in California and Rhode Island they must be in by November 14, while in Kansas the law provides that they must be executed and mailed on election day.

Law Asked to Prohibit Intimidation of Voters

(Associated Press.)

The District of Columbia Democratic Women's Educational Council yesterday adopted a resolution proposing "enactment of such Federal laws as will denounce and penalize as a felony any attempt to threaten or coerce any voter, with the purpose of thereby influencing him in his acts as an elector, taking part in the election of a candidate for any Federal office."

The resolution said "heads of certain industries and institutions are attempting by threats and other methods of intimidation, to compel their employes, regardless of their convictions and interests, to cast their votes for the Republican candidate for the Presidency."

Film Maker Sues G.O.P. Committee

Brown Charges Violation of Hoover Career Picture Agreement.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Deputy Sheriff James Tuomey today attached $21,000 of the funds of the Republican national campaign committee, under a warrant of attachment, signed by Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook.

The attachment was served as the result of a suit brought by Lowell H. Brown, film producer, against Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican national committee. Brown asserted that he was the producer and owner of a negative motion picture, "The Master of Emergencies," depicting the career of President Hoover.

He charged that he sold two copies of the picture to the committee for campaign purposes and that the committee "wrongfully and in violation of the agreement caused to be made a duplicate negative" from which, he charged, copies of the film were made and are being sold.

He claimed he was to have been sole distributor of the pictures.

Coontz Welcomed in Atlanta.

Atlanta, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Admiral Robert E. Coontz was welcomed here today by a delegation of Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers and civil officers upon his arrival to attend the Southeastern conference of the Veterans of Foreign Wars tomorrow.

BAKER WILL SPEAK ON ARMISTICE DAY

Wilson's Secretary of War to Attend Exercises in Cathedral.

Newton D. Baker, of Cleveland, Ohio, Secretary of War in Wilson's Cabinet, will be guest speaker at the annual festival service of commemoration to be held in Washington Cathedral on the afternoon of Armistice Day, November 11, it was announced yesterday by Dr. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington.

The principal service, at which Baker will deliver his address, will be held at 4 o'clock in the great choir and sanctuary of the Cathedral and will be open to the public without cards of admission. Bishop Freeman will officiate and the lesson will be read by the Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church.

Music appropriate to the occasion will be rendered by the Cathedral choir of men and boys under the direction of Edgar Priest. The service will be broadcast over the networks of the Columbia Broadcasting system through Station WJSV and the National Broadcasting Co. through Station WRC.

Prior to the main service, officials and members and the American Legion will participate in services to be conducted by Bishop Freeman at the tomb of President Woodrow Wilson in Bethlehem Chapel in the Cathedral at 3:15 o'clock.

Floral wreaths will be placed by the Woodrow Wilson Armistice Day committee of Washington, the national officers of the American Legion, the George Washington Post of the Legion, which will furnish the color guard, and other organizations.

Liquor Tax Called Depression Proof

Crusaders Point Out U. S. Customs Returns Are Always Unreliable.

(Associated Press.)

The Crusaders, an organization advocating prohibition repeal, issued a statement yesterday, saying the eighteenth amendment "gave to bootleggers in 1919 the only income that is depression-proof."

"The liquor tax, like the tobacco tax," said the statement, "is a nonfluctuating form of revenue. That is why it is the backbone of the budget prepared each year by Great Britain, France, Italy, Germany, South America and all civilized nations except the United States. * * *

"Before the days of the income tax, the Government's income was made up almost entirely of customs revenue and taxes on tobacco and liquor. The customs revenue, depending as it does on foreign trade, fluctuates widely. * * * In 1872, a year comparable to our present depression, a total of $216,000,000 was collected from customs. In 1878 it had fallen to $130,000,000. * * * In 1872 the liquor tax was $58,000,000. In 1878 it was $60,000,000. The only source of income that is holding up steadily is the miscellaneous internal revenue."

Miss Connor to Attend Convention in Arkansas

Miss Julia D. Connor, assistant secretary of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Washington, will be the guest of the Arkansas Federation of Women's Clubs at Little Rock Wednesday and Thursday.

Miss Connor will speak over station KTHS, Hot Springs, on the Home Lovers Corner, Thursday at 10:30 a. m.

She will be in the receiving line at a tea given in honor of the guests of the federation Thursday afternoon, and Thursday night the dinner guest of Mrs. W. F. Lake, of Hot Springs, president of the federation.

Bids to Be Asked for School Annex

Bids will be advertised at once for construction of an eight-room addition to the Bancroft School, on Newton street, near Eighteenth street, R. M. Brennan, chief clerk of the District Engineer Department, announced yesterday. The appropriation available is $105,000. Bids will be opened November 16.

ARGENTINA TO ENTER LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Will Become Full Member After Twelve Years as Back-Door Observer.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Argentina, which has had one foot in the League of Nations for twelve years without being a legal member, is preparing to go in by the front door and take a seat with other countries at Geneva.

In the act of adhesion, which has been passed by the Chamber of Deputies, as drafted by the government, and is destined for ratification by the senate before the end of 1932, Argentina gives express notice that it is not a party to nor obligated by the Monroe Doctrine, which the League pact mentions in article 21. Mexico, joining the league last year, said it had always held the doctrine nonexistent.

Argentina's attitude is that the doctrine is "a unilateral political declaration, which does not constitute a regional accord within the meaning expressed in article 21:"

When the League of Nations was formed and Argentina was invited to join, President Yrigoyen did so by decree, without consulting Congress. Shortly thereafter he abruptly ordered Argentina's retirement, because the League declined to admit the central powers on equal terms. If the League was not to be a real world association of nations, Yrigoyen said, Argentina would better join a league of Latin nations.

Died in Committee.

President Alvear in 1923 asked Congress to approve Argentine adhesion, but the measure died in committee. Since then Argentina has sent representatives or observers to most meetings of the League and its principal commissions; paid eight years' dues; registered international treaties; participated in many League activities, and has been considered generally by the League itself as a member, but juridically it has never been one and the present move toward the adhesion, regarded abroad as reentry, is in the view of Congress, making Argentina a member for the first time.

The Argentine attitude toward the Monroe Doctrine has been expressed before, notably in 1928, when the Argentine delegates told the League committee on security and arbitration:

"The Monroe Doctrine * * * gave to us the first days of our existence great service, which we recognize fully, and in this sense it has been and always will be to the great credit of the United States, whose history is brilliant with service to liberty and justice. But it is totally inexact to give, as does article 21, the name of a pact or regional accord to a unilateral political declaration which has been explicitly approved by other American nations."

Falkland Case Cited.

The Argentine pronouncement accords with the concept of the United States, for the State Department itself has called the Monroe Doctrine a unilateral document and has disclaimed any interpretation of it as a mandate, to superintend the affairs of Latin-American nations. But Argentina remembers the so-called "Theodore Roosevelt Corollary," implying that the United States might adjust affairs of weaker Western Hemisphere nations when its failure to do so might prompt foreign intervention and particularly Argentina feels that the protective usefulness of the doctrine long since ceased when the United States failed to invoke it in 1834, to prevent Great Britain from occupying the Falkland Islands, to which Argentina never has renounced its claim.

Argentina has not avowed intention of strengthening the loosely aligned Latin-American bloc at Geneva along lines proposed by Uruguay, which suggested they vote as a unit.

MAN SHOT IN FIGHT ON ROAD SUCCUMBS

the case with Corporal A. W. Plummer, of the State police, has asked Baltimore detectives to look for the man described by Anderson.

An Elmer Bleinberger, who has a criminal record in Baltimore, is a member of a gang which makes its headquarters at Greenmount avenue and Eager street, Baltimore. Corpl. Plummer said he would see if Baltimore police have pictures of other members of this gang, and would show them to Anderson to see if he could identify his passenger.

The death last night of Bleinberger closes a Washington police investigation of his possible connection with the routing of a gang of holdup men from a Connecticut avenue bank last week. The men, who fled from the bank when a cloud of tear gas was released, were reported to be traveling in a Maryland car.

FIGHTING FARMERS LEAVING JAPAN FOR MANCHURIA HOMES

Machine Guns Added to Gifts of Lands and Money to Settlers.

NEW PIONEERS READY TO DEAL WITH BANDITS

Tokyo, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Farmer and fighting man combined is the new type of emigrant- and empire-builder Japan is sending to Manchuria.

Like the pioneer who plunged into the wilderness of the American West a century ago, this Japanese settler packs his rifle with his farming tools, expecting to deal with Chinese bandits in the valleys of the Sungari and the Nonni as the American trail-blazer dealt with Indians along the Missouri and the Platte.

Japanese leaders have many ambitious plans for the settlement of hundreds of thousands or even millions of their people in Manchuria, but the only one actually in operation is that sponsored jointly by the war office and the ministry of overseas affairs for planting colonies of thoroughly armed former soldiers on Manchurian soil.

Parades Mark Departure.

The first contingent of this emigration, 450 strong, left recently for new farm-homes in southeastern Kirin Province.

Their departure from Tokyo vividly illustrated the empire-building nature of the enterprise. Wearing uniforms and carrying military packs, they marched first to the official residence of Lieut. Gen Sadao Araki, minister of war.

That director of the empire's policy of continental expansion harangued them on their opportunity to serve on a "front" where they would be fighting for Nippon as surely as if they were soldiers in the field.

They marched next to the great Meiji Shrine, focal point for the religio-patriotism of modern Japan, and worshiped there the spirit of the Emperor Meiji, accounted the founder of the modern Japanese empire.

Pay Sovereign Homage.

Next to the ministry of overseas affairs, where the department head, Ryutaro Nagai, delivered an oration on their opportunity to further the interests of the fatherland.

Finally they paraded in the plaza before the palace of the emperor, and bowed in homage to their unseen sovereign.

Other groups of similar size and composition are to be sent to Manchuria at intervals of about six months. Each will be settled in a strategic district in a compact and easily defensible farming community, supplied not only with individual rifles, but with machine guns and other weapons.

The organization is thoroughly military, a retired lieutenant colonel of the imperial army being commander of the first contingent, with other former officers and noncoms in charge of sections.

No Women in Party.

This contingent was composed of former soldiers from northeastern Japan, already inured to cold such as they will encounter in Manchuria. Each man is to receive a tract of 36 acres, about ten times as large as the average farm in Japan proper, and subsidy of 200 yen ($50) a year for the first six years.

The men went alone. Those who had wives and children left them behind until comparatively safe homes are established in the new promised land.

When not fighting bandits and other foes of the new regime in Manchuria these soldier settlers will raise soy beans, millet and kaoliang—the sorghum-like grain which is the staple of the Manchurian peasant's diet Stock farming also is planned.

Protection Is Promised Jews Visiting Vienna

Vienna, Oct. 29 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—A delegation of 25 American students, including non-Jews, visited Gilchrist Stockton, the American Minister, today to learn whether it was advisable for them to return to the United States, in view of recent anti-Semitic disturbances.

The American Minister assured the students that most far-reaching protection would be accorded. He advised the students to remain aloof from Austrian politics and to organize an American self-defense group should trouble recur.

Tax Forces Heirs To Sell Trappings

Contents of Royal Palace Are Auctioned Off in Munich.

Munich, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Days of pomp and grandeur were recalled when the contents of a royal palace here were auctioned because the upkeep cost $20,000 annually in local taxes alone. The heirs of Prince and Princess Leopold, of Bavaria, sold out rather than risk further deficits in the family budget.

Princess Leopold, formerly Archduchess Gisela, of Austria, was Emperor Francis Joseph's eldest daughter. She died last July, having survived her husband, who was Crown Prince Rupprecht's uncle, by two years.

Pictures and furniture went "dirt cheap." The Polish government bought for $1,600 a large canvas by Joseph von Brandt, representing the liberation of Vienna by King John III, Sobieski, of Poland. It had been a Polish wedding present to the princely couple. For many valuable objects there were no bids.

Around the Town

WITH THE STROLLER.

LET'S coast down Massachusetts avenue from the top of the hill that starts up near the slowly-forming cathedral . . . down the winding, leafy way in a shower of brilliant burnished leaves with now and then a look behind for Officer Sinclair . . . down past the puzzling British Embassy, whose front door is its side door and whose side door is its back door . . . and then sweeping by the new Japanese Embassy, white and pure of line and suggesting the ivory of Bermuda's old homesteads . . . ending the coast near the edible-looking former Pink Palace, of marital woe.

Around the first of the circles and statues, dedicated to Phil Sheridan . . . and so on past the Larz Anderson and other massive homes, some of them boarded, and not because it is almost time for Florida to open . . . to Dupont Circle and its traffic so bewildering to the new driver . . . just on the other side of the circle workmen are swarming over the elder Senator Wadsworth's old home, vacant many seasons but once a highlight in social life of the Rooseveltian era . . . thoroughly done over it will open in several weeks as the Sulgrave Club, sponsored by women much in the public eye, particularly Miss Mabel Boardman . . . Mellon's $18,000-a-year apartment empty . . . the old Force School, where plutocracy once sent its kids to toughen them . . . No. 1719 has one of the city's most beautiful doorways . . . a suave Turkish secretary steps out of his mullata-colored embassy for a constitutional . . . old servants sweep away fallen leaves or polish brass door knobs . . . the arbor formed by giant trees opens its roof as the leaves go, letting in great and irregular shafts of light.

The German Embassy, austere on its private street in the middle of the block between Fourteenth and Fifteenth . . . and hemmed in by boarding houses . . . and so into the section made up of deep red brick homes, dwindling in size and condition until we run smack into the side of the Public Library, with its silent men sitting about on benches.

FOR an aridly unfunny man, Cal Coolidge said some very hilarious things during his six-year lease on 1600 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. One day there was a mixup in the order of those fifteen-minute interviews we subject our Presidents to. It was time for Editor Murry, of the Big Oxford Dictionary, to come in, but instead there entered the portly figure of an executive of a national grocery chain.

President Coolidge picked up the top card off a little pile (containing jotted things to say to his long list of callers) and began to speak about "cementing the United States and Great Britain through the medium of a kindred language," when Charles Lee Cooke, the State Department's social liaison officer, scraped his bespatted feet and ahemed enough to stop the President. He explained that this was Mr. So and So of the A. & P.

Whereupon the leading figure of the United States plunged deep into his introspective self and said, "Kaf—kafkaff, well, hmmmmmm, groceries are a fine thing."

A sign in the window of a Fourteenth street curio shop has this legend:

FOR SALE
Presidents and Statesmens
Old Letters, Coins,
Knick-knacks, &c.
Save me a couple Secretaries of the Treasury, bub.

At that it's probably better to be unemployed than being the guy in those form-fitting iron toadstools that stand at Fifteenth street and New York avenue and near the station, switching street cars this way and that.

WASHINGTON'S only penthouse isn't. Atop a Dupont Circle hotel, 13 stories above the maelstrom of that area, was to have been one of those sky galleries which every young man hopes some day to own. The pent is there, but the house is vacant. They've installed the telephone switchboard and other abracadabra in the place.

All because it's against the law to live 13 stories above the daisy level in Washington. The builders overlooked that. The city's height restricting laws date back to the time when the Capitol was built, and civic-minded city fathers ruled that no building should exceed it in height, lest the populace grow to feel that something was greater than the figurhead of this budding nation.

District court records hold the key to one of the strangest sport stories ever recorded. A wrestler was sued by another for winning a match! The winner had been paid to lose by the loser, and the very next day after the bout the loser sued for $50 damages. The court ruled that it was a legal contract, and ordered the plaintiff reimbursed.

Jack Lynch is the name of the Diamond cab driver whose amazing height is accentuated by the fact that he drives the smallest type of cab in Washington. Lynch makes out his daily work report by standing on the ground and using the top of his cab for a desk.

He used to be with Barnum & Bailey. He's just 7 feet tall.

REMEMBER that swell automobile you chipped in and bought Sam Rice last summer, on the occasion of his "day" at the ball park? Well Samuel was steaming nicely on upper Fourteenth street last week when a typical "death driver" cut in front of him and put a permanent wave in the entire front of the gift auto.

Sam went after the malcreant like he used to chase fly balls—but he missed this foul ball, who escaped in traffic. Sam says, however, that he got his number.

BUREAU OF STANDARDS Deputy Operator X-2 informs this column that a cool $1,000,000 awaits the bright inventor of an ink that will "take" on cellophane. Another million (if there's that much left) would be dispensed to the advertising man who could make the public believe that chewing gum is not only distinguished, but the final test of the socially elite.

Every man believes he could write a book or lead an orchestra, and invent something, if he sat down and gave his time to it. Millions have sat down. Perpetual motion has long since been tossed out of first place in the hearts of the country's amateur inventors. Patent Office records show that about the most popular thing to invent nowadays is a cigarette with sulphur on the end, so that you merely strike your cigarette and begin puffing away.

Emergency Relief for 14 Counties Provided For in Transaction.

(Associated Press.)

The reconstruction corporation yesterday lent the Governor of Tennessee $274,300 for emergency relief in fourteen counties from November 1 to December 31.

Data supplied the corporation showed that during the first seven months of 1932, approximately $400,000 was expended for relief in the counties involved. Approximately $330,293 will be needed during November and December of which $55,993 is available from local sources.

The names of the counties were withheld. The governor is expected to make these public.

Truck Owners Plan U. S. Association

With the object in view of having an organization officially to represent them in all matters pertaining to their industry, 1,000 delegates, representing approximately 100,000 truck owners, will meet here November 17 and 18 to form the American Truck Association.

The association will be the first of its kind to deal exclusively with problems affecting the operating truck business. Heretofore owners have been organized in State groups, due to the fact that almost every State in the Union has conflicting laws governing trucks.

During the conferenec a plan will be formulated setting forth the truck owners' attitude toward Federal regulation of trucks.

Kung Says China's Future Lies in Her Fertile Soil

Former Labor Minister Asserts "Good Earth" More Than Figure of Speech; Denounces Japanese Invasion of Korea and Manchuria.

China's "good earth," recently made famous in novel and play, was pictured as a medium through which world-wide prosperity and peace might be assured by Dr. H. H. Kung, former Minister of Industry and Labor of the Chinese Republic, in a recent interview here.

The vast land of China, Dr. Kung declared, needs only the advantage of modern farming machinery and a market in foreign countries, to take its proper place in the world. Dr. Kung is now touring the United States as an industrial envoy of his country, studying American machinery and industrial methods, with the hope of introducing new ideas into China.

A partnership with the United States and other nations, in which commodities will be bought and exchanged, is the objective of China as described by the envoy.

"The reconstruction of China should constitute one of the much-sought-after opportunities for economic recovery," Dr. Kung said. "This may be the greatest task of the century, which awaits our initiative and your assistance and cooperation."

Dr. Kung said that for the present China prefers to listen to people rather than talk.

"Our motto," he explained, "is 'Look, listen and learn.' We are sure, however, that we are making a good start in coming to the United States, because in your country we will see the important economic forces at work on account of your large-scale production, and here the economic inflation and deflation approached their highest climaxes."

A bitter, impassioned note entered Dr. Kung's voice when he discussed Japan. He declared that Japan has turned Manchuria into a disturbed country, filled with banditry and other depredations and evils. He pictured Japan as a naturally warlike nation, eager for world conquest, and declared that she is seeking to build up of resources to this end in Korea and Manchuria. He declared that Japan has made a mockery out of the open-door policy in Manchuria by monopolizing the market.

"China," the official added, "is eager to maintain world peace, but if she is ever forced to fight she will be ready to."

Dr. Kung refused to enter into a discussion of the Lytton report beyond saying that a great deal of it had met with dissatisfaction in China and that some of the assertions, particularly those regarding to Manchuria, were unfair.

Dr. Kung will spend most of this week in Washington. He is accompanied by Thomas Tchou, technical expert.

KREUGER'S METHODS DISTRUSTED DECADE AGO, EXPERT CLAIMS

Banks' Inspector Predicted in 1922 Machine Would Break.

AMERICANS' ATTORNEY IN EUROPE FOR TRIALS

Director Given 18 Months at Hard Labor; U. S. Group Named in Suit.

Stockholm, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—New disclosures, brought out in the current trials and police investigations into the Kreuger financial debacle, which was felt in numerous countries of the world, have revealed that the late Ivar Kreuger encountered police distrust of his methods as long ago as 1922.

Police now have in their possession a memorandum which shows that late in 1922 a bank inspector named Dahlin predicted that Kreuger worked too much by himself and that the Kreuger business machine would break.

New facts are revealed almost every day in the trials now under way and great interest is aroused in the court action which began Friday (October 28) against the financier's brother, Torsten Kreuger. The latest conviction in the prosecution was that of M. Wendler, Kreuger director, who was sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment at hard labor about a week ago.

The police memorandum just uncovered was written for Kreuger by an auditor of the Swedish Match Co. It relates Dahlin's comments to a bank official with whom Kreuger was negotiating for a loan. The bank inspector pointed out that the match company was claiming exports of 103 per cent of the 1914 figures. He declared that 50 per cent would be a more accurate figure. He refused to admit the possibility of a world match monopoly, and expressed frank alarm at some of the bookkeeping transactions.

Bought Shares at Loss.

Dahlin also called attention to the forced purchase of match company shares in Sweden as a means of stimulating the market. Kreuger & Toll were buying in shares at a loss of 30 kroner (about $5.22) each, he pointed out, and expressed the opinion that American bankers would soon see through this game.

Quoting Dahlin, the memorandum said, in part: "Kreuger never takes any one into his confidence. When he finally gets out of the game with a fortune of 30 or 40 millions, leaving the Swedish people with their worthless match shares, then he will hear what people have to say."

J. N Rosenberg, of New York, counsel for the trustee in bankruptcy for the International Match Co., has been in Stockholm conferring with R. D. Richardson, chief counsel in European affairs for the trustee in bankruptcy, relative to the International Match Co. case.

$50,000,000 German Suit.

It is understood that attention is being given to the $50,000,000 German bond suit against the Skandinaviska Bank here, as well as to the suit against the American directors of the International Match Co.

Richardson and other representatives of the Irving Trust Co. also are engaged in a study of the European match manufacturing plants owned by the International Match Co.

The bonds in question represent the subscription of the International Match Co. to the $125,000,000 loan which Kreuger made to Germany. Kreuger turned over the bonds to the Skandinaviska Bank by installments to get possession of Boliden gold mine stock, which he used as security for a loan from the Swedish Riksbank.

Court action to gain possession of the bonds has been started in New York on the ground that the interest on the bonds must, by contract with the German government, be paid to the fiscal agent in New York.

U. S. Sales to Erin Sag While Argentina Gains

Dublin, Irish Free State, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—September figures released by the Free State government today showed Argentina was selling more goods here while the United States was selling less during September.

Argentine exports to the Free State jumped in value to £193,593 (approximately $633,000), as compared with £130,063 in September, 1931. American exports into the Free State in September dropped £77,651 (currently about $245,000) from £139,785 in September, 1931. American purchases from the Free State slumped to £4,815 (currently about $15,800) from £23,338 in September, 1931.

Insull Warrant Request Is Ready for President

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Gov. Emmerson today signed a requisition for a presidential warrant for the extradition of Samuel Insull, sr., from Greece and of Martin Insull, his younger brother, from Canada for trial in Cook County on embezzlement charges in connection with the failure of his gigantic public utilities holding companies.

Papers necessary for the warrant were approved by the attorney general's office and signed by the governor. The prosecutors said they would go to Washington tomorrow night and present them to Secretary of State Stimson for service. Two officials of Cook County have been waiting in Washington for the warrant and will leave for Greece when they get it.

Dowager Queen Marie Is 57.

Balcik, Roumania, Oct. 29 (A.P.). The Dowager Queen Marie, sometimes called the "mother-in-law of the Balkans," celebrated her fifty-seventh birthday today in this secluded town on the Black Sea, where she lives in a castle built according to her own plans when she was Queen of Roumania.

PRINCIPALS AT MARKER DEDICATION

WARBURTON MANOR
HOME OF THE DIGGES FAMILY
GEORGE AND MARTHA WASHINGTON

UNVEILING RECALLS WASHINGTON VISITS

Memorial Tablet Dedicated at Warburton Manor, Old Home of "Digges."

Political leaders, officers of the Prince Georges County Federation of Women's Clubs, and officials of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission yesterday gathered at Warburton Manor, Fort Washington, to witness the unveiling of a tablet commemorating Washington's visit to the manor.

The tablet, which was erected by the county federation, was unveiled by Miss Nora Digges Hill, great granddaughter of the George Digges who was Washington's neighbor. This George Digges is mentioned in Washington's diary as "Neighbor Digges," and the journal contains frequent notes of the first President's visits to Warburton Manor, across the river.

Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, official historian of the National Bicentennial Commission, made the main address. He outlined the history of the relations between the Washington and Digges families, which continued for many years. He also discussed George Washington's ancestors in England and his work in laying out the Cumberland trail to Pittsburgh.

The tablet was presented to the United Government by C. C. Magruder, chairman of the Prince Georges County Bicentennial committee. Lieut. Col. Louis A. Kunzig, commander of Fort Washington, accepted the marker for the Government. The Rev. Frank B. Bonner, chaplain, pronounced the invocation, dedicatory prayer and benediction.

Warburton Manor was built in 1650, although the estate was not patented until 1661. Later, after passing out of the hands of the Digges family, a part of the original tract was acquired by the Government and fortifications were erected. These were an integral part of the defenses of Washington during the Civil War. The original house was built by William Digges, father of the man who was Washington's intimate.

Helene Allowed to See Prince Thrice Weekly

Bucharest, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Princess Helene, divorced wife of King Carol, reached an agreement with a special crown council today whereby she will be allowed to see her son, Crown Prince Michael, three times weekly as long as she is in Roumania.

It was expected that the terms of the agreement would be published Monday. The troubles of the royal family were taken up by the council, composed of representatives of all political parties, after influential groups in Parliament urged that Helene be given charge of the education and upbringing of her son.

8-Cent Opera Seats Offered in Berlin

Berlin, Oct. 29 (A.P.)—German theatergoers are experiencing a season of good productions at rock bottom prices. The palm for cheap seats goes to the theater of the west near the Berlin zoo where Lehar's opera "Paganini" opened the season with seats ranging from 8 to 36 cents.

At these prices the Berlin house underbids the Schiller Theater in Hamburg. Opera can be heard there for from 17 to 80 cents.

Idaho Bank to Reopen; $10,000,000 Available

Boise, Idaho, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The First National Bank of Idaho and its affiliates in Idaho and eastern Oregon will reopen Monday under a reorganized plan which will make available to depositors upward of $10,000,000 for regulated withdrawal, Allan R. Leroy, representative of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, announced here today.

Besides the local bank, others reopening are the Rupert State Bank, the Buhl State Bank, Meridian State Bank, Nampa State Bank, Bank of Emmett, Caldwell State Bank, Weiser State Bank and the Ontario, Oreg., National Bank. The Vale, Oreg., National Bank, which closed August 30, with the rest of the group, has been merged with the Ontario Bank.

GALLERY GLIMPSES

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT

SOMETIME in the next month or two there is going to be such a scramble for quarters on Capitol Hill as has not been seen since the British advance on Washington, or the last quorum call on the Government pay cut, or something.

For some time in the next month or two the United States is going to accept its new House Office Building, now nearing completion. There are just 251 suites in the new building, each one the last word in modern office design. There are 435 representatives.

Architect Lynn, of the Capitol, is trying to break the news gradually to the 184 members left behind. He has workmen cutting doors through partitions, building new two-room suites more spacious than any member hitherto ever enjoyed.

The new building may not be ready before the first week in January. Some of the furnishings may not be installed before the following month. But Speaker Garner, Rules Chairman Pugh and Former Civil Service Chairman Lehlbach will hold an early meeting of the commission in control of the House Office Building, to map plans for the invasion on a strict seniority basis.

YET a more cogent problem is troubling Building Superintendent Edward Brown. It is this—must he, as building custodian, conduct each one of the 251 senior representatives to each one of the 251 offices, and let them take their pick? He favors a gigantic "at home," when legislators may stroll through the structure at their leisure and make their bid. Speaker Garner's commission will decide.

DOWN Hudson County way, in the Twelfth New Jersey Congressional District, Chairman Mary Teresa Norton, of the House District committee, is in the middle of one of the toughest, most disagreeable mud-slinging campaigns of all her eight years in the House.

Not that Representative Mary Teresa Norton doesn't like a good fight. She showed her willingness to do battle in the House last spring when she thought Tom Blanton was blocking her District legislative program. The irony is, her quarrel with Blanton is being used as ammunition against her in the present campaign.

But the Twelfth District's campaign issue pivots not here, but around Mrs. Norton's vote against the bonus. She never addresses a meeting that some heckler doesn't ask her about that vote. Explanation—one Mortimer Neuman, World War veteran, her Republican opponent.

It wasn't candidate Neuman, but Representative Charles Aubrey Eaton, from the Fourth New Jersey District, who called up the Blanton episode. Dr. Eaton told voters Mrs. Norton was censured on the floor for her feud with Blanton. Mrs. Norton said it wasn't so.

News penetrates but slowly from the Twelfth District of New Jersey to the District of Columbia. But the story is that Mrs. Norton called down the Republican wrath of Dr. Eaton upon her own head by an impulsive remark she made at a political meeting. She called Dr. Eaton a "turncoat" on prohibition.

EACH bleak and rainy afternoon a wood fire burns in the Senate Press Gallery's open fireplace. Newspapermen like its cheer. They gather before it to swap information after news foraging through the Capitol.

Last week a new source of fuel was discovered. The handsome, if somewhat old and shaky, wooden railings, partitioning off telegraph and telephone communications of member news services, was replaced by a green enameled metal railing.

With neither house in session, the quest for Capitol news is dull and systematized. A routine "stop" now is the office of South Trimble, clerk of the House, where campaign expenditures, filed under the Federal corrupt practices act, are mulled over each day in search for copy.

But usually they make poor copy. Who cares if the Missouri Association Against Prohibition collected $8,013, or the Pennsylvania Antisaloon League paid out $1,065 of the $1,874 it took in, or the Kentucky Roosevelt Business and Professional League netted $2,258 in contributions?

YET newspapermen, who live in hopes, confidently believe some day there will be a revelation. They continue to make the stop. More interesting, they find occasional chats with itinerant members of Congress, who pause in Washington long enough to air their views on the approaching election.

"Coin" Harvey Utilizes Newest Speech Device

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The country's oldest presidential candidate is using the newest campaign methods.

W. H. (Coin) Harvey, 81-year-old nominee of the Liberty party, who nearly four decades ago gained recognition for his espousal of free silver, along with the late William Jennings Bryan, rolled into Hot Springs last night on a truck equipped with sound amplifiers, which he set up in the public square to deliver his address, "The Depression, Its Cause and Cure."

Farm Leader Has Plan For Federal Supervision

Winfield, Kans., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—John Simpson, president of the National Farmers Union, declared here today "big interests" in the East are attempting to crush the "small business interests of the West" and outlined a plan for Government supervision of agricultural marketing.

He proposed that a "proper department of Government" determine each year what part of each major farm crop is needed for home consumption and what part is available for export.

Historic Clock and Chimes At Charleston Work Again

Bells of St. Michael's Church, Installed in 1764, Captured by British in 1782 and Burned by Sherman in 1865, Are Repaired.

Charleston, S. C., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The old bells of St. Michael's are ringing again. They have been captured by the British, burned by Sherman, but now they are tolling the hours again after a major operation.

The clock and chimes of St. Michael's Protestant Episcopal Church here were installed in 1764, after they arrived from England, where Aynesworth Thwayts, London clockmaker, had made them. It was a 34-hour clock, wound by hand. It was built to strike the hour on a huge bell and the quarter hour on four bells.

A few years ago the clock suffered a general breakdown, and in 1931 it just gave up trying to keep up with time and knocked off. City Council realized that Charleston looked on the clock as a municipal timepiece, and gave a local watchmaker a contract to overhaul it. The workmen found the grease and grime of years had choked the clock, and gave it a thorough renovation and adjustment.

The chimes of the church were brought over with the clock, but were removed by British soldiers when they evacuated Charleston in 1782. They had been taken back to England, where they were purchased by a Charleston merchant, who sent them home. Two of the bells were found to be cracked, and were sent back to England in 1838 and recast.

The bells were sent to Columbia when Charleston became a storm center during the war between the States, and when Sherman burned Columbia the chimes were damaged. The pieces were gathered by the parishioners however, and returned to England, where the successors to the original founders recast them. The bells were returned and installed in 1867.

10 COUNTRIES HOLD ELECTIONS WITHIN NEXT FEW WEEKS

Four Others Already Have Had Their Balloting This Fall.

U. S., GERMANY, SPAIN AND CUBA ARE IN LIST

Most of Electorates Have Had Scant Experience; Depression to Fore.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Ballot markings of citizens in many countries of the world will write new chapters of history in the next few weeks.

At least nine states of Europe and the Americas, in addition to the United States, are astir today with campaigning soon to reach climaxes at the polls. Four other nations already have held elections this fall and recent changes in cabinets have altered the course of a half-dozen countries.

Germany, Chile, Ecuador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Cuba, part of the Irish Free State and Spain and the latter's autonomous state, Catalonia, are to vote just before or after the elections in the United States. Elections were recently held in France, Greece, Hungary and Sweden and cabinet changes were effected in England, Roumania, Belgium, Hungary and Chile. Chile saw the ascendancy of its fifth president in four months.

Spain Baby Republic.

Most of these electorates have had scant experience. Spain has been a republic only a year and a half and Germany, Hungary, Greece and the Free State date their republican governments since the World War. Only in recent years were the electoral privileges broadened in South and Central American republics.

All of these countries have been affected deeply by the depressed economical conditions of the world and, with few exceptions, radical or liberal political schools have forged to the foreground. There are paradoxical exceptions—the gains of conservatives in the reorganization of the British cabinet and the Junker dominance in Germany.

The senatorial elections in France, October 16, saw a further swing to the left, with gains by Premier Edouard Herriot's radical socialists. important factors in the elections in Germany, Greece, Hungary and South America. Hungary's recent by-elections were featured by columns of soldiers and machine guns stationed at polling booths. But with the Gen. Goemboes cabinet succeeding that of Count Koralyi, Hungary found itself without a single titled cabinet member in its history.

Military League Disbanded.

The Military League of Greece, a powerful political factor since 1910, was disbanded after the recent assembly elections there in which Premier Venizelos was victorious. It did not disband, however, until the royalist family recognized the republic for the first time.

Military political activity in Chile and Ecuador has stirred up strong civilian opposition. Those countries are to return to constitutional governments after elections on October 30.

Germany goes into its fifth major election of the year November 6, after being governed five months by a cabinet which lacked sanction of two Reichstags and so dissolved them.

The four main opposition parties—Hitler's National Socialists, the Catholic Center, the Social Democrats and the Communists, of course—have become increasingly radical on the economic issue. Many persons expect the election again will find no party with a clear majority and wonder if Von Papen will attempt to continue his virtual dictatorship by emergency decree.

Chile to Elect Congress.

Chile, where the Blanche military regime and Dav'a's military-fostered socialist rule have been overthrown recently, will elect a congress which will sit as a constitutional assembly. Outstanding reforms sought are revocation of Socialist decrees and extension of self-government in provinces.

Ecuador, where direct election of presidents was authorized in 1929, passed through one of the bloodiest rebellions of its history two months ago, the result of which was a call for elections this October 30 by Alberto Guerrero Martinez, who became acting president.

Martinez Mera, who resigned as minister of the treasury, opposes Manuel Sotomayor Luna, Conservative party choice, for president.

Another October 30 election will be held in Honduras. Angel Zuniga Huete, Liberal; Gen. Tiburcio Carias Andino, Conservative, and Manuel Calix Herrera, Communist-Radical Labor choice, are running for president.

Supervised by United States.

In Nicaragua, where the United States supervises the voting, Dr. Juan Bautista Sacasa, Liberal, and Adolfo Diaz, Conservative, are the approved presidential nominees. Cuba, where six prominent politicians were assassinated in the past few weeks, will vote November 1 in congressional elections.

Spain will fill vacancies in its Congress caused by deaths and the law forbidding deputies to hold any other offical posts. The number to be elected is doubtful, but radical Republicans insist 100 must be chosen. Catalonia, the new autonomous Spanish state, will elect a new assembly.

Two by-elections in the Irish Free State may encourage De Valera to call for a general election if he wins the seats from the Cosgrave opposition. A clear majority in the Dail Eireann would release him from dependence on support of the seven Labor party members.

A month ago in Sweden the Social Democrats gained and Conservatives lost in election of the Riksdag. Albin Hansson succeeded F. T. Hamrin as premier.

MONTGOMERY SITE OF POLITICAL DRIVE

Republicans and Democrats Will Meet at Several Points in County.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post,
9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md.
Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Battle lines are tightening in Montgomery County's sector of the general political battle. Republicans and Democrats alike are seeing to their ammunition and planning last minute sorties. Meetings, large and small, are planned throughout the county by both forces in an effort to swing the fancy of the voter.

Chief of the meetings will be the Republican display tomorrow night at Bethesda and Takoma Park, and a Democratic meeting Tuesday night at Takoma Park. These meetings probably will be major offensives, both sides featuring prominent speakers of national renown, as well as local spellbinders.

Assistant Secretary of War Frederick H. Payne will be the featured speaker at the Republican rallies which will be held in the State Theater at Bethesda and in the Community Hall of the Takoma Presbyterian Church. The speakers will be switched from one meeting to the other in automobiles. Wallace Williams, Republican candidate for the Senate, and Capt. Harold C. Smith, of Rockville, Republican candidate for representative from the Sixth Maryland District, also will talk.

Page Will Preside.

William Tyler Page, of Chevy Chase, will preside at the Bethesda meeting, and Wilson L. Townsend, of Kensington, will preside at Takoma Park. The meetings are held under the auspices of the Republican State central committee for the county.

The Democratic meeting Tuesday night will be held in the Takoma Park Firehouse, and will feature Merton L Corey, lawyer, author and former member of the Federal Farm Loan Board.

Mr. Corey, whose offices are in New York, also serves as financial adviser to a number of cooperative marketing associations and to the government of Puerto Rico. Representative David J. Lewis, candidate for reelection, and E. Barrett Prettyman, well-known lawyer of Washington and Chevy Chase, also are scheduled to talk. J. Bond Smith, president of the Roosevelt-Garner-Tydings - Lewis Club of Montgomery County, will preside and also will make a short talk.

A number of smaller meetings are planned for the week by the Veterans' Democratic Club of Montgomery County, according to Maj. Howard W. Cutler, president. The club is making an active campaign on behalf of the Democratic candidates.

Headquarters Opened.

The Republican State central committee has opened campaign headquarters in Rockville, across from the new courthouse, with Mrs. John A. Holmes in charge. Literature is being distributed to voters and the headquarters houses an active campaign force.

Maj. Howard W. Cutler, president, announced the vice chairmen for each of the thirteen election districts of Montgomery County for the newly organized Veterans' Democratic Club of Montgomery County, as follows: Robert Plummer, Laytonsville; Edmund Burdette, Clarksburg; Robert Heppstone, Brookeville; Lewis J. Ryan, Rockville; Anton Horak, Colesville; W. Kelly Rice, Darnestown; Marc G. Phillips, Bethesda; William H. Gilpin, Olney; Leslie Ward, Gaithersburg; Roy Oden, Potomac; Dunbar P. Padgett, Barnesville; Roy Brandenburg, Damascus, and L. T. Faulconer, Wheaton.

Dr. William John Cooper, commissioner of education, will address a meeting of the Woodside Parent-Teacher Association Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the Woodside School. Dr. Cooper, who is a resident of Montgomery County, will speak on a subject important to all members, according to Stephen James, chairman. Fred S. Henshaw, president, has sent out notices urging all members to be present to hear Dr. Cooper's address and to bring their friends.

A benefit card party will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Masonic Hall, Kensington, by the Women's Community Club of Kensington for the benefit of the Kensington Volunteer Fire Department.

A Bicentennial tree will be planted at the Methodist Home in Gaithersburg, Md., Wednesday at 3:30 p. m., by the Neibhborhood Garden Club of Gaithersburg. The Rev. Herman Wilson, superintendent of the home, will be the principal speaker. The first shovel of earth will be turned by one of the oldest members of the home, a woman 95 years old, according to Mrs. Clyde Thomas, president of the club and general chairman.

The regular semimonthy meeting of the club will be held in Epworth Hall at the home at 1:30 p. m. prior to the tree planting.

Mrs. Donald Bowie has been named chairman of the annual turkey dinner and dance for the benefit of the general church fund of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Aspen, Md. The dinner will be held November 10 at 5 p. m. in the parish hall. An apron sale will be conducted by the Ladies' Guild, of which Mrs. Lynn Campbell is president, as part of the affair.

Assisting Mrs. Bowie are: Mr. and Mrs. Leo L. Greaves, Mrs. R. C. Birney, Mrs. E. Palmer Rabbitt, Mrs. Clayton Rabbitt, Miss Edna Hull, Miss Helen Rabbitt, Charles R. Smith, Miss Margaret E. Carroll and Mrs. Evelyn McIntyre.

The Poolesville Community League will meet tomorrow night at 8 p. m. in the assembly hall at Poolesville, Md. One of the features of the meeting will be reports on the school library and members are urged to bring along books to contribute. A table will be placed to receive the books.

The Ladies' Aid, of the Colesville M. E. Church, will hold its annual oyster and chicken salad supper Friday night beginning at 5:00. The supper will be held in the W. C. T. U. Hall at Colesville, Md.

Cabin John Council, Junior Order of American Mechanics, will hold a dance November 23 at the Junior Hall on Conduit road.

A Halloween dance will be given in St. Martin's Parish Hall, Gaithersburg, Md., tomorrow night at 10 o'clock. Those in attendance are requested to wear costumes. The committee in charge includes A. A. Norris, jr., Maude Wilson, Rose Abert, Eleanor Diamond, Mary Somervell, Mary Hershey, Mrs. A. L. Gloyd, Olive Edmonds, Eulalie Boland, Edna Beall and Leo Waters.

WISE ISSUES DEBATE CHALLENGE TO BYRD

G. O. P. Caravan at Galax After Novel Campaigning in Virginia.

Galax, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Ending the first week of the State-wide barnstorming tour, the Republican congressional caravan stopped here tonight for a political rally before pushing on into the southwest.

Favored by good weather all the way since it embarked from Richmond last Monday, the caravan moved down the Virginia Peninsula for a stop at Newport News, pushed up the Tidewater trail, reaching Alexandria for another major rally, and then, with its band wagon playing, began its Valley campaign with large crowds greeting it along the route.

After last night's stop at Lynchburg, the caravan pushed on to Chatham today, where Congressional Candidate Henry A. Wise challenged Harry F. Byrd, former Virginia governor, to meet him in debate.

The schedule was so full the party was forced to break up at Chatham. Fred McWane went to Danville, Jacob A. Garber to Schoolfield, and Wise and Roland Chase to Martinsville and Stuart.

Redistricting Bill Target.

The caravan reformed at Hillsville and pushed on toward Galax for tonight's speechmaking.

At the end of their week's journey the Republicans had left behind them over a wide Virginia area a sweeping denunciation of the Virginia redistricting bill which the Supreme Court declared invalid, and sharp criticisms of the Democratic organization in the State, centering their attack on former Gov. Harry F. Byrd and Gov. Pollard.

On national issues, the speakers blended praise of President Hoover with criticism of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic presidential choice. Henry W. Anderson, outstanding State Republican, took the New York Governor to task for what he termed a criticism of the United States Supreme Court and an indirect charge that it was controlled by the Republican party.

Praise of the administration's tariff policy was coupled with the charge that the Democrats were insincere in their tariff stand.

Wise Challenges Byrd.

Wise, in speaking of the Byrd statement, said:

"My answer to Gov. Byrd, is that if he wants me to apologize I'll meet him in joint debate and we'll see whether I'll apologize or he'll apologize."

Byrd had objected to what he termed Wise's "veiled charge that Wilson had used the Nation's money to bribe or intimidate delegates to the World War peace conference held in Paris."

The Republican candidate said that Byrd would give him no chance to debate him in the old First District and that "one of Byrd's hand-picked judges told me that if I appeared at Caroline Courthouse the day Byrd was to speak there Gov. Byrd would not speak."

Wise said he resented a remark by former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle that the Republican congressional tour was "undignified."

"I'd like to know when it became undignified for a citizen of Virginia to meet face to face with a fellow Virginian and I'd like to know why our Democratic adversaries are not doing the same thing," he said.

Crockett Services At Virginia Estate

Pocahontas Coal Operator Died Friday After Long Illness.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct 29.—Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow morning at Questover, his country home near here, for Thomas Sawyer Crockett, pioneer Pocahontas, W. Va. coal field operator and chairman of the board of the Leckie Coal Co., of Columbus, Ohio, who died Friday following an illness of two years.

The rites will be held at 11 a. m. by the Rev. J. McL. Carr, pastor of Berryville Presbyterian Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Moore, of Roanoke. Interment will be at Berryville.

In 1902 Mr. Crockett went to the Pocahontas coal fields from Wytheville. He organized the Leckie Coal Co. In 1916 Mr. Crockett became president of the Leckie company, with offices in Columbus, Ohio. A few years later he was made chairman of the board, which office he held to the time of his death.

Legion Post Is Sponsoring Event on Night of Halloween.

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., Oct. 29.—The Culpeper post of the American Legion will sponsor a street celebration here Monday night on Davis street. This street will be roped off from East to Main for the occasion.

Hundreds of costumed merrymakers have been attracted to Davis street for this celebration in the past several years.

The recently organized Culpeper Municipal Band will add attraction to the marrymaking for Haloween night with a masquerade ball, to be given at the Fair Grounds dance hall, with dancing from 9 until 1 o'clock. The band will first play for the street celebration from 7:30 till 9, and then to the dance hall, where they will make up two orchestras, one for the old-time music for the square dancers, and the other for the modern steppers.

Dolls of Many Ages Shown In Gadsby's Tavern Display

Exhibition Is Staged to Assist in Work on Memorial.

By DOLLY PEYTON SHEPPERSON.

Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, Va., always a place that brings to mind the days of Washington and things colonial, and what better setting could be imagined for a showing of dolls of all ages. Dolls that bring to mind the early history of our country and the efforts of the early settlers to provide for the children of that time playthings. One can imagine a mother of the Revolutionary period dressing a doll for her young daughter while listening for sounds of Indians or the British.

Gadsby's Tavern was used as the setting last week for a showing of dolls, doll furniture and clothes stored, lo, these many years in attic chests and brought forth to assist in making money for the restoration of Gadsby's courtyard. The Alexandria Garden Club assumed this work as its part of the complete restoration of this historic spot, replete with the history of our Nation, when the citizens' committee of Alexandria conceived the idea of purchasing and restoring Gadsby's and the City Hotel as a home for the local American Legion Post, and a permanent memorial for the boys who failed to return from that memorable strife of 1917-18. They have completed this wonderful work, with the exception of small shrubs, and in doing so assumed a debt that the members are now working to pay.

The array of dolls was a thing never dreamed of by the committee when plans were first made, for they were brought in by hundreds. Collections of foreign dolls, 110 collected in 85 countries by Mrs. MacDonald Douglass in her travels in the past few years, with a smaller collection owned by Miss Barbara Caton, who is now a student in Wellesley College. A wonderful Chinese group brought back from that country by Mrs. William A. Moncure, who passed 2 years there.

Araminta Arabella Eleanora Matilda Owings, who is, her owner stated, like most women, not willing to tell her exact age, but admitting nearly 100 years, and wearing a gown of lace over that age, is a China lady about 1 inch high, and one wonders if her name stunted her growth, for her owner, Mrs. Harry Griffith, states the name was given the tiny doll by her ancestor who owned her, and she was cautioned never to attempt to change the lady's name.

A doll that attracted unusual interest was one owned by Miss Effie M. Wilkinson, who states her grandmother, Mrs. John Underwood, was given this doll when quite a small girl, wearing the same clothes she still continues to wear, and the doll then looked quite as careworn and old as now. She is hand carved from wood, with fitted joints, and her hair is carved into curls that are painted black. Her gown is of brown taffeta basque, with skirt of a thin brown material, pantalettes with hand made lace and two petticoats, handmade, showing absolutely that she does not belong to the present age.

This doll was left to Miss Effie M. Wilkinson by her grandmother, Mrs. John Underwood, who had owned it since girlhood. It is believed to be one of the oldest in this country.

Mrs. Olag Saugstadt brought a beautiful Parisian lady, wearing a draped gown of pink brocade silk. Mrs. Saugstadt states her mother, when quite a small girl living in London, England, was left at home when her parents made a trip to Paris, and her mother visited Worth to have some gowns made, at the time the late Queen Victoria was having a gown of pink brocade fashioned by this famous designer, and Mrs. Saugstadt's grandfather prevailed upon him to make a dress for a doll to carry home to his little girl, using scraps left from the queen's gown. So far as known this is the only doll dress ever made by Worth. It is wonderfully preserved, but faded.

Two hand-made Indians attracted attention, both with real hair, and the history attached stated the gruesome fact that the hair had been scalped from the heads of enemies and brought home, the mothre using parts to make a plaything for her little one.

FOX HOUNDS RACING IS SET FOR NOV. 12

Piedmont Program at Estate Near Leesburg to Include Four Major Events.

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Preparations are under way at Llangollen, estate of John Hay Whitney, in Loudoun County, for the second annual race meeting of the Piedmont Fox Hounds, oldest recognized hunt in America, to be run Saturday, November 12.

Four events are again carded, with changes in the course being made so as to afford spectators a better view of the finishes.

The meeting, inaugurated last year by Mr. Whitney, in conjunction with the Piedmont Club, and run over a course laid out through the rolling country at Llangollen, built along the lines of the Grand National course at Aintree, attracted a concourse of people estimated at 30,000.

The result was a wild scramble to gain points of vantage near the finishes. The course, therefore, is being changed to bring the finishing points nearer together in the four races at a point in close proximity to a hillock dominating the course.

The four races are the Piedmont Gold Cup, 3 miles over Aiken-type barriers, horses to run twice past spectators, instead of only once as last year; the Ayshire Cup, for hunters, shortened to 3¼ miles; the Llangollen Open Steeplechase, 3 miles over brush, for $5,000 added money and a gold cup to be presented by Mrs. Payne Whitney, and a steeplechase for qualified hunters, 2½ miles over brush.

Included in the changes now being made is the construction of a small stand for owners of horses entered in the races and their trainers. Work of rebrushing the brush course has been in progress for several days.

The Llangollen course is recognized as one of the most difficult and grueling tests for steeplechasers in this country. Especially is this true of the solidly-built brush course.

The timber course, built throughout of Aiken-type fences, also is formidable. The fence rises between piles of dry sapplings, stretching for four to five feet on both take-off and landing slides. A clean jump is necessary to negotiate them, though the top timber is sufficiently light to give way under a heavy impact.

The course lies along the edge of the Blue Ridge Mountains, through a part of Llangollen, which has been painstakingly prepared for steeplechasing. Every foot of the course has been raked and made smooth and safe for horses, but in the difficulty of its barriers it remains one of America's premier courses.

TRAPP WINS TROPHY IN ALBEMARLE HUNT

Entries From West Virginia, Virginia and Kentucky Compete in Meet.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 29.—The annual hunter trials of the Albemarle County hunt, held today over a course at Wavertree Hall and Portaferry, estates of Col. H. D. Newcomb and George L. Maxwell, of New York and Greenwood, attracted entries from Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia.

The trophy in the class for green hunters, offered by Mrs. William Massie, of Richmond, was won by Wilbur Osborne's Trapp, ridden by Miss Betty Lee, of the university, while that in the event for lightweight hunters, presented by Mrs. Randolph Ortman, of New York, went to Forest Ward's North Call.

Mrs. A. M. Keith's Skoal annexed the plate offered by Gordon Smith, of Richmond, in the class for middle and heavyweight hunters.

Fiskie and Atalanta, two geldings owned and ridden by H. D. and J. C. Newcomb, of Greenwood, were awarded the silver cups offered by D. A. Langhorn, of Lynchburg, and George L. Maxwell, of New York, in the event for pairs of hunters.

The judges were Mason Hoagland, of Nashville, master of the Harpets Hills hunt; Page Lewis, of Southport, Conn.; William Cottrell and William Caughan, of Richmond, and A. W. Ward, Charlottesville.

There were 22 entries in the event for lightweight hunters.

Summaries:

Green hunters—won by Trapp, Wilbur Osborne, Gordonsville; second, Gay Fellow, H. D. Newcomb, Greenwood; third, Mystery, A. M. Hirsh, Hot Springs, Va.; fourth, Happy Creek Birdman, Mrs. Allen Potts, Gordonsville.

Pair of hunters—Won by Fiskie and Atalanta, H. D. and J. C. Newcomb, Greenwood; second, North Call and Sunny Girl, Forest Ward and Rodger Rinehart; third, Trapp and Happy Creek Birdman, Wilbur Osborne and Mrs. Allen Potts; fourth, Skoal and Mary May, Mrs. A. M. Keith, University of Virginia.

Prisoner Gains First Down But Loses as Police Tackle

Houdini had a little more finesse but Henry S. Thorne, 453 Delafield place northwest, is just as adept at getting out of cells as the great one, police of the Silver Spring substation, Montgomery County police discovered yesterday.

Arrested by Policeman Charles Barnes on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, Thorne was placed in the cellroom at the substation. He didn't like the surroundings and moved to get out. As he left the cell he took the door and its frame with him.

Several husky policemen went into a flying tackle and he didn't get far with his bid for freedom, but the cell was in no condition for recalcitrant prisoners. Thorne was moved to the new jail at Rockville, Md., where he found that his jailbreaking ability had suffered a cramp.

WINNERS SELECTED IN GARDEN CONTEST

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Fairfax 166.

County Agricultural Agent H. B. Derr, of Fairfax County, has announced the winners of the Bicentennial garden contest which has been in progress for the past several months.

In Herndon district the winner of the Bicentennial medal was Daniel Detwiler; those receiving honorable mention were Harry Bready, Dr. William Meyer and Mrs. Harry A. Sager. In the Vienna district Miss R. Gibson was the winner of the medal, with Mrs. Harry Blake, the Vienna Library and Triangle Park receiving honorable mention.

In the school contest the Annandale School was awarded first place and will be given a Bicentennial banner. For the greatest improvement around the homes during the year, Mrs. Clara Barringer, of Vienna, received first prize and will also receive a Bicentennial banner. The home of Mrs. G. Ashley Money, of Colvin Run, placed second.

Judging in the county contest was done by the Washington Bicentennial organization, under the direction of Mrs. Lillian Wright Smith, assisted by a local committee composed of Mrs. Harry Blake, of Oakton; Mrs. L. P. Tayloe, of Vienna, and Mrs. W. T. Westcott, of Falls Church, and Dr. F. L. Mulford, a landscaping authority.

Miss Sarah E. Thomas, Fairfax County home demonstration agent, will give two demonstrations this week on "Cheerful Surroundings for the Home," the first at a meeting of the Home Demonstration Club at Forestville, on Tuesday, and at the Home Demonstration Club at Annandale, on Wednesday.

Thursday, in the Grange Hall, on the Georgetown-Leesburg pike, at Forestville, the annual home demonstration clubs' achievement day celebration will be held. The program includes an address by Mrs. Margaret C. Vosbury, of Merrifield, president of the county demonstration agents advisory board, followed by reports from the nine home demonstration clubs of the county. A report of the progress of the work during the year will be made by Miss Thomas.

The afternoon session will be devoted to a discussion of the Home Makers Club, with talks by Miss R. Belle Burke, State home demonstration agent; Mrs. Nelson Beck, State president of the Home Makers Association; Mrs. C. C. Lynn, of the Prince William County Home Makers Clubs, and Mrs. A. Harmon Roberts, of Mount Vernon.

The Republicans of Fairfax County, Va., have arranged for two local meetings this week. Judge John Barton Phillips, of Alexandria, will be the principal speaker at a rally Friday night in the town hall in Vienna. The second meeting will be Saturday night at Forestville on the Georgetown-Dranesville pike.

Democratic clubs of Fairfax County will continue their program of public meetings this week. Wednesday Representative Howard W. Smith, of the Eighth Virginia Congressional District, will meet with the Fairfax County Democratic executive committee in the courthouse at Fairfax, to formulate last minute plans.

Thursday night the Young Democrats Club of the county will hold a rally in the auditorium of the Franklin Sherman High School at McLean. Wilbur C. Hall, member of the House of Delegates from Loudoun County, and Charles Pickett, of Fairfax, will be the principal speakers.

Winchester Scout Gets Scholarship for Rescue

Winchester, Va., Oct. 29.—Scout Charles Mort, of Winchester, son of Mrs. May McCarthy, has been awarded a two-year scholarship at a New York military academy for saving the life of a youth here several years ago, Scout Executive Frank B. Horton stated today.

Last year, Scout Mort was awarded a gold medal for his meritorious work and in addition was given a $500 Carnegie Foundation fund collegiate scholarship.

Days Selected for Civil Cases.

Judge Paul E. Brown, of the Fairfax County Trial Justice Court, has announced that beginning Tuesday all civil cases in that court will be heard on Tuesday and Thursday of each week, beginning at 10 o'clock, immediately following the criminal cases.

Then Sebastian, a substitute from Sharon, Pa., who was taking the part of the ailing captain, Paul Reider, raced for Notre Dame's end.

One half back blocked out Paul Host, Raider end and captain. Sebastian sped for the far sideline. Quickly he cut back, stepping daintily out of the arms of three headlong tacklers, and his battered mates had time to get in front of them. With fiendish precision, they cut down the Notre Dame secondary and Sebastian dashed across the goal without a hand having been laid upon him.

It was an amazing shock to Notre Dame, and the great throng as well, but there was more to come, swifter, almost, than it takes to tell.

Passing desperately, as soon as he got his hands on the next kick-off Al McGuff a substitute half back, hurled his second effort straight into the arms of Ted Dailey, one of Pitt's two mighty ends.

Dailey took the ball on a dead run as he came up from Notre Dame's 25-yard line, and in a flash was over the goal.

Both attempts at the extra point were blocked.

Perhaps the strangest picture of all was the sight then of a Notre Dame team, its assurance and cohesion absolutely destroyed, passing wildly like a bunch of high school kids in a demoralized effort to come back. But the Panthers, exhausted, picking each other up laboriously after each play, had enough left to stop that kind of play and remain in Notre Dame territory until the final whistle.

Two Scores Made In Minute.

Never before has a Notre Dame team of modern history been scored upon twice in one minute. Nothing like it has happened to the Green Raiders since Southern California, last fall, caught Notre Dame in the last period and came from behind to overcome a two-touchdown lead and win out 16 to 14.

With laterals and line drives working neatly, but for small gains, Notre Dame drove 38 yards to Pitt's 25-yard line in the first quarter; marched and passed 50 to the Panther 18 in the second quarter; drove 40 yards to within 8 of the goal in the third; and were pressing again after a 40-yard march in the fourth when the lightning struck.

Almost at the start of the fourth period, Pittsburgh was in a hole that seemed bottomless. Trying to punt, after another desperate stand, Bob Hogan was driven back to his 1-foot line. But he tried again, and through the arms of the raging Notre Dame forwards he sailed a punt 70 yards in the high, cold wind to the Notre Dame 33-yard line.

Notre Dame, through its early power, had a wide edge in first downs, counting 16 to Pitt's 6. Notre Dame gained 173 yards from scrimmage; Pitt, 164. Notre Dame completed 10 out of 29 forward passes for 85 yards of gain, while Pitt tried only 3 and completed none.

Wind-Blown Punts Thrill Crowd.

The punts, particularly with the wind, were amazing all day and several boots traveled through the air over 60 yards. In the first period, Koken got off a hoist standing on his own 28-yard line that Sebastian chased to the Pitt goal, fumbled, and then was tackled over the goal line by Alexander, Notre Dame center. On first sight it appeared the Raiders had scored a safety, but officials ruled it a touch-back.

The victory gave the Panther an impressive record without defeat this season. After beating Army, 18 to 13, Pittsburgh was held to a scoreless tie by Ohio State last week, however.

The line-up and summary:

Stanford Is Upset By U. C. L. A., 13-0

Warner's Men Turned Back Second Straight Week; 55,000 Present.

Olympic Stadium, Los Angeles, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—An active young Bruin football team from the University of California at Los Angeles struck an impudent paw in Stanford's gridiron pie today by winning, 13 to 6, from the Indians before 55,000 spectators.

Two blocked punts by Verdi Boyer, a sophomore guard, were the weapons of offense which turned Coach Glenn (Pop) Warner's razzle-dazzle crew back for its second consecutive trouncing at the hands of a team from the southern section of the State.

Middies Lose To Powerful Quakers

55,000 See Running and Passing Attack Score Twice.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—A rugged University of Pennsylvania gridiron machine said it with power today to grind down a stubborn Navy team and hammer out a 14-to-0 victory for its fifth straight conquest of an undefeated season.

It was the power of the punt and the power of a formidable running onslaught and the power of a well-directed, well-timed passing attack that gained the Red and Blue revenge for two successive defeats at the hands of the Midshipmen in 1930 and 1931.

Twice Pennsylvania struck swiftly with scoring plays and three times battered its way within the Navy 5-yard line only to be hurled back by a Blue line that knew how to fight when the situation looked the gravest.

Navy Puts on Good Show.

Two thousand blue-caparisoned midshipmen accompanied the team here from Annapolis and the Navy put on a swell show, but Pennsylvania played better football. It was George Munger, a dashing half back from Merion, Pa., and Don Kellett, a crafty punter from Brooklyn, who eventually stole the show from the Annapolis troupe before a crowd of 55,000 persons, the largest to throng Franklin Field this year.

In the second period, after Pennsylvania had marched straight down the field from its own 33-yard line to the Middies' 15-marker, Munger, who had replaced Kellett in the back field, climaxed the onslaught with a 20-yard forward pass to Pennypacker as the latter, substituting for Cecil Burnett, wingman, raced into the end zone.

This gave the Quakers their first touchdown and Bud Smith, hurriedly brought in from the bench, place-kicked the goal to make the score 7 to 0.

Munger Again Comes Through.

Then again in the fourth period, after a scoreless third, Munger once more stepped into the breach. The quarter had just started with Penn holding the ball on the Navy 23-yard line as a result of an exchange of punts. Masavate clicked off 8 yards through left tackle and then the Merion flash, again substituting for Kellett, took the ball on a right end dash of 15 yards for the second score. Carl Perina scored the extra point with a place kick.

Aside from these two lightning-like scoring thrusts, the game, the seventeenth between the two institutions, resolved itself largely into a punting duel and a test of Navy's ability to hold when its goal line was in direct danger.

Kellett and Perina handled the kicking for the Pennsylvanians, while Gordon Chung-Hoon, the Hawaiian flash, and Bill Clark, the speedy half back from Garner, Iowa, did this chore for the Navy. But it was Kellett who captured the kicking honors through the sheer accuracy of his punts. Three times he deftly kicked the ball out of bounds within the Middies' 5-yard line.

The Annapolis line was a tower of strength with the team against the goal posts, but it was the offensive power of the Penn forwards that paved the way for the Red and Blue victory. Led by Roy Engle at center and Capt. Stan Sokolis and Howard Colehower, the giant tackles, the Penn line breached the Navy defenses continually.

For the greater part of the game, Pennsylvania was in the enemy's territory and only the lack of a scoring punch on three occasions at least

6-0 VICTORY SCORED BY COLUMBIA

32,000 See Cornell Go to Defeat; Lion's Slate Clean.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—One brilliant thrust through the air, a 46-yard forward pass from Cliff Montgomery to Tony Matal for a touchdown in the first period, enabled Columbia's rugged football team to whip its old rival, Cornell, 6 to 0, and preserve the Lions' clean slate today for the benefit of a capacity crowd of 32,000 spectators.

This single "perfect play," which saw Columbia's great end safely elude Cornell's defense and scamper 25 yards across the goal line after making the catch, was the only offensive thrill in the entire contest. Two sturdy, well-coached defensive lines, Columbia's backed by the star roving center, Newell Wilder, and Cornell's supported by the hard tackling of Capt. Bart Viviano, otherwise fought each other to a standstill for three full periods.

Montgomery's superb punting, a big factor most of the game, helped put Columbia in position for its one scoring punch. The Lions had just stopped Cornell's first threat on the Lion 30-yard line when Montgomery quick-kicked 65 yards. Columbia got the ball on Cornell's 45-yard line after Ferraro's return punt, and the touchdown pass worked on the first play.

Thereafter, neither team showed anything but a few brief offensive flashes, none of which was sustained. The extent of the stalemate, as the defense held the upper hand, was revealed by the fact Cornell made only one of four first downs and gained 52 yards by rushes compared with three first downs and 42 yards for Columbia.

Loyola Loses by 28-6 To Western Maryland

Baltimore, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Bill Shepherd, sophomore full back, led Western Maryland to a 28-to-6 victory over Loyola College, of Baltimore here today.

The terror star registered three touchdowns and four extra points, while Jimmy Dunn got the other touchdown for Western Maryland.

California Tramples Over Nevada by 38-0

Memorial Stadium, Berkeley, Calif., Oct. 19 (A.P.).—California's Bears overpowered a game but greatly outclassed University of Nevada eleven today, 38-0, in a football game that developed chiefly into a brisk workout for a long string of substitutes.

With his mind on the important clash with Southern California a week hence, Coach Bill Ingram started his second-string Bears and alternated them with reserves, mostly of lower rating, as the encounter wore on.

Poppelman Leads Maryland To 12-7 Win Over V. M. I.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Maryland's Old Liners defeated the V. M. I. Cadets, 12 to 7, here today with a staggering fourth-period offensive. Ray Poppelman's 52-yard touchdown run provided the margin of victory.

Sent into the game as substitute full back, the big Poppelman, who was thrown off the Maryland squad last week and reinstated after he publicly apologized for striking a player in practice, today was the hero of the victors.

With his eleven trailing at the short end of a 7 to 6 score in the middle of the final period, he crashed over right tackle and raced down the sidelines, more than half the field, for the touchdown that downed the Cadets.

V. M. I. scored in the first two minutes of the game. Bill Smith, the Cadet quarter back, went 16 yards through a right tackle hole for the first tally. He then place-kicked the extra point.

Maryland Comes Back In Third Period.

Maryland's comeback started in the third period. Widmyer's spectacular running from this right half back position paved the way for the first Old Line touchdown, and then his speed took him away from V. M. I. tacklers on an end sweep for the goal.

Two other Maryland marches were halted at the goal line, and for a while it appeared that V. M. I. would eke out a win.

The Maryland attack redoubled its fury in the final period. The Old Liners drove to the V. M. I. 2-yard line, only to be stopped. It was after being thus repulsed that Poppelman settled the battle.

Maryland piled up ten first downs—eight of them in the last half—to six for V. M. I.

The V. M. I. score came in short order after Urick kicked off over the Maryland goal. Maryland's return of the kick-off was short. Gaining the ball on the 40-yard line, V. M. I. started its march. Smith hit the right tackle for 10. Law plunged

BROWN MUCH SUPERIOR TO CRIMSON

Underrated Foe Runs and Passes Way to Two Goals.

HARVARD STADIUM, Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 29 (U.P.).—A scrappy and alert Brown University eleven provided an upset today by removing Harvard from the unbeaten column, 14 to 0.

Harvard, until recently high scorer of the East, was outrushed, outpassed, and outpunted, and was powerless before the savage assaults of the underrated Bruin.

Renewing a football rivalry dating back to 1893, the two teams appeared fairly even in the scoreless first period. But in the second the undefeated Brown made a touchdown, pushed across another in the third period, and was threatening the Crimson goal line at the final whistle. Harvard fumbles at crucial points contributed to Brown's success.

Brown Outplays Harvard.

Brown made 10 first downs against Harvard's 8; gained 216 yards by rushing, against the Crimson's 134; and completed 5 for a total of 75 yards, while Harvard completed only 2 for a total gain of 9 yards.

In the first minute of the game, Jack Crickard, Harvard's star back, dashed 70 yards, but his "touchdown" was nullified because both teams were offside.

Brown's first touchdown climaxed an 80-yard march begun after Harvard had punted to the rival 20-yard line. Behind perfect interference, Gilmartin, Brown left half back, raced around right end for 40 yards. Buonanno, substitute back, shot a pass which Gammino, substitute full back, snatched for a net gain of 18 yards. Gammino bolted around right end to the 6-yard line, from which point Buonanno smashed through center for a touchdown, Chase adding the extra point.

Fordham Defeated By Boston College

27-Yard Placement Gives Margin in Unexpected Victory.

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Oct. 29 (U.P.). An underrated Boston College eleven defeated Fordham, 3 to 0, here today to hand the New York team its second successive reverse of the season.

A 27-yard placement kick from a difficult angle by Ed Kelley, right half back, gave Boston College its score midway in the third period.

The victors had recovered a Fordham fumble on Fordham's 32-yard line and advanced to the 9-yard line before their running attack was stopped.

Elis Register First 1932 Triumph

Preserve Tradition of Bowl by 39-Yard Drive to Goal.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

YALE BOWL, New Haven, Conn., Oct. 29.—A mixed diet of chagrin, hope and raw meat since last week's game with the West Point Cadets invigorated the Yale Football Team this afternoon and the boys licked Dartmouth, 6 to 0, for the entertainment of a skeletonized attendance in the Yale Bowl.

The result accorded with a tradition of 48 years' standing which holds that no Dartmouth team can ever beat a Yale team, but it was contrary to the expectations of all save, possibly, those intimately connected with the Yale football organization. They probably expected to win. They were expected to win, for that is the required mental attitude of a football team.

But the Green team from the New Hampshire hills was very confident of winning this time, for the first time in the history of a rivalry begun in 1884 and carried on intermittently since then in sixteen encounters including today's. A couple of the Dartmouth athletes had confided to a noncombatant Yale the night before that this game would be a pushover, with Dartmouth the pusher and Yale and precedent the pushees.

The change in the Yale team between one week-end which found the boys slow, clumsy and always in their own way, and the next week-end which brought them their first victory of the year, was largely wrought by two new guards, Al Converse and Jimmy De Angelis.

Heavy-Duty Men Relieved.

They were sent into the line in place of Bronkie and Barnum, two heavy-duty types, who were slow in their get-along in the Army game and cluttered up the paths of the backs in their unhappy efforts to get away for little journeys with the ball. Converse is a gilded youth with Wall street connections and a Greenwich, Conn., social background, who conducts a daily short column on the Yale News under the name of Hamath, which other journalists on the staff have decoded as Ham Athlete.

De Angelis, who shared so much

Whelan Fails Two Yards From Goal

50-Yard Drive Ends as Crusaders' Line Stops C. U. Ace.

Sheary Is Forced to Make Safety After 4th Period Starts.

Special to The Washington Post.

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 29.—Holy Cross turned back a stubborn, well-conditioned and primed Catholic University eleven here today by a score of 8 to 0, incidentally toppling the Cardinals from the unbeaten class and ending their consecutive wins at eleven. Outplayed during the first half, the Crusaders came back strong in the third period, and in the final quarter rose to their heights, capitalizing on Cardinal errors, to punch out a touchdown and a safety for the margin of victory.

The Cardinals were by far the best conditioned, best coached and strongest team seen here this year. They halted the strong Holy Cross running attack all through the first half and stopped the overhead attack in the third quarter. The Cardinals fought half of the game inside Holy Cross territory, led by their ace, Tommy Whalen, who brought continuous cheers from the 8,000 spectators by his brilliant ball-carrying. He repeatedly tore off gains, ably supported by two Worcester boys, John Jankowski and Lester Sheary and well directed by Charlie MvVean. The Cardinals certainly looked as though they might topple the Crusaders.

Whelan Fails to Score.

But the all-American bugaboo may have been responsible for the poor judgment in trying to have Whelan score on the best touchdown opportunity the Cardinals had. From his own 48-yard line, McVean, by a well-directed attack, alternating Whelan and Jankoswki with Sheary, advanced the ball to the Crusader 3-yard line at second down. McVean then called on Whelan twice, but he was repulsed both times and the Crusaders took the ball.

In the final few minutes of the last quarter Tony Rovinski put Holy Cross into the game by a well-placed kick outside on the Cardinals' 3-yard line. Then it was that the visitors either crossed up their signals or went haywire on the very first lineup. Sheary, back in the kicker's position, was forced to make a safety as the ball came to him after caroming off the leg of McVean.

Tommoy O'Connor, Holy Cross quarter back, then took White's kick from his own 15-yard line and by a splendid exhibition of side-line running, raced back to the Cardinals' 22-yard line.

From this point on the Crusaders were not to be stopped. They had been held all afternoon, had a taste of good fortune and were now driving hard. The line came to life, outcharged the visitors and Rovinski on two successive plays advanced to the Cardinal 11-yard line.

Tom O'Connor followed with a

TRED AVON BEATS EQUIPOISE IN $15,000 LAUREL RACE

Labrot Filly, 8-1, Scores By Head

Outgames Whitney's Star in Gruelling Stretch Duel.

Mate Falters Near End After Making Great Bid.

By WALTER HAIGHT.

TRED AVON, considered the best filly ever foaled in Maryland, and with the ashy and black coat that distinguishes the get of Sir Greysteel, triumphed in a most thrilling finish of a string of nineteen Washington Handicaps before 20,000 turf fans at Laurel yesterday afternoon.

Sandwiched between Equipoise, the C. V. Whitney star, and Mate, the rejuvenated Preakness winner of last year, so close that the jockeys' legs appeared to touch, the game little mare had her head in front for her margin of victory in the $15,000 added race. The judges ruled Equipoise second and Mate third, with that measurement described as a nose.

Equipoise backers moaned as the Whitney star appeared to be leaving another race at the barrier. He did everything but tear down the stalls before Starter Milton ordered him placed on the outside. After eleven and a half minutes, they left the barrier. Pilate's early speed carried him to the front, followed by Rehoboth and Snapback as the field passed the judges' stand the first time.

Tred Avon in Third Position.

Tred Avon went to third place going up the back stretch and Equipoise and Mate began to move. Rehoboth threw up the sponge on the swing for the stretch and Pilate was tiring. Equipoise, under Workman's handling, slid to the inside before entering the stretch. Tred Avon was now in front and Mate was coming up on the outside.

At the quarter pole Equipoise and Tred Avon were battling head and head, but Mate was rushing. At the mutuel board only necks separated them. Bobby Jones lurched Tred Avon at the wire to take the decision, when a blanket could have covered the trio.

Trainer Fred Hopkins announced after the race that Equipoise will be retired for the remainder of the year. The sterling son of Pennant has won ten of his fourteen starts and $107,375 this season.

The closing day proved as much of a jinx for Jockey Sylvia Coucci as opening day, when he was suspended. He tumbled off Welcome Gift in a jam at the clubhouse turn, in the first race, and suffered a broken collar bone. Coucci will not ride again this season, he said, after the accident.

Sarada, Field Horse, Triumphs.

Sir Galahad III sent another stake-winning son to the post to join the great Gallant Fox, Gallant Sir and the others. It was Sarada, out of Sari, which was to provide a startling upset in the Spalding-Lowe-Jenkins Handicap. The victory returned $7,275 to F. A. Griffith, the winning owner, and proved another triumph for Maryland's money rider, Jockey R. Leishman.

Sarada, grouped in the field, paid a $39 mutuel, and long shots filled out the mutuel board when Wave On, from the Sagamore Stable, was second and Golden Way, A J. E. Widener representative, took the show money. Pomponius, Coe's color-bearer, was fourth.

Among the beaten were Sun Archer, a favorite that hovered around even money for the 15 minutes preceding the race; Balois, Crowning Glory and other juveniles which have made their mark in fast company this year.

The start was delayed for eleven minutes, principally because of Pomponious and Acautaw. The latter broke the barrier tape three times and finished off by snapping it again as Starter Milton let them go. Balios was first to show in front, followed by Wave On and Crowning Glory, as the field bottled around the clubhouse turn. Sarada, breaking from the outside position, was sixth beside Sun Archer. On the trip up the back stretch, Golden Way made a move from next to last position, coming up on the outside with a rush, but Balios and Wave On were still battling for the lead at the far turn. At the swing into the stretch, Sarada came through a narrow opening near the rail. Balios was tiring and Wave On appeared the winner a quarter from the finish. Sarada and Golden Way came up with a rush, Sarada to win by a length from Wave On and Golden Way to take the show.

Gala Time Winner At 10-1 Odds.

Gala Time, High Time filly, left the maiden ranks in the opener but it took odds of almost 10 to 1 and a fine ride by Jockey Bejshak to turn the trick. Reservist, a long shot, was second in front of Cruising. The last named was placed on the outside at the start and had to battle his way to the front, where he set the pace until the quarter pole, where Gala Time moved up to take the decision. Cruising tired sufficiently to let Reservist into the place money. Welcome Gift lost Jockey Coucci at the clubhouse turn.

Kneehigh, thought to be over her head in the second race, fooled the favorite players by slipping over a victory on General Court and Marse Robert. Boscobel, the medium of strong play, was nowhere in a terrible reversal of form.

Preston Burch's Tambour, making her first start of the year, made a show of her field in the third race. Pancho Lopez was the second one in front of Curacao. As usual, the game was to catch Pancho Lopez and Tambour proved entirely capable, coming up in the stretch under Hanford's guiding to win by five lengths.

Racoon and Modern Times won the last two races.

TARS PRIMED FOR MARION TODAY

To Clash at Gonzaga Stadium; Stantons Meet Terrys.

A BELATED Navy Day celebration is planned by the Seamen Gunners when they meet the Marion eleven today at Gonzaga Stadium in the feature game of the Independent League. The game will start promptly at 3 o'clock.

Although the Gunners are confident of taking their neighborhood rivals into camp, they are not favored to do so, for the Marions lead the race with two victories and no defeats, whereas the Seamen have only two tie games to show for their efforts.

Both the Mercury and Maryland Clubs held the Tars on even terms, but the big, green-jerseyed Marion machine mowed down both teams in previous games.

Terry's Service team, defending its 150-pound title, meets the up-and-coming Stanton A. C. in the outstanding game of their division. Joe Sweeney, former Mohawk and Celtic star, is coaching the Stantons, and the team has made rapid progress under his guidance. Whether it has progressed far enough to conquer the undefeated Terrymen remains to be seen.

St. Stephen's, battling to retain its 135-pound crown, runs into head winds today, meeting a determined Mercury squad. Northeast Trojans surprised by holding the Saints to a scoreless tie last week and Mercury has visions of finishing the job today.

The schedule follows:

UNLIMITED.

Maryland A. C. vs. Mercury A. C., Seat Pleasant Field, 3 p. m.; officials, Crandall and Givens. Seaman Gunners vs. Marions, Gonzaga Field, 3 p. m.; officials, O. Mitchell and Sweeney.

150-POUND CLASS.

Terry's Service Station vs. Stantons, Silver Spring Field, 3 p. m.; officials, McDonald and Hingster. Meridians vs. Blue Coats, Dor-A Field, 3 p. m.; referee, Workman.

135-POUND CLASS.

Palace A. C. vs. Longest Coal Co., Silver Spring Field, 1 p. m.; official, McDonald. St. Stephens vs. Mercury Preps, Tidal Basin No. 2, 2 p. m.; referee, Kall. Rock Creek Servicenter vs. Northeast Boys Club, Gonzaga Field, 1 p. m.; officials, O. Mitchell and Gates.

ALS SEXTET DRILS.

One of the strongest girls' basket ball teams in the city, Als A. C., will begin practicing for the coming season Tuesday night at Central High School, starting at 8:30 o'clock. New candidates are wanted. They should report at this practice.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALA TIME, $21.20, $8.90, $5.20; RESERVIST, $41.80, $17.30; CRUISING, $5.10.

GALA TIME, avoiding interference going to the first turn and securing a forward position, responded stoutly to pressure, wore CRUISING down gradually and outfinished RESERVIST, although tiring badly at the end. Latter, prominent throughout, came willingly in the final drive. CRUISING, hard ridden to take command, stalled off early contention from UNION, came very wide into the home stretch and hung nearing the end. UNION came again after dropping back. SWINHAVEN could never threaten the leaders. JUDGE JUDY tired. WELCOME GIFT was crowded going to the first turn and lost his rider.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:22. Off at 2:23½. Winner, N. E. Stanton's ch. f. (3), by Bladin—Seadrift. Trained by P. H. Mepham. Value to winner, $700; second, $200; third, $100. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:42 2-5, 1:49 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNEEHIGH, $13.80, $6.40, $3.90; GENERAL COURT, $7.90, $5.70; MARSE ROBERT, $13.00.

KNEEHIGH, saving ground at the first turn, and kept closer up than usual, came to the outside of GENERAL COURT and outstayed the latter in a hard drive the last furlong. GENERAL COURT displaced UNENCUMBERED when midway of the back stretch, was taken into the firmer footing and continued gamely when overtaken. MARSE ROBERT, forced wide for the entire trip, finished stoutly. UNENCUMBERED weakened from his early efforts. MISS CORINNE could not reach the leaders. BOSCOBEL was poorly ridden while showing a very dull effort.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Westover. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:53. Winner, P. M. Burch's b. f. (4), by General Thatcher—Castanet. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $200; third, $100. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAMBOUR, $6.70, $4.50, $3.80; PANCHO LOPEZ, $6.30, $4.80; CURACAO, $3.20.

TAMBOUR, restrained in near attendance of the pacemakers, gained command with a rush when entering the home stretch and drew out as if much the best. PANCHO LOPEZ, showing his usual early speed, was steadied in front, saved ground where the footing was best, and held on well when displaced. CURACAO, strongly urged throughout, continued with good energy for the final drive. THE BEASEL could never improve her position. BROADWAY LIGHTS came wide from the beginning. ENGLISH KNIGHT was overmatched.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $5,000 added. The Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:22. Off at 3:33. Winner, F. A. Griffith's dk. br. c. (2), by Sir Galahad III—Sari. Trained by William Mulholland. Value to winner, $7,275; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $150. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:42 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SARADA (field), $39.00, $13.10, $6.20; WAVE ON, $31.60, $19.10; GOLDEN WAY, $10.50.

SARADA, quick to get going and kept in the thick of contention, weaved through a narrow passage when reaching the far turn, wore WAVE ON down when reaching the final furlong pole, and drew out slowly. WAVE ON forced a stiff pace while following BALIOS, gained a brief lead when straightened into the home stretch, but could not withstand the winner. GOLDEN WAY, away clearly, went very wide at the first turn and for the remainder of the journey. He showed a splendid effort. POMPONIUS saved ground when able, but came wide in the last half mile. BALIOS hurried to the front and rated, weakened in the final drive. SUN GROS closed a good gap when clear. SUN ARCHER, taken up directly after the break, was unable to reach contention. RUSH HOUR was caught in the barrier when he reared into the air. ACAUTAW lunged through the barrier repeatedly and had early speed. CROWNING GLORY tired badly.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $15,000 added. The Washington Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:13½. Winner, S. W. Labrot's dk. gr. f. (4), by Sir Greysteel—La Muiron. Trained by W. Irvine. Value to winner, $14,800; second, $2,000; third, $1,000; fourth, $250. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:13 1-5, 1:39 3-5, 2:05 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRED AVON, $19.50, $6.40, $3.60; EQUIPOISE, $3.40, $2.90; MATE, $3.60.

TRED AVON, reserved within striking distance of the pacemakers, moved up sharply when leaving the back stretch, wore PILATE down rapidly and, holding on with rare courage, just lasted to stall off EQUIPOISE. Latter, forced wide for the first mile, went to the leaders with a bold rush, swung to the inside and finished resolutely. MATE improved his position on the outside and came fastest of all approaching the finish. WHITE CLOVER II closed gamely, but could not threaten the leaders. REHOBOTH showed a good test for the first mile. LATE DATE had no mishaps. ST. BRIDEAUX was shuffled back going to the first turn, saved ground thereafter, but was not good enough. PILATE collapsed badly in the final five-sixteenths.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:48½. Winner, Brookmeade Stable's b. g. (5), by Wrack—Robinetta. Trained by R. A. Smith. Value to winner, $700; second, $200; third, $100. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14 2-5, 1:42 3-5, 1:49 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RACCOON, $17.40, $9.50, $5.40; TRY IT, $8.60, $5.80; SWATTER, $5.00.

RACCOON outran his field to the first turn and, kept out in the best footing, shook off repeated efforts from AEGIS and, strongly urged, lasted to stall off TRY IT. Latter, a sluggish beginner, was steered wide from the start, settled in his stride and closed with a tremendous rush on the extreme outside. SWATTER saved a lot of ground when straightened into the home stretch and outfinished AEGIS. Latter kept close up in the early stages, weakened suddenly in the final furlong. CREE showed an even effort. TUG O' WAR tired when the real test came.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:15. Off at 5:16½. Winner, L. H. Miner's br. f. (4), by Pataud—Margaret Lawrence. Trained by R. L. Rites. Value to winner, $700; second, $200; third, $100. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:45 3-5, 1:15 2-5, 1:42, 1:48 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MODERN TIMES, $17.50, $7.70, $5.00; THE DOCTOR (entry), $5.30, $3.60; COLOSSAL, $4.20.

MODERN TIMES, going in her best form and kept close to the pace, went into command when straightened into the home stretch, drew clear, but had to be stoutly urged to stall off THE DOCTOR. Latter, put to a drive in the last half mile, closed full of run. COLOSSAL made a strong effort when entering the home stretch and finished gamely. MUD was used up chasing FULL DRESS and he weakened while saving ground at the end. BUSHMAN took a wide course the entire trip. BIDE A WEE had no excuses. POLITEN saved ground, but was not good enough. FULL DRESS weakened midway of the final turn.

DAVIS MEETS LEWIS IN RING

Portner's Headliner Tomorrow Looms Promising.

THIRTY-TWO rounds of boxing, with Roddy Davis, the "Capital Limited," and Patsy Lewis, of Baltimore, claiming the spotlight, will be offered fistic followers at Portner's arena, in Alexandria, tomorrow night.

Davis, a clever punching youth of 18 from Eastern High School, will be fighting in his first eight-round match, with victory meaning a lot to him. Also, it is the first time the District scrapper has been advertised as a headliner and he is determined to win. Lewis, packing a terrific wallop, is a southpaw. The cagey Baltimore youngster stopped Davis in a sensational match at Portner's about ten months ago, earning the only other victory ever scored over Roddy. In his next six fights Davis came back strong. Since that defeat he has waded through the campaign in undefeated fashion.

Burl and Mack Fight In Semifinal.

Promoter Frankie Mann has secured two nimble-footed and genuine bantamweights for the semiwindup of eight rounds in Eddie Burl, of Jacksonville, Fla., who was presented to fans last Monday in the ring, and Jimmy Mack, battling out of New York. Mack has victimized such good men as Benny Schwartz, Marty Gold, Al Martin, Jackie Rodgers, Johnny Brennan and Lew Franklin.

Roy Manly and Arthur DeBeve are to clash in a six-rounder, while in another of the same distance, Henry (Popeye) Irving will oppose K. O. Burns. Sammy Romano and Jack Caford will open hostilities in a four-rounder.

BIERSDORF MAKES ACE.

Fred R. Biersdorf is the latest to make a hole in one at Indian Spring.

Yesterday afternoon while playing in a foursome with L. A. Strong, Harry Bachman and Paul Moller, he drew forth his trusty club on the 155-yard sixth hole and spanked his tee shot into the cup.

JOCKEY CLUB STAKES TO THE DARB

Latonia Win Boosts Youngster's Stock in 1933 Derby.

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 29 (A.P.)—The East, which in recent years has developed the habit of winning the more important Kentucky fixtures, again triumphed decisively over the West when C. V. Whitney's The Darb accounted for the thirteenth running of the much-coveted and richly endowed Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes.

While the triumph of the gallant son of St. Germans and Mad Mullah added further confusion to the already befuddled 2-year-old championship, it gained for him a new importance as a potential candidate for 3-year-old classics, in particular the Kentucky Derby. Three of the last five Kentucky Jockey Club winners have subsequently achieved honors in the historic Churchill Downs race.

One, Two, Three for East's Entrants.

Today's renewal, decided over a deep and treacherous track, proved a complete rout for the West, Eastern invaders finishing one, two, three. The Brookmeade Stable's Caesar's Ghost took down the place money and the Greentree Stable's Dynastic was third. Among the defeated Westerners was H. P. Headley's Technique, which defeated the Darb in the recent renewal of the Breeders' Futurity.

Caesars' Ghost was first to show in front but Jockey Alfred Robertson shot the Darb into a commanding lead at the half and the Whitney colt was never headed. Dynastic, the favorite, threatened mildly in the stretch after a slow begining but hung slightly near the finish.

The Darb was held at $8.46 in the mutuels. He covered the mile in 1:46 4-5, the slowest renewal in the history of the stake, formerly run at Louisville.

BOXING BITS Hereabouts

THESE are busy days for Goldie Ahearn. In addition to looking after the destinies of Benny Schwartz, the former Mr. Goldstein is having his hands full instructing an embryonic group of boxers from the Army Medical Center, of Walter Reed Hospital. A little over a month ago, Goldie was appointed boxing instructor. He lost no time in getting started. He has drilled faithfully with the boys twice a week, and now reports the squad fast rounding into shape. Workouts are conducted on Tuesday and Friday nights. Nearly twenty are in the class.

Goldie is planning to produce a fairly well-balanced amateur team in about six weeks. Matches with District and out-of-towns will be sought, Ahearn states.

A smart fighter in his day, Ahearn always has been a great believer in rapid-fire punching. Last Monday night at Portner's he sent out Benny Schwartz with instructions to set a fast pace from the start. A vast difference was noted in Schwartz's fighting of last week against Frankie DeAngelo as compared to his performance in their first bout. In the scrap that resulted in a draw, Benny relied solely on his left. Last Monday, the Baltimore Hebrew boy stepped out with lightning speed, flourished both hands, and demonstrated his versatility in two-fisted fighting, especially in the last four rounds. The result left no doubt as to Schwartz's superiority.

According to Ahearn, the victory over DeAngelo meant much to Schwartz. His next step will be in the direction of a battle with Pete Sanstol, crack Hungarian bantamweight champion, and ranked number two by the N. B. A. Efforts are being made to match the two speed merchants at Portner's. Successful against Sanstol, Schwartz will turn his attention to Madison Square Garden, where, it is rumored, he may fight within the next few months.

Schwartz has been in the ring for over ten years. Out of harness about nine months, he returned to display old-time form last year. Benny is in great shape, trains daily, is a clean-cut fellow, and should go far in the bantamweight division.

Nelson B. Bell, who not only knows his drama and theatrical stuff, but also his boxing, revived memories of one Al Foreman in a fanning bee the other day. Foreman, British Empire lightweight champion, holder of the Lord Lonsdale Challenge Belt, lightweight and junior lightweight champion of Canada, fought many a stirring duel in and around this section, and it takes Nelson Bell to make the matches live again in the retelling.

Goldie Ahearn's name came up.

"Well do I remember," The Post critic stated, "that first round at Kenilworth back in 1926 when Foreman smacked Goldie with a glove packed with T. N. T. Goldie dropped flat on his face.

Foreman, beaten in only six fights in his colorful career which started in 1920, is a marvelous boxer today.

Frankie Rice was the only other fighter to flatten Goldie Ahearn.

Jimmy Erwin, hard-working manager, pens a line from Saginaw, Mich., with news that his three fighters, one of which is Cowboy Phelps, "had good luck" on the fight card Tuesday. Erwin also states that Michigan promoters are seeking a match between Phelps and George Nichols, N. B. A. light-heavyweight champion. Erwin hopes to bring his Arizona battler back to Portner's against some good scrapper.

Johnny Bowen is peeved. He is hot over the decision in the Nick Antonelli-Billy Essinger bout last Monday. Bowen contends his boxer, Antonelli, clearly was the winner. Referee Charlie Short also figured Antonelli the better man, Essinger made a strong finish that no doubt played a big part in the judges' decisions. Anyhow, Bowen wants a return bout. He is anxious to have Walter Kirkwood show his stuff at Portner's. Bowen claims Kirkwood is in tip-top shape, ready for the best.

A real treat is in store at Portner's tomorrow. It takes Frankie Mann to toss into the ring four fast stepping fighters. Eddie Burl and Jimmy Mack make their bows in an eight-rounder, playing second fiddle to the Roddy Davis-Patsy Lewis headliner. Davis is after revenge. The Eastern High boy stands a dandy chance of winning from his Baltimore adversary. Davis is a most improved fighter.

Arthur DeBeve, gallant French lightweight, and battle-scarred ring veteran, remains hot on the trail of Jimmy Reed. DeBeve claims he can lick Reed. If the Frenchman survives tomorrow's fight with Roy Manley, Promotor Mann may take notice.

LONDOS BACK FOR DUSEK RENEWAL

Strong Boys of Mat Clash Thursday in 4th Bout Here.

TWO iron-muscled, thick-necked boys who lifted wrestling off Ninth street and deposited it in a grandiose heap at Griffith Stadium with 16,000 spectators in the stands—Champion Jim Londos and Rudy Dusek—stage their affair again here Thursday night at the Washington Auditorium.

Londos and Dusek have met three times in Washington, and only the Almighty knows how many times out of town. Their local fantasies were staged two seasons ago, and marked the high level the sport has reached in this region. Their first encounter was marred (or rather interest was increased at the climax) when Dusek fell out of the ring and seemed sort of stunned thereby.

Second Bout Ended In Small Riot.

A riot ended their second bout, which came to an end with Dusek giving off a series of asthmatic coughs, the result of having been "choked" by the champion. Police had to be used to help Londos reach his dressing room. The uprising of the indignant burghers had its effect, for upon their third meeting some 16,000 crowded into the park. Londos drew about $5,000 salary that night, which, while it was something short of the much-advertised $10,000 guarantee, represented the most money ever made by a wrestler in one bout in Washington.

Dusek disappeared for months after the bout. He was exploited in the South and North and West. His orbit has swung around this way again, bowling over all competition of late. Londos, recently shorn again of his championship robes in New York, or Philadelphia or some place, remains the last real drawing card in the game. He should fill those empty pews that have been sitting so forlornly in the rear of the Auditorium this indoor season.

Joe Stecher, colorless but efficient former champion, meets Ernie Dusek in the semifinal. Other bouts are Gino Garibaldi vs. George McLeod, Chief White Feather vs. George Vassell and Alex Aberg vs. Everett Marshall, one of the few matmen who hold a decision over Strangler Lewis.

All women fans, accompanied by paying escorts, will be admitted for 25 cents. Unaccompanied fair fans will be dunned full price.

DAVIS AND ELKINS TRAMPLES QUANTICO MARINES, 27 TO 6

College Team Overwhelms Devil Dogs

Fluharty Leader of Long Marches to Touchdowns.

Bauer Makes Marine Goal on Plunge in Final Quarter.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

THE Marines saw red yesterday, but it was only a worm's eye view of the Scarlet Hurricane of Davis and Elkins riding over them to a 27-to-6 victory at Griffith Stadium before the Marine Band and a thimble of football fans. The counter attraction, American-U. vs. Shepherd, hit the crowd.

Revealing about as much shiftiness as the Commerce Building corner stone, the Marines fell an easy prey before a lighter, but definitely brainier band of red-coats from the sylvan wastes of Elkins, W. Va., who reversed the old axiom by "having the Marines well in hand" from the start of the game until the waning moments when the old Quantico "fight-fight-fight" spirit, produced largely by the broken-nosed former Navy player, Lieut. Joe Bauer, and Corporal Andy Zeher, rammed across a touchdown against a Davis and Elkins line riddled with reserve material.

Fluharty Leads Collegians.

It did not take Davis and Elkins long to prove its marked superiority. Unleashing a fleet-footed attack made up of spinner plays off tackle and through end, led by a swivel-hipped youngster named Howard Fluharty, the bright red team moved from midfield—after an early exchange of kicks—to the Marines' 15-yard line on three plays, the feature of which was a twisting 20-yard sprint by Fluharty. From this point Fluharty took a bewildering lateral from Bill Tinney and went around end with only Farrell, Marine half back, in his way. He stiff-armed Farrell to score and Tinney place-kicked one high into the 50-cent customers.

A 20-yard pass over the line, from Ken Talbott to Joe Pease, produced Davis and Elkins' second touchdown. It climaxed a drive that started 70 yards from the goal, with beautifully timed spinner plays hurtling through big gaps in the willowy Marine line, accounting for most of the distance. Tinney kicked again.

A Davis and Elkins fumble, recovered by Ferrell, started a Marine scoring threat early in the second quarter. Led by Zeher the Marines advanced 29 yards to the 61-yard line, but three line bucks (with but 2 yards to go for a first down) failed and the drive ended.

Davis-Elkins Makes Third Score.

Davis and Elkins scored its third touchdown two plays before the half, after the boys had politely exchanged fumbles on the Marine 35-yard line. Fluharty twisted through to the 15-yard line on a really fine break through the place where the Marines once had a right end. The Marines were penalized five yards to the 10-yard line by a loquacious substitute and Argus Winters strolled through a gap in center, side-stepped a Marine back or two and scored. Fluharty showed nice versatility by place-kicking the point.

The Marine team held well in the third period, and started an offensive that looked good. With Zeher carrying the brunt of the ball carrying the Marines moved the ball to a first down on D.-E.'s 24-yard line, but were held for three downs and then Gilkerson intercepted Zeher's pass and ran it back to midfield.

An intercepted pass from the hand of Joe Bauer who was but a shadow of the Joe Bauer of Navy days, put Davis and Elkins in line for its fourth touchdown early in the fourth period. Corzine speared the pigskin in midfield. A 25-yard pass, Fluhardy to Harold Woodford, was declared good when Marine backs "took out" Woodford just as he was about to receive the spiraling ball. In two bucks from the 10-yard line, Everett Taylor put the ball across and Tinney missed the kick.

Bauer Leads Marines To Touchdown.

An almost new Davis and Elkins team took the field with the score 27-0, and this, added to the fact that the Marines at last began to attempt other than cut-and-dried plays, produced the Quantico boys' lone tally. Zeher started the drive by sliding, slipping and beating his way from midfield to the D.-E. 25-yard line, where Bauer, on a fake pass, got to the 17-yard around end and then passed nice to Shell, who was ganged on the 1-foot line Zeher and Bauer were stopped cold on the first two plays, and then Bauer, summing up some of the old-time energy, went over. Zeher missed the kick.

Altrock and Schacht On Armistice Program

Nick Altrock and Al Schacht have consented to appear in a special skit as part of the Armistice jubilee program of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the Washington Auditorium in the District of Columbia.

The two baseball funsters will be given a feature spot on the program, according to Walter Johnson, pitching idol of the Nats, who is director in chief of the veterans' carnival.

Davis-Elkins Half Back in Typical Advance Against Marines

WOLVERINES WIN OVER PRINCETON

Michigan Outplayed and Barely Wins by 14-7 Score.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 29 (U.P.).—An underrated Princeton football team battled the University of Michigan to the end today, but lost in a gallant stand, 14 to 7. The game was decided on breaks, and the Wolverines had the advantage.

A slashing full back named Jack James and a fine Princeton line had Michigan fighting from behind for the first time this season. It was a new situation for the Wolverines, and it was not until the final period that they were able to carry the fight to Princeton territory consistently.

The Wolverines, if they expected an easy afternoon, were disillusioned quickly. In James, Princeton had the outstanding performer of the afternoon. Until he wearied in the last quarter he spent his time smashing through the Michigan line for sizeable gains. He was a constant scoring threat and the center of a vicious hard-running attack that gave Princeton the advantage in ground gained and first downs.

Princton Gets Nine First Downs.

The downs were nine for Princeton and five for Michigan and Princeton's total yardage was 194 to 131 for the Wolverines.

The first of a sucession of breaks which decided the game came in the second quarter when Newman fumbled a punt and Fairman recovered for Princeton on the 15-yard line. Bayles scored from the 2-yard line.

Michigan partially evened matters when Degeuzi's low punt bounced over Bales' head. He chased the ball back of his goal line, but was trapped with it for a safety when Ward, Michigan end, met him at the goal line and threw him back.

A blocked punt at Princeton's goal line in the third period put Michigan ahead. Williamson broke through and Kadlic's punt bounced off his chest, with both teams in mad pursuit of the ball Bernard grabbed it and plunged over for the Wolverines' first touchdown.

Two 15-yard penalties for unnecessary roughing and a short punt paved the way for Michigan's second touchdown in the fourth quarter. With a running attack stopped, Newman dropped back and tossed a pass from his 25-yard line over the goal line to Ward. No one was near the big Negro end as he took the toss, the first and only pass completed by Michigan.

Air Attack Halted In Last Minutes.

With time short, Princeton resorted to the air, but the drive failed on Michigan's 30-yard line when a pass was intercepted.

Besides nullifying what running attack Michigan had, the alert Princeton back field also upset the Wolverines' vaunted aerial offensive. Michigan tried few passes, and aside from the one to Ward, all failed.

Manhattan Humbles Oglethorpe Gridmen

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Oglethorpe University's eleven, which is always dangerous, succumbed to Manhattan College, 20 to 7, today at the Polo Grounds in the fourth game of the intersectional series that began in 1929. By virtue of today's triumph over the Southerners, Manhattan College evened the four-game series. Oglethorpe had won in 1929 and 1930. Last year Manhattan won, 13 to 0.

Bill Pendergast, fleet-footed quarter back for the New Yorkers, was Oglethorpe's Nemesis. The Waltham, Mass., ball-carrier scored all three Manhattan touchdowns, two of them on long runs, which came from off-tackle slashes.

Oglethorpe had a consistent series of gains only in the first period.

Howard Defeated By Virginia State

Strives Valiantly to Hold Enemy, but Loses by 7-to-0 Score.

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 29.—Howard lost to Virginia State here today, 7 to 0, on a touchdown by Bownds in four attempts from the visitors' 5-yard line. Young place-kicked for extra point.

A bad pass to Hall and a short kick gave State first down on Howard's 18-yard line. Howe and Bownds drove around Howard's left end to first down on the 5-yard line. Striving to repeat its exhibition of strength against weight that held for downs on 1-yard line in the second quarter, Howard yielded only by inches.

Sewell, Dunbar High graduate, caught a 70-yard pass from Ware in the fourth quarter for the game's greatest thrill.

LAST-HALF ATTACK OF PENN BEATS NAVY

kept the score from mounting higher. Chung-Hoon and Clark performed most of the work for the Navy, and Campbell and Walkup formed an almost impenetrable secondary behind the line when danger threatened.

The superiority of the Pennsylvania running attack is attested to by the 231 yards gained by the Quaker backs as against 128 for Navy. The passing was about even, with Penn's the more timely. Navy's greatest threat came in the closing minutes of the fourth period when Fred Borries, a substitute back, dashed 40 yards for one of the longest runs of the game.

stitute half back, paved the way for Brown's second touchdown. Gaito recovered for Brown on Harvard's 34-yard line. Gilmartin circled right end for 38 yards, and a pass which he then shot to Chase advanced the ball to Harvard's 16-yard line. Chase rounded left end for first down on the 3-yard line. Brown gained a yard in three line bucks and then W. Gilbane fought his way through center for the touchdown, Chase again kicking the extra point.

Harvard lost the ball four times through fumbles, two of which were made by Whitney, substitute left half-back, and one each by Pescosolido and Locke, also substitute left half back.

AMERICAN U. BEATEN BY SHEPHERD

Maddex Is Star for Visitors in 12-0 Grid Victory.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

HOME-COMING DAY at American University was celebrated in backhand fashion yesterday, with the Shepherd College Rams winning the football game, feature of the day's celebration by a score of 12-0. A large crowd witnessed the game.

The Eagles may fly high in Mobile, but they failed to make any impression on the tough little band of Mountaineers. Twice American was in scoring position, one of its drives going to the visitors' 1-yard line, but the Rams had something in reserve for such emergencies and they held when a touchdown seemed imminent.

Maddex Is Game's Hero.

Hunter Maddex, stocky Shepherd full back, was the outstanding player of the game, although hard pressed for the honors by Wendy Mathias, his half-pint running mate. Maddex registered both touchdowns for the invaders.

A line plunge from the 1-yard line after a drive from beyond midfield resulted in the first score. Maddex crossed the final chalkmark for the second touchdown after taking a pass from Mathias.

"Swampy" Clark and Eddie Parke accounted for most of the yards gained by the Eagles. Clark hit off-tackle for consistent gains and did a fine job of backing up his line.

Shepherd threatened American's goal line twice in the first half. Penalties, inflicted for holding, helped the home team out of both predicaments. Hunter Maddex made a first down on American's 11-yard line in the first quarter, only to have the ball set back 15 precious yards. Again, in the second quarter, the Rams threatened, reaching the 5-yard mark, only to lose the ball on downs and suffer another 15-yard penalty immediately thereafter.

Eagles Take to Air In Final.

Throwing passes with abandon in the last period, American reached Shepherd's 16-yard line. Al Buffington took a long heave from Eddie Parke for 30 yards, the longest gain of the drive. But the visitors kept their goal line inviolate.

With only seconds of the game left, Hunter Maddex intercepted one of Parke's heaves and raced 95 yards through a broken field over the goal line, but the play was called back to midfield, where a Shepherd player had been apprehended in the act of clipping.

Turkey Golf Tourney On Rock Creek Links

Close to 50 golfers will tee off tomorrow morning in the eighteen-hole qualifying round of the turkey tournament, sponsored by the Rock Creek Golf Club.

Among the well-known public links players entered are W. A. McGuire, former municipal course champion; George Marlow, holder of the Rock Creek course record, and Volney G. Burnett, jr., winner of the "uptown" tournament.

Nick Altrock, baseball's famous comedian, is entered in a threesome with George S. Sullivan and J. R. Emeigh.

Following the qualifying round, players will be grouped in flights, with the winners of each to receive a turkey and the runners-up the choice of a duck or chicken.

An attempt will be made by contestants to crack the record, 65, owned by George Barlow, who negotiated A course in 29 and B in 36.

Pairings for the qualifying round follow:

8:45, Morris Gershenson, Paul Bradshaw, J. J. Antoine; 8:50, R. Dean Shure, James C. McGrew, M. H. Christie; 8:55, Charles J. Williams, J. A. Sourwine, J. Chalap.

9, George R. Sullivan, Nick Altrock, J. R. Emeigh; 9:05, John Connley, A. W. Cummings, W. E. Johnson; 9:10, E. B. Toombs, W. W. Hubbard, Martin Bray; 9:15, W. G. Forrest, R. J. Sinclair, A. J. Martineau; 9:20, Jeff Rhodes, Paul Heston, Harry Shalin; 9:25, Dudley M. Taylor, P. C. Raclum, Robert J. Marks; 9:30, Thomas W. Cain, Eddie Ault, R. I. Bowman.

9:35, George Marlow, Earl M. Bean, C. J. Davis; 9:40, J. L. Aston, C. T. Holley, John Charles; 9:45, U. D. Seltzer, J. N. Martin, S. C. Wimsatt; 9:50, R. Miller, E. A. Johnson, R. E. Smith; 9:55, W. A. McGuire, Philip Wagahal, H. R. Allen; 10, Volney G. Burnett, jr.

President's Cup Contest to West

(Associated Press.)

Competition for the President's Cup, emblem of football supremacy among service football teams, will be moved this year to the West Coast.

President Hoover has approved a plan to have teams representing the Ninth Corps Area of the Army, with headquarters at San Francisco, the battle force of the Navy, based on the Pacific Coast, and the San Diego Marine Corps barracks, compete annually for the trophy.

Donated by President Coolidge in 1924, the cup was competed for by the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. The deciding game, played in Washington, was a gala event attended by high Government officials. Maintaining an all-service team proved difficult, however, and first the Army and then the Navy dropped out. Last year the Coast Guard followed suit and now the cup is to journey West to start its career over again.

It is now in the possession of the Coast Guard, winner of the latest contest.

Minnesota Surprises Northwestern, 7-0; Illinois Beats Chicago, 13-7, in Conference

Maroons Are Victims as Illini Score First Victory.

By WILLIAM WEEKS.

STAGG FIELD, Chicago, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The fighting Illini of Illinois today fought themselves out of the depths of Western Conference football to score a startling 13-to-7 triumph over Chicago and wreck the Maroons' hope of a Big Ten title.

The Illini had to fight to win their first conference victory since 1929, when they defeated Chicago on the scene of today's upset. The Maroons needed less than two minutes and only four plays to hack their way to a touchdown, and in the second period the Illini three times gallantly thrust back drives that seemed certin of adding to the Chicago total.

Then in the third period they came out with a forward passing assault that revealed the cunning touch of Coach Bob Zuppke.

Froschauer Overlooked By Chicago.

Drilled to watch Gil Berry's shots at Pete Yanuskus, the Maroons overlooked Frank Froschauer, sophomore half back, starting his first Big Ten game. From the Illinois 46-yard line, Berry fired three to Froschauer and the last was good for 24 yards and a touchdown. Yanuskus tied the score with his place kick.

With Chicago still upset over the suddenness of the Illinois raid, Berry staged the most sensational play of the game a few moments later. Birney quick kicked, but Berry was ready, and snatching the ball on his own 25-yard line, raced through the whole Chicago team for the winning touchdown, a journey of 75 yards. The Maroons rushed over a score in four plays. Vinson Sahlin clipped off 14 yards, and Pat Page and Birney took the ball to the 29-yard line. Then Sahlin shot over his own left tackle for the touchdown and Page place-kicked for the point.

Senators Are Tied By Legion Eleven

Outplay Philadelphia Foe, but Lack Punch in Shadow of Goal.

Special to The Washington Post.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 29.—Wally Secrist's Frankford Legion football team battled to a scoreless tie with the Washington Senators at Frankford Memorial Stadium this afternoon. Although outplayed throughout the game, the Legion held its opponents when they were in the shadow of the goal line.

Washington lost the ball on downs on the Legion's 2-yard line in the first period and four times carried it to the 15-yard line, but the home team line held for downs. Snyder and Williams gained most of the Senators' yardage. Legion made seven first downs to its opponents' fourteen.

Ohio State Tied By Wisconsin, 7-7

By JAMES L. RENICK.

OHIO STADIUM, Columbus, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The deadlock jinx, again haunted the Ohio State University football team today as it played a 7-to-7 tie with Wisconsin before 17,000 customers.

Three weeks ago Ohio was held to a similar tie by Indiana and last played Pittsburgh to a scoreless deadlock. This is the first season since the dedication of the Buckeye stadium that Ohio has not won at least one Western Conference game in the horseshoe.

Ohio's offensive started to click when the game was only five minutes old. Hinchman sent a beautiful pass to Gillman, who was stopped on the 1-foot line. Vuchinich hit center for the touchdown and then added the extra point.

In the second quarter, Peterson, a sub for Linfor, took one of Hinchman's high punts on his 25-yard line and behind beautiful interference twisted and squirmed his way 75 yards for the Badger touchdown. Linfor returned to kick the extra point that caused the tie that never was broken.

After that touchdown, Hinchman kept the badges on the defensive by placing his punts out of bounds, one rolling out on the 8-yard line. Again at the start of the third period, Hinchman quick-kicked from his 20-yard line out of bounds on the Wisconsin 16.

Ohio had an excellent opportunity to score late in the game when it took the ball on a penalty on the 50-yard line. Greenberg circled end for 13 and a lateral pass, Cramer to Hinchman, advanced it to the 32. Hinchman then drove to the 20.

Vuchinich was inserted for a field goal attempt but after a 5-yard penalty on Ohio, his effort was smothered.

Statistics showed Ohio registering thirteen first downs to two for the Badgers, and gaining 141 yards from scrimmage to 36 for Wisconsin. In the air Ohio made 59 yards on four completed passes to 1 yard on one completion by Wisconsin.

Amateurs Chosen For Friday Bouts

Nine Named to Represent City in Matches With Baltimoreans.

The athletic committee in charge of the boxing carnival next Friday night at Washington Auditorium last night selected the nine local amateurs who will represent the Capital in the intercity matches with Baltimore.

In announcing the selections the committee, of which Dr. O. U. Singer, of the Amateur Athletic Union, is chairman, expressed its appreciation of the kindness of more than twenty local boys who volunteered their services for the card.

Manders in Role of Hero as Gophers Thrill 35,000.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Minnesota unpacked a driving powerhouse attack, centering around big Jack Manders today, and swept to a 7-to-0 victory over Northwestern before 35,000 chilled fans.

Four times the Gophers drove down the field, but in three cases the fighting Wildcats stopped them only 5 yards short of the goal.

Success finally crowned the Gophers' effort when Full Back Manders, temporarily in the role of signal caller, changed the offensive strategy from running plays to passes.

Starting from midfield, a pass from Pug Lund, half back, to Robert Tenner, a substitute end, paved the way. The drive climaxed with another pass on fourth down with 18 yards to go, with Tenner catching the ball on another of Lund's throws behind the goal line for the only touchdown Manders place kicked the extra point.

Pass Attack Fails For Invaders.

Northwestern, which had the ball in its possession less than one-fourth of game time, came back with a desperate long passing attack, with Pug Rentner, its star back, doing the throwing.

Twice receivers were clear on throws which covered 30 yards or more, but each time they failed to connect and the best the Wildcats were able to do with their aerial attack was a total of 27 yards on two out of nine attempts.

Minnesota gained 330 yards to 96 for the Wildcats. The power of the Minnesota running attack was evidenced its total gains from rushing of 266 yards to 69 for Northwestern, while the Gophers also topped the Wildcats in aerial gains with 64 yards gained on five successful passes out of fourteen attempted.

Northwestern threatened seriously only once except for the steady menace of its long aerial game. Al Kawal, a back, recovered the ball on Minnesota's 40-yard line after Lund fumbled in returning a punt early in the game. A series of gains gave the Wildcats the ball 15 yards from the goal, its nearest approach of the day, but Rentner fumbled, and Minnesota's Bill Proffitt, substitute for the injured Capt. Walter Hass, who did not enter the game, recovered for the Gophers.

Play Is Called Back Due to Off-Side.

Just before the end of the first half Manders, standing on his 50-yard line, passed to Butch Larson, Gopher end, and the latter broke into the clear and crossed the goal line, only to have the play called back because of his own offside.

They kept the ball in Northwestern territory in the last three periods and the game ended with the Gophers in possession on the Northwestern 5-yard line.

Minnesota was credited with twelve first downs to four for Northwestern, and led in every offensive phase of the game, except punting, where Ollie Olson, Wildcat full back, led Lund with an average of 42 yards to 36.

Olson's punting was outstanding for the reason that during a part of the game, when he was kicking most frequently, he faced a hard wind, but, despite this, kicked more than 53 yards on one attempt.

Olson, too, was credited with the longest and most consistent running gains for Northwestern, with Rentner stopped time after time as the Gopher line, showing new life, charged through to nail him before he was well started.

SEND ALL SLOGANS TO CONTEST DEPARTMENT

Why We Do This

It is a well-known fact that high-grade advertising is the life of business. In advertising, short, catchy phrases and sentences, called slogans, are very valuable. We need them and will gladly pay for them and are taking this method of getting a number of suggestions.

Most slogans which have brought fortunes to business houses were thought of by some one not connected with the house. Gold and letters of credit will be given to people who least expect them. Only a few minutes' work is all it takes. In case of a tie, full prize will be given each tying contestant.

All prizes are given free.

Successful contestants will be notified by mail.

Letters of credit are transferable.

More than one honorable mention prize will be issued.

Any one credit good for face value, not to exceed one-half the purchase price on any new model Chrysler, Plymouth or used car in stock. Credits expire November 5, 1932.

No employe of this firm may enter contest.

All Slogans Must Be in the Mail by 9 P. M.

UNBEATEN V. P. I. ROUTS WASHINGTON AND LEE, 32 TO 6

Poly's Eleven Coasts to Victory

Generals Earn Early Touchdown With Passing Attack.

Mills Runs 85 Yards to Score Following Second Kick-Off.

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Opening with two touchdowns in less than three minutes after the starting whistle, and battering down a stubborn Washington and Lee line defense in the second and third quarters, Virginia Polytechnic Institute's powerful eleven continued its march toward a Southern Conference championship by defeating the Generals, 32 to 6, in the annual homecoming battle here this afternoon.

Five thousand spectators viewed the twenty-ninth meeting of the two teams and watched the great Gobbler eleven turn it into a rout in the final period.

Five Gobbler back field aces experienced the pleasure of taking the ball across the Washington and Lee goal line, and on two of the occasions Gene Hite booted the ball between the uprights for the extra point.

Grinus, Tech captain, blocked Sawyer's punt on the 10-yard line after the kickoff had gone over the goal. Hite was on the oval like a flash. On the fourth play Smith plunged for a touchdown. Hite kicked goal.

Mills Runs 85 Yards To Touchdown.

Washington and Lee kicked off to Mills who grabbed the spinning oval on his 15-yard line, side stepped several tackles in superb running, and behind quickly formed interference sprinted 85 yards through the entire Washington and Lee team for a touchdown. Again Hite kicked goal from placement.

The Generals came back strong with a stubborn defense that held the power plays of V. P. I. in check. Getting the ball on downs the Generals exhibited an aerial attack that swept down the field with short passes and culminated in a touchdown on a pass from Seaton to Sawyers.

Trailing by a touchdown at the end of the first quarter the Generals played doggedly in the face of the fierce charging of the heavy and powerful Tech line. The defensive game baffled the Gobblers time after time until late in the third quarter the Tech offensive got into full swing, the period ending with the ball on the Generals' 1-yard line.

Again the Generals rallied and with backs to the goal line, held the powerful thrusts. Here, however, the tide turned.

Sawyer's punt to the 40-yard line was returned by Morgan to the 13-yard stripe. Mills ripped through and Groth scored on the following play.

The Generals were in a hole from the next kick-off. Casey scored on a 21-yard gallop.

Gobblers Reach Full Stride.

The Gobblers were now in their full stride and the battered Washington and Lee team could no longer hold the powerful line and the hard-running backs. Groth tucked the ball under his arm on the 39-yard line and was stopped on the 8-yard mark. Hall took it over. Once more the Techmen started a scoring march, but the Generals checked it with another goal-line rally.

Bolen and Elbrig were outstanding defensive stars for the Generals, while Seaton and Sawyers carried the brunt of the attack against the more powerful Tech team.

Porterfield, Mills and Al Seamon were shining lights on the Gobbler eleven. Porterfield, former back field, was in every play as center, diagnosing the Generals' strategy and breaking through to spoil play after play. Gene Hite also was a mainstay in the Gobbler line.

Washington and Lee scored seven first downs to eleven for V. P. I.

Mills' long run gave the 5,000 spectators a real thrill. After his interference had guided him past eight Washington and Lee men the speeding half back was left to elude three Washington and Lee players who were bearing down on him from different directions. He slipped through neatly to cross the goal line standing up.

RALLY WINS, 20 TO 6, FOR VIRGINIA

Johnson's 78-Yd. Run Opens Drive Against St. John's Team.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—A belated offensive staged by the University of Virginia gained a 20-to-6 victory over a stubborn St. John's (of Maryland) eleven here today.

Tommy Johnson's 78-yard run for a touchdown on the third play after the second half opened, broke down the resistance of the visitors and opened the way for Virginia's victory.

Nine Cavalier fumbles marred the play and cut short several other threats at the visitors' goal.

Virginia gained 335 yards and ten first downs to 150 yards and five first downs for the Johnnies.

The Cavaliers marched within scoring distance several times in the first half, only to lose the ball on fumbles or intercepted passes, but, after Johnson broke the ice with his long jaunt to tally, the visitors seemed unable to hold the Cavalier drive in check.

St. John's scored in the closing minutes of the game, after Virginia substitutes had been penalized to their own 1-yard line.

Berger Kept Out By Injury.

The Virginia attack had been disorganized on the eve of the game when Spencer Berger, slated as starting full back, sprained his ankle after practice yesterday.

Johnson, who replaced him as chief blocking back, received the ball from the center, standing on his own 10-yard stripe and sped around end to the visitors' goal. Perfect blocking opened the way. No tackler touched him.

Condon kicked, but Virginia was penalized, and he missed the second attempt.

Two short kicks presented the Cavaliers other scoring chances in the third period. A costly fumble prevented the first, but Stevens scored on the next, after the ball had been driven from the 30-yard line to the goal in eight plays. Condon made a good kick.

Forney's 15-yard run led to the next scoring opportunity, but Johnson's pass into the end zone just grazed Cutler's finger tips.

Early in the fourth period, after substitutes replaced most of the Virginia regulars, Brawley intercepted a pass and returned it from midfield to the Johnnies' 30. Johnson and Gooch made a first down. Gooch sprinted around end to the 1-yard line, then bucked over and kicked the extra point.

Punt Behind Goal Is Blocked.

A Virginia fumble and a 15-yard penalty forced Gooch to try a punt from behind his own goal line as the game was ending. The attempt was blocked, but the ball bounded into the playing field.

Two Johnny charges were stopped. Virginia was off side, and the penalty gave the visitors the ball with only a yard to go. Capt. Scheffnacker dove over. Zeigler's kick was partially blocked.

Episcopal Beats Gilman Team, 13-0

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 29.—A heavier and more powerful team from Episcopal High School, Alexandria, Va., defeated Gilman Country School's football eleven today 13 to 0. Gilman's inexperienced forward wall, holding the visitors scoreless in the first half, crumbled in the third quarter when the visitors marched almost the distance of the gridiron to put over their first touchdown.

The contest was marred by an unusually large number of penalties which ranged from 5 yards for off-side to 15 yards for communication by a substitute before a play was made.

Gooch and Brookings were the big noise for the Episcopal eleven, this pair scoring the two touchdowns and having been responsible for a great part of the ground gained by their team.

Gilman won one of four games played with Episcopal High today here. The junior varsity eleven defeated the visitors, 37 to 7, but the 105 pounders lost, 14 to 0, and the 118-pound class eleven was downed, 33 to 0.

TENNESSEE NOSES OUT DUKE

Wins in Last Three Minutes, 16-13, by Field Goal.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—With the score tied 13-all and 3 minutes left to play, a gallant Tennessee eleven today pushed the Duke Blue Devils to the shadow of their goal where Breezy Wynn, brilliant half back, saved the day by booting a field goal to give the Vols a 16-to-13 victory.

The hard-earned win over the brilliant Duke team kept unblemished Tennessee's record of no defeats and no ties this season.

The climax came after Freddie Crawford, star Duke tackle, intercepted Vaughn's pass in the third quarter and raced 72 yards for a touchdown, and Mason scored in the final quarter after a Duke aerial bombardment had carried the ball to the Vols' 3-yard line.

Feathers, hard driving Vol half back, who tore through Duke's line time after time for long gains, scored both Tennessee touchdowns, bucking through in the second period from the 3-yard line and from the 4-yard line in the third period.

N. C. IN FIRST VICTORY OF SEASON

Turns on Undefeated Wolfpack to Win by 13 to 0.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—North Carolina's Tarheels, kicked around more or less and without a victory in five starts this season, turned on the favored North Carolina State Wolfpack here today and grabbed a 13-to-0 victory.

The hitherto undefeated Wolfpack was outplayed by Chuck Collins' aggregation, and only one time came within threatening distance of the Tarheel goal. About 12,000 spectators saw the contest.

Carolina's first touchdown came in the second period after McQuage, State back, had attempted a pass from near his own 20-yard line.

Barclay, Tarheel guard, intercepted the pass, and carried the ball to the 13-yard marker. McCaskill took 11 yards off right tackle in two sweeps, and Thompson then cut through left tackle for the touchdown. Lasor kicked the extra point from placement.

JACKETS WIN AFTER RUNS BY HESS

Trounce Bridgewater in Conference Game by 20-0 Score.

HARRISONBURG, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Two touchdown gallops by Quarter Back Hess turned the tide against a fighting Bridgewater College eleven today as the Randolph-Macon Yellow Jackets rang up a 20-to-0 victory in a Virginia Conference contest.

On the first play after receiving the ball, Hess dashed 65 yards across the goal line, displaying fine broken-field running. In the third period he dashed 35 yards to score. Hess registered the second touchdown on a series of short advances.

Bridgewater, making its best conference showing in several seasons, not only halted the Yellow Jackets' offense, but on three occasions threatened the Randolph-Macon goal line.

The Eagles had the ball on the 5-yard line when the half and the game ended. Capt. Row and his Bridgewater linemen frequently threw the Yellow Jackets for losses.

After the first quarter, Bridgewater battled on even terms with Randolph-Macon, but lacked the scoring punch, and their passing attack failed. The Yellow Jackets used two complete teams.

Woodberry Forest Defeats Fishburne

Visitors Show Unexpected Strength, but Lose by 21 to 6.

Special to The Washington Post.

Woodberry Forest, Va., Oct. 29.—Showing unexpected strength, Fishburne Military School put up a stubborn fight against the Woodberry Forest eleven on Hanes Field today and forced the locals to take to the air to earn a hard-fought, 21-to-6 decision. Off to a fast start, Woodberry was soon in the lead, 7 to 0, the score coming on a pass from Woollen to Harman and a successful place kick by Woollen. Before the first quarter was over, however, the visitors launched a powerful running attack which ended with G. Sutton's drive for a touchdown. The try for point was wide.

Woodberry counted again in the second period on a drive by Andrews. Andrews plunged the line for the extra point. In the third quarter Harman again took a pass from Woollen for a touchdown. Moore ran the ball over for the extra point. The first downs were 15 to 5 in favor of Woodberry. The kicking of Dutrow and the play of Moore and G. Sutton was outstanding for the Cadets. Andrews and Moore played well for Woodberry.

Auburn Wins, 14-7, on Long Run in Final Two Minutes

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 29 (A. P.).—Separated by a scant two minutes from a tie score which would have crushed Auburn's hopes for the Southern Conference championship, the Plainsmen's great captain, Jimmie Hitchcock, stood in the shadow of his own goal this afternoon and hurled a perfect pass to Allen Rogers, slender half back, who ran 66 yards for a touchdown and a 14-to-7 victory over a powerful University of Mississippin eleven.

The winning play came as the Plainsmen strove with their backs to the wall to pull the game out of the fire after being caught flatfooted in the third period by a 25-yard pass, Hutson to Swor, which gave Mississippi its touchdown.

Snapped out of its lethargy, Auburn rushed in Capt. Hitchcock and Firpo Phipps, his half back running mate, who had watched the early part of the game from the sidelines. Opening the final period, Phipps passed to Arlall, Auburn end, for 30 yards to place the ball on the Mississippi 8-yard line, a 5-yard penalty for Mississippi for excessive time, and a plunge through the line by Hitchcock brought Auburn its first touchdown.

Mississippi immediately started a drive, using her 200-pound full back, Hutson, as a battering ram. Auburn held on its 20-yard line. An exchange of punts gave Auburn the ball on its 22-yard line from where Capt. Hitchcock, with two minutes to go, shot a 12-yard pass to Rogers, who raced untouched to the goal line.

Auburn was content to play a waiting game the first half, occasionally permitting Casey Kimbrell, one of its back field speedsters, to lug the ball for neat gains. Flowers, Mississippi right tackle, time and again downed the Auburn backs in their tracks and his defensive play throughout the game was troublesome for the Plainsmen.

Auburn's defense was ragged except in the shadow of its goal. The Plainsmen did not come to life until Hitchcock entered the game.

Mississippi outgained Auburn in yardage, making 14 first downs to 11 for the Plainsmen.

N. Y. U. LOSES TO PURDUE, 34 TO 9

Violet Is Routed in Intersectional Contest.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Purdue gave New York City a brilliant sample of Big Ten football today as it passed and ran over New York University for a 34-to-9 victory, handing the not-so-violent Violets their worst defeat since 1924.

Scoring through the line and through the air, the Boilermakers were the masters of the New York team at every turn and cashed in on every scoring opportunity they had, running wild in the second quarter to tally three touchdowns and adding another in each of the third and fourth quarters.

78-Yard Run Made By Purvis.

Big Roy Horstman and Paul Moss, brilliant end, each lugged across two of the Purdue scores and Duane Purvis tallied the other with a 78-yard run from scrimmage. Paul Pardonner and his educated toe counted 3 points after touchdown on drop kicks before he turned the job over to less adept hands.

Jack MacDonald scored the Violet's lone touchdown on a 45-yard run after receiving a pass from Bob McNamara and the Violet's other two points came in the final quarter when Abe Itzkowitz blocked Moss' run on the Purdue 10-yard line, Moss recovering behind his own goal line for a safety.

"Shock Troops" Go in To Start Gain.

Purdue started the game with its "shock troops" and New York took advantage of the weaker opposition to drive through to the 20-yard line. Coach Noble Kizer started his first string men into the play there and after the Violet was held for downs the Boilermakers started an uninterrupted march which carried 79 yards to New York U's 1-yard line at the end of the quarter. Purvis and Jim Carter, reserve half back, were slicing off 5 to 10 yards on nearly every play.

Purdue made 10 first downs to 6 for N. Y. U., and completed three passes of six attempted for a gain of 80 yards, againt four in fifteen attempts for the Violet.

Rutgers defeated N. Y. U. 34-3 in 1924 for the worst defeat of the Violet from that date to this.

TULANE HELD BY S. C. TO 6-0 SCORE

Outplay Visitors, But Lack Punch Before Crowd of 10,000.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Tulane's Green Wave eked out a 6-to-0 victory over South Carolina's Gamecocks here today before 10,000 spectators, the smallest crowd of the season, after outplaying the Carolinians in every branch of the game.

The score seemed unbelievable in the light of yardage gained by the two teams. Tulane gained 331 yards against 37 from scrimmage and a total of 377 yards from scrimmage and passes over the visitors' 58 yards.

Three times Tulane set up the ball for a touchdown, but lacked the necessary punch to put it over. They fumbled and bungled within a full back plunge of the goal. In the second quarter, Tulane lost the ball 1 inch from the goal, where Lemmon fumbled on a line plunge and McManus, Carolina left tackle, recovered. Then within a few minutes Tulane marched the ball back to within 1 yard of the goal, where they lost it on downs. These two plays were made with substitute half backs, Simons and Hodgins, in the line-up.

Don Zimmerman Flashes Old Speed.

In the fourth quarter, Don Zimmerman, Tulane's star half back, flashed old-time form by brilliant runs, the last a 36-yard sprint to the 13-yard line, where he was stopped by Epps, Carolina's end. It looked like a touchdown, but Roberts dropped the ball after being hit by three Gamecocks and McManus recovered.

Carolina then tried desperately for a break with long forward passes, but Zimmerman intercepted one on Carolina's 47-yard line where the game ended.

At the opening of the game it looked like slaughter for the Gamecocks as Zimmerman, in the first two minutes of play, got away for a 37-yard run for a touchdown through left tackle. Roberts' place-kick for the extra point was blocked. From then on, however, the Greenies lacked touchdown punch.

The Gamecocks played stubbornly on defense but their offense was weak.

ARMY TAKES W. & M. BY 33 TO 0

Second Team Is Held in First Half, But Gains Power.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—With its first-string conquerors of Yale watching from the sidelines, Army sent forth a second team this afternoon which smothered a gallant William and Mary eleven by a score of 33 to 0.

The Southerners fought valiantly to keep down the score, but the Soldiers seemed to gain strength as the Virginians, who defeated Navy earlier this season, weakened.

Passes completed at strategic moments, coupled with the unabating battering across tackle by Buckler, Stancook, Simon and Frentzel, gave the Army opportunity to roll across five touchdowns.

A crowd of about 18,000 watched the game under a clear sky. There was a brisk, cold wind.

For the most part of the first half the ball was restrained to safe play in midfield. Occasionally the Virginians pushed the ball into Army's lines, but the long, well placed punting of Buckler frustrated their chances of scoring.

The long pass which won Army its first touchdown was the only time in the half that the Soldiers were able to break through the splendid defense work of Worrall and Spack in William and Mary's back field.

Early in the second half Buckler and Stancook hammered their way from midfield to the 1-yard line, where Stancook picked up a fumble and dashed around end for a touchdown.

Simon Crosses Line For Score.

Frentzel's perfect punt out of bounds on the 14-yard line gave Simon a chance to cut inside left end for another score.

A 13-yard pass and two telling jabs off tackle gave Army the ball on the 15-yard line in the third quarter. The long-legged Frentzel galloped around the Virginians' left end for another score.

Simon then started to work. He threw two passes to Frentzel and Horrall for a total gain of 22 yards. Then he cut through the line for two first downs and Army's fifth touchdown.

Emerson Bows, 12-0, To St. John's Frosh

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 29.—Getting the jump on the opposition and scoring a touchdown in each the first and second periods, the freshmen eleven of St. John's College defeated Emerson Institute, of Washington, here today, 12 to 0. The visitors played a much stronger game in the last two periods and had three good opportunities to cross the local goal line, but could not develop a scoring punch. In one instance they were only one foot from the coveted line.

The St. John's Yearlings registered their first touchdown within five minutes after the start of the game. They put on a drive of 60 yards. In the second period Laporte got away for a 30-yard dash to put the ball on Emerson's yard line and from that point the young Johnnies bucked their way over.

Gordon and Accardi bore the brunt of the attack for Emerson, while Laporte and Pelky were the most consistent ball carriers for the Johnnies.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 29.—Harriers of the Westchester Teacher's College defeated the team of St. John's College in a cross-country match today by the close score of 26 to 29. The race was over a 4-mile course.

TIDE DEFEATS KENTUCKY, 12 TO 7

Alabama Trails Three Periods, But Comes Back for Win.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Kentucky clung to a 7-to-6 lead over Alabama for three periods here today, but finally the Crimson Tide staged a drive that gave it a 12-to-7 decision and its tenth consecutive victory over the Wildcats.

Alabama made two fumbles in the first period. The Tide held for downs and took back the ball after the first one, but the second, when Chappell dropped a punt, was on the Tide's 19-yard line and Kentucky smashed over, Johnson carrying the ball and Davidson adding the extra point with a place kick.

Shortly before the second fumble Alabama had scored after Holley had raced 60 yards around end and four more plays had sent him over. His kick was wide.

For two more periods the teams battled with neither being able to make a serious threat. The old Alabama power came back in the final period and a drive started from midfield enabled Holley to race around his left end 10 yards to score. Leslie missed the extra point kick.

Tide Nearing Goal On Last Whistle.

The Crimson Tide continued to sweep over the Kentucky players and as the whistle blew the Wildcats just managed to stop Holley on their 1-yard line.

John (Hurry) Cain, Alabama's all-American full back, did not get into the game.

MD.'S FROSH WIN FROM V. M. I.

Score First Victory of Year in Shutout by 12-0 Score.

SCORING one touchdown in each of the first two quarters, University of Maryland's yearling football team shut out Virginia Military Institute freshmen, 12 to 0, at College Park yesterday afternoon, scoring its first victory of the campaign. It was the third contest in which the Cadets have failed to register.

After five minutes of play in the first quarter, Buddy Yager, Old Line half back, recovered Dodson's fumble in midfield. Maryland advanced to the 30-yard mark on a forward pass, Sachs to Yeager, but V. M. I. braced and the Old Liners were forced to punt, the ball going outside on the 15-yard stripe. On an attempted lateral pass, Bernie Buscher, Maryland end, and former Western High athlete, broke through to intercept the ball and run 15 yards for the first score. Yeager's attempted placement boot was wide.

Yeager Makes Score After Pass.

In the second quarter Maryland scored again when, with the ball on the visitors' 33-yard line, Sachs passed 15 yards to Yeager, who ran the remaining distance for the touchdown. The try for extra point again failed.

The Old Liners advanced to the visitors' 3-yard line late in the period, but were held for downs and as the half ended were again pounding at the goal with the ball on the 9-yard line.

The only threat of either team in the second half was near the end of the third quarter, when Maryland reached the V. M. I. 13-yard line only to have a forward pass incomplete in the end zone.

Hagen and Picard Tied At 295 in Carolina Open

Greensboro, N. C., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Walter Hagen, the veteran, and a rising young Charleston, S. C., shotmaker, Henry Picard, tied for first place today in the 72-hole Carolina golf tournament on the Starmount course here, and will meet in a play-off tomorrow. Both finished with 295.

Their closest competitors were Fred Webb, Shelby, N. C., amateur, and Freddy Hyatt, Charlotte, N. C., professional, who turned in 304's. Hagen set the pace in the first 36 holes play, but was tied at the 54-hole post by Picard, both having 222's. The "Haig" had to shoot the last nine in 35, one under par, to get his tie with the slender young Charleston professional.

West Virginia Is Victor Over Marquette, 34-7

Milwaukee, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—An alert University of West Virginia team today overwhelmed the Marquette University Golden Avalanche, 34 to 7.

Allen, West Virginia quarter back, scored all of the visitors' five touchdowns, and Parriott made four points after touchdown. Marquette's touchdown was scored in the first period by Halfman, full back.

Martinsburg Defeats Bath District High, 20-2

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg took the lead early in the first quarter, when a Berkeley Springs punt was blocked on the 42-yard line. Tonalli went over for the score in three plays. The second score was the result of a 15-yard pass, Wilk to Yeakley, and the third came at the close of the game, when Miller downed an attempted lateral pass from one of his mates out of bounds after it had rolled over Berkeley's goal line. The losers' lone score came when Miller was tackled behind his own goal line after recovering a fumbled punt.

VANDY ROUTS GA. TECH GRIDMEN

Surheinrich Hero of Both Touchdowns in 12-0 Win.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Carnival stunts with martial music of eighteen bands furnished a colorful background for Dixie Roberts' onslaught today that gave Vanderbilt a 12-to-0 victory over Georgia Tech before Nashville's greatest football crowd, estimated at 25,000.

Dixie tossed a 26-yard pass to Surheinrich for a touchdown in the first period and then dashed around end a few minutes later for 29 yards and another touchdown.

Tech's defense tightened and, aided by numerous Vanderbilt penalties, succeeded in keeping the Commodore back field under control in the last three periods.

The huge Vanderbilt line was too much for the Jackets. Time and again they sought to penetrate the Commodore forward wall and often picked up a few yards, but could make no sustained gains. Outside of two pretty dashes around end by McArthur, Tech's offense was almost powerless.

Air Attacks Fail Both Teams.

Outside of Roberts' touchdown pass, the air attack of both teams went for naught. Tech got no nearer the Vandy goal than the 31-yard line. That was in the third period.

Vanderbilt had numerous chances to score. In the first period, before the two touchdowns, the Commodores got to Tech's 1-foot line, but there the Jackets hurled them back only to watch the driving Roberts come back and flip the scoring pass to Surheinrich.

In the fourth, Tech had the ball on its 23-yard marker. Then something went wrong with the signals and the ball landed free on a pass from center, Talley falling on it for Vanderbilt. The ball was on Tech's 19. Roberts got three by somersaulting over the Jacket line, but Vandy got a 15-yard penalty for holding, and Fortune could make but 3 yards at center. Here Dixie stepped back and shot a pass that went over the goal line and Tech punted out of danger.

Harpers Ferry Loses To Shepherd High, 7-6

Special to The Washington Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Oct. 29.—Shepherd High defeated Harpers Ferry High here yesterday afternoon, 7 to 6, in their annual game.

Willard made the touchdown on a line play and the extra point for Shepherd, and Dailey for Harpers Ferry, also on a line play. His try for the extra point failed.

Georgia Wins First, Defeating Florida

Grant, Sophomore Half, Scores Three Tallies in 33-12 Victory.

Athens, Ga., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Cy Grant, a loose-hipped sophomore half back from Cornelia, Ga., spun and punched his path through Florida's line here today for three touchdowns to lead Georgia to its first gridiron victory of the season, 33 to 12.

It was a close game until the slender ball carrier from the red clay hills of north Georgia began his slashes off tackle and then it quickly turned into an utter rout.

Georgia far outgained the visitors, rolling up 24 first downs to 7, and gained about 80 yards to Florida's 70 with aerial attacks. Costly fumbles in the first two quarters cost the Georgians dearly and for a while it looked as though Florida might win through their miscues. Georgia gained 448 yards against 109 for Florida. Carl Shuman, Florida right tackle, suffered what physicians said was a slight concussion of the brain in the third period.

ALEXANDRIA GRIDMEN BUSY

Brentwood Hawks, Fraters in Today's Feature Game.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Oct. 29.—Brentwood Hawks, leaders in Maryland football circles, will entertain the Alexandria Fraters in the feature football attraction at Baggett's Stadium Sunday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock.

Although handicapped by the loss of three players, Russ Sutton, tackle; Dennis, end; and probably Gensmer, half back, the Fraters will give their best efforts to chalk up the fifth victory of the season.

Dr. Dreifus, Fraters coach, has called a special drill at the stadium for Sunday morning at 11 o'clock to get ready for the battle.

Hopkins Eleven Plays Silver Spring.

Hopkins gridders will play the Silver Spring Tigers Sunday afternoon in the feature attraction on the High School Field at 2 o'clock.

Three new players, Monk Wells, Dove and Alexander, the latter a member of the Quantico squad last season, have signed to perform with the furniture men.

In preparation for this contest a drill will be held on Haydon's field at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning. All players are requested to report.

Bill Hammond's Pirates will engage the Warrick Preps in the big game on Hunton Field Sunday at 2:30 o'clock. Players are asked to report at 1:30 o'clock.

Centennials Take On Virginia A. C.

Washington Centennials, leaders of the 135 division of the Capital City loop, invade the Shipfield field here Sunday for their annual encounter with the Virginia Athletic Club eleven. Play starts at 2:30.

Engine Company No. 5 gridders trek to Fredericksburg, Va., Sunday for their big game with the Rebels, champions of the historic city.

Players are asked to report at the swimming pool at 10 o'clock sharp to make the trip.

Roanoke Nosed Out By Richmond, 7 to 0

Weak Kick by Suttner Paves Way for Victory in First Quarter.

Salem, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Packing all their scoring punch in a 50-yard drive that began midway in the first period, the University of Richmond Spiders nosed out Roanoke College here this afternoon, 7 to 0.

Swavely Prep Swamps Shenandoah, 20 to 0

Special to The Washington Post.

Manassas, Va., Oct. 29.—Chalking up her fifth consecutive victory, Swavely Prep, of Manassas, socked the Shenandoah Valley Academy's eleven for a 20-to-0 count. Starting in the first quarter, Swavely gained a touchdown by the completion of a pass to Smith. The second quarter began uneventfully, but was climaxed by another scoring, as Steadam, right half back, crashed through the line for an 85-yard run. Beautiful interference featured this play. Hard fighting on both sides marked the third quarter, but neither team scored a point.

The fourth quarter began with a rally from S. V. A., but Swavely again scored a touchdown by Mowrey.

KENWOOD OPEN TOPS GOLF PROGRAM HERE FOR NOVEMBER

Leading Pros Lured by $2,500

Club Champions Will Clash in Tourney on Saturday.

Brightwood Ex-Caddy Play Scheduled Next Sunday.

By DAVE HERMAN.

WASHINGTON'S busiest golf season, crammed with exciting District, club and invitation championships, is rounding into its dying stages, with the $2,500 National Capital open at Kenwood November 12 and 13 the last most notable event of the year.

While all eyes will be turned toward the big professional competition, calculated to attract the greatest money players in the world, two local tournaments in the meantime will carry their share of interest. They are the battle of club champions on Saturday at Kenwood, and the annual tilt of the Brightwood Ex-Caddies Association at Beaver Dam the following day.

Club Champions Ready.

Every District club has decided both its men and women champions. Not only will the men titleholders compete at Kenwood, but also the runners-up. Thirty-six holes are on tap. It promises to be a rather unique event, with such marksmen as Miller B. Stevinson, Harry Pitt, Page Hufty, Maj. R. K. Sutherland, Howard Nordlinger, Johnny Miller, Dr. Larry Otell, Dr. Tom Webb, William DiEste, Forrest Thompson and Ashmead Miller carrying their championship banners into action.

The rich pro tournament at Kenwood will put a high polish to the season. Entries, fast coming in, indicate a powerful representation among the pros, with a goodly number of amateurs also expected to participate. Willie MacFarland, of Tuckahoe, N. Y., winner last year, is coming down to defend his crown, with Walter Hagen, Horton Smith, Johnny Farrell and other big shots of the game seeking gold and glory.

Congressional Stages Tourney.

Congressional Country staged its last important event of the year yesterday, the Tatum Cup championship, an 18-hole medal handicap battle, with a four-way tie resulting between Dr. John Shugrue, Frank Edingfield, Frank Mitchell and Dr. E. F. Coleman. Each plodded his way over the windswept links for a 73 net, and will play off today to determine wh will take possession of the cup won last year by Clarence Charest.

The scores follow: Dr. Shugrue had 77-4—73; Dr. Coleman, 89-16—73; Edingfield, 87-14—73, and Mitchell, 90-17—73.

More than 100 golfers participated and it remained for Dr. Shugrue to set the medal pace with 39-38. One of Congressional's ranking golfers, he finished the last three holes in the dark, scoring his par on the home hole. O. U. Singer, J. F. Dowdall and A. H. Diebert, with 74 each, posted the next best scores.

MARYLAND RALLIES TO WIN OVER V. M. I.

through into the line for 8, and Smith slipped through right tackle again for the touchdown. Maryland recovered a Cadet fumble on the 32, but could not gain.

The battle in the second period went without additional scoring. V. M. I. kicked out of danger after a bad pass from center pushed them back to their own 10-yard line. Here Poppelman went into the game for Buscher. V. M. I. charged to Maryland's 4-yard line, after Smith intercepted a pass at midfield, but the Cadets were held for downs.

The Maryland victory drive was opened early in the third period. Widmyer skirted end for 12 and Nelson made another first down on the 25-yard line. Two penalties set the ball back 10 yards, but Widmyer made it first down with a 20-yard run. Poppelman rammed the line and was stopped at the Cadets' 12-yard line, but the Cadets took the ball on downs. Nelson returned the kick to the 30. Widmyer and Poppelman made it first down. Poppelman passed laterally to Widmyer, who ran around right end for a touchdown. Keenan's kick failed. Maryland recovered a fumble on the V. M. I. 10-yard line, but lost the ball on downs as the period ended.

Trailing by one point as the final period opened, and with Widmyer hurt, the Old Liners continued their drive in the fourth. They went to the Cadet 2-yard line, and lost the ball when Poppelman passed over the goal for a touchback. The Cadets kicked to the midfield, and on the first play Poppelman plunged through right tackle and broke loose. He headed for the sidelines, and dashed 52 yards for the winning touchdown. Keenan again missed the kick.

Cadets Vainly Try To Take Lead.

Game statistics showed V. M. I. made 6 first downs, Maryland, 10; V. M. I. gained 101 yards, Maryland, 208; V. M. I. attempted 10 forward passes and completed none, Maryland attempted 16 and completed 1 for a gain of 15 yards, both teams attempted two laterals, and completed one each, V. M. I. gaining 25 yards, and Maryland, 8; V. M. I. punted 15 times for 531 yards and Maryland 9 times for 367 yards; V. M. I. ran back punts 7 yards and Maryland, 52; V. M. I. fumbled 5 times, and Maryland, 3; both teams recovered three of their own fumbles; V. M. I. drew 8 penalties for a total of 38 yards and Maryland, 7 for 35 yards.

credit for today's cheerful happenings on the grass carpet of the football plant, is a Yale townie, whose chauffeur belongs to the motormen's union. They made effective show of Democracy and football know-how, and, coming in with such abrupt success, they earned themselves much more notice than the guards on a football team ordinarily command.

There was another new party on the Yale side, Dick Callan, the one who scored the touchdown, who earned a sheaf of clippings for his scrapbook with an extraordinarily frisky performance in the general frustration of the Dartmouth Team. Callan, a sophomore, relieved Joe Crowley along toward the end of the first period when Crowley came up off the ground holding his right arm limp in the left one like a bunch of rags.

Lot of Punting Back And Forth.

They were doing a lot of punting back and forth, and, in the second quarter, Yale got the ball on Dartmouth's 39-yard line in the course of the exchange. They found the springboard here and took off for the touchdown, beginning with a 6-yard smash by Callan through the middle of the Dartmouth line. Lassiter and Callan took turns deceiving the Dartmouth youths with false gestures and nimble romps as the Yale line outcharged the Dartmouth forwards and Green figures went spinning along the soil in disarray, until Callan found himself in receipt of a first down at the 5-yard line. There was no long, mauling struggle for the remaining distance. Callan took the ball and found a hole in the right side of the Dartmouth line, where some boys had left their jobs to chase a phantom out toward the end. He rammed his way over in one plunge and that was the story of the scoring and another statistic for the history books.

It can be said for Dartmouth that it played with a little less than half a man at full back where Raoul Morton was performing nominal duties with his face encased in an iron mask, strapped to his ears and chin with strips of gummy tape to shield his nose which had been mashed in the game with Harvard. He was in no fit shape to officiate as a varsity man today and his blocking was strictly perfunctory, which is no sort of blocking to bring down the Yale when they have been aroused by the pity of the old grads and the papers as this crowd was. Morton kicked some punts early in the game, but otherwise he was of very little use in a job which a well athlete, even a draft from the scrub, might have performed much better.

Fishman Does Mound Work.

Sammy Fishman, the Dartmouth quarter back, pitched the equivalent of several innings with his passes, of which he and his colleague threw 29 all told, completing fifteen. But there was a place there in the final period with only a few minutes to go when Overall, a substitute Yale end, who had just gone into the pleasure, smeared Fishman and Clark both, on two consecutive plays, as they imposed too much on their protection while they scanned the fields for catchers. They lost 17 yards in this way and, though they persisted in throwing the ball until two of them worked, bringing a first down at the 20-yard line, it all went for nothing, net, when Hill pitched one into the end zone.

Twice in the third quarter, Dartmouth made dangerous motions, reaching the 8-yard line the first time and stalling only 4 yards from the goal on their next chance.

SPEAKING —OF— TENNIS

By BOB CONSIDINE.

WEDNESDAY night's annual get-together of the District's tennis players at Wardman Park Hotel for a buffet supper promises to be one of the happier events of the collapsing season. The reasonable tax of $1 promises to produce a turnout of some proportion of the tennis populace comparable to the total male population.

Among the speakers are to be Lawrence A. Baker, secretary of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and Clarence Charest, national veterans' champion.

Rankings for 1932 will be announced. It is a stag affair. If you plan to go, make it known to William O. Shreve, secretary of the local tennis association, at National 5165.

The annual announcement of a tennis banquet or buffet is generally official cause for the starting of the outdoor season. This year, A. Thurston Reed, characteristically armed with overcoat, gloves, ear muffs, Army shoes, black wool suit, heavy green fedora and a steel raquet, rushed the season by a week or two and appeared at the Monument courts last week.

This is a "go" signal for a clique of about 50 players who allow no change in the calendar to interfere with their tennis. Among these hardy perrenials are Gene Hermann, Hugh Trigg, Doc Avery, Jim Boone, Ben Swenson, George Considine, Sol Pear, Sara Moore and Mrs. Margaret Graham. Besides these, there are always the George Washington girls.

No wonder Satoh beat Vines in California early this month. Satoh had five racquets, and Vines carried only three on the courts with him. It might be added that Satoh used only one at a time.

The little Japanese's passion for multiple bats is said to have had its instigation three years ago when the French masters toured Japan. The French really put the finishing touches on the extra-racquet business, after Tilden startled the sports world with the fad about 1920. Tilden used to walk on the court for matches in a long polo coat, before polo coats became a walk-up-one-flight standby, with five racquets under his right arm—and shake hands left-handed, precaution he took against bone-crushing pals and enemies.

Lacoste developed the extra-racquet to the peak. He came to America in 1927, I believe it was, with 24 bats, ranging from the looseness of a lacrosse stick to high C tension, varying in the number of strings used in stringing. He had a different racquet for every change in atmospheric conditions, and used racquets with various numbers of strings depending on the type of court on which he was playing. He played with a wide, tight mesh for hard courts, and had double stringing in the middle of his racquets for grass courts.

You can't give him much credit for that undertaking, though. He and all the good players get their racquets free. Six local men players have tacit arrangements with certain sporting stores to use their type of racquet. The height of something or other in the free racquet business was reached by Johnny Doeg and Frank Shields in the early spring of 1928 when, coming up from the South, they ran into a heavy snowstorm and their car stalled in a drift. They had eighteen freshly strung racquets between them in the rear of the car. They picked out two apiece and used the rest for snow shovels.

Here's a gem of a word picture lifted from this month's interesting American Lawn Tennis. The occasion is the final round of the world's pro championship in Berlin. Martin Plaa, the Frenchman, who had put out Tilden the day before, was meeting Hans Nusslein.

"A half dozen times the strings of Nusslein's racquets broke, showing the tremendous force of his strokes, but all this could not gain him the victory, for the Frenchman, although no better technically, had the superior fighting spirit. After the winning set he rushed forward and kissed the German on both cheeks—a deserved tribute—and then, weeping for joy, embraced his happy wife."

WARWICK ELEVEN WINS.

Warwick 130-pound team drubbed the Nationals by a score of 36-6 in a game played at Bloomington yesterday. Finn and Tannenbaum starred for the winners.

CENTRAL AND TECH PLAY TUESDAY

Game Will Feature Week's Scholastic Program.

SCHEDULE FOR THE WEEK.

TUESDAY.

Tech vs. Central, at Wilson Stadium, 3:30 o'clock.

FRIDAY.

Western vs. Eastern, at Wilson Stadium, 3:30 o'clock.

St. John's vs. Devitt Prep, Monument Grounds, 3:30 o'clock.

Gonzaga vs. Swavely Prep, at Gonzaga Stadium, 3:30 o'clock.

Landon vs. Shenandoah Academy, at Winchester, Va.

SATURDAY.

St. Alban's vs. St. James, at Hagerstown, Md.

AN even half dozen attractive games, representing the heaviest bit of campaigning of the season, are scheduled for high and prep school elevens this week. Feature games, involving rivalries of long standing, fairly dominate the list and the largest crowds to storm the turnstiles this season for schoolboy games are expected.

Tech clashes with its arch-rival, Central, Tuesday at Wilson Stadium. It will be the final appearance of the Maroon eleven in the high school championship series and, unless Central upsets the old apple cart, the boys from the mamoth T street institution will come home with their fifth consecutive title.

The game marks the thirty-first annual renewal of hostilities between the two schools. Tech holds fourteen victories in the series, the lengthiest and healthiest of all schoolboy grid rivalries, and Central has won the classic eleven times. Five Tech-Central games have resulted in ties.

Four Games Listed Friday.

Friday, as usual, is the busiest day of the week. Four games are scheduled. Western and Eastern get together in a game to decide the runner-up in the series. St. John's opposes Devitt Prep on the Monument Grounds and Georgetown Prep plays host to Mount St. Joseph's at Garrett Park.

What ranks as the leading attraction of the day, however, is the Gonzaga-Swavely Prep fray, to be played at Gonzaga Stadium.

Swavely defeated Gonzaga at Manassas, Va., in a stunning upset last season and the Irish are anxious to avenge the score. Swavely has another strong team and has been bowling over opponents with alarming regularity. Gonzaga also has a good team. It lost to Georgetown Prep, 22-20, in a thrilling game Friday, after getting off to a flying start by hanging a 13-0 defeat on Eastern.

Sharkey, Schmeling Bout Is Demanded by Max Baer

Carnera Fight Canceled; Baer Has So Many Managers He Gets but 30 Per Cent of Earnings; Plans Reduction.

By ROBERT EDGREN.

MAX BAER, "canceled" arrangements for a Baer-Carnera fight in December by going West for a two months' vacation on his manager's ranch."

How convenient it is to have a manager who has a ranch!

Baer thinks his 14-year-old brother, now 6 feet 6 inches tall and said to weigh 260 pounds, is going to be a great fighter when he gets his growth. Perhaps Max is just waiting for his kid brother to grow up and take Carnera off his hands.

It's announced that Baer won't fight any more until he is matched with Max Schmeling or Jack Sharkey for an outdoor fight next summer. This announcement was a great shock to those of Baer's followers who were going around proudly pointing out Baer's recent fighting record to support a theory that he has become "sensible." Baer was doing the sensible thing when he was taking on as many fights as he could get, cleaning up the Schaffs and Griffiths and that bunch.

Would Be in Position to Get Title Chance.

If he could keep that up until July, disposing of Carnera and a few more, he'd make the proposed second return engagement between Sharkey and Schmeling such a joke that the public would laugh it off the boards. Baer would be in position to demand the first title fight. Laying off until June, he'll be forgotten and the return-return engagement will go smoothly on without him, and Schmeling, taking his turn as champion next year, will announce that Sharkey has a moral right to a return bout in 1934. Baer has shown that he is dangerous, and the dangerous fighter never gets a chance to fight a champion unless he gets the champion into a corner he can't wriggle out of.

The inside history of this big rough guy's life will make a book sometime. He grew up on a pig ranch, near Livermore, Calif., where he butchered pigs. They say that gave him the killer instinct.

Later he got a job in an iron foundry. Ham Lorimer was part owner. One day Lorimer saw a youngster pick up an iron car wheel and carry it across the shop. It was customary to roll those car wheels. He stopped the boy and advised him not to strain himself. Baer laughed, picked up another car wheel and explained that he carried them because he liked to get a little light exercise out of the job.

Lorimer Holds 50-50 Contract With Baer.

Lorimer was a golfer and something of an all-round amateur in sport. He suggested boxing to Baer, got him a trainer and a place to box; managed him through several fights. Baer made a local hit. Lorimer had a 50-50 contract with him. He sold part of this to Ancil Hoffman. Baer sold part of what he had left of himself to somebody else for $10,000 that he thought he needed that week. Baer found this idea of selling percentages of Baer very amusing. Soon he found he owed money after every fight and had nothing coming in.

But Lorimer had plenty of money and handed it out freely. Max would go to Lorimer and say: "Oh, by the way, I think I'd like to pay off a $5,000 mortgage on the old folks' home this afternoon, Ham." And Ham would sit right down and write out a check. Then Max would run up to Lake Tahoe, on the Nevada side, where all the sport resorts were, and come back a week later and meet Lorimer and say: "Oh, by the way, Ham, I'd like to pay off a little $5,000 mortgage on the old home this afternoon." Ham would say: "Why, Max, I thought I gave you a check for that last week." And Baer would grin and think a little and come right back: "Gee, Ham, maybe you did. Seems to me I intended to pay off that mortgage before I left for Calneva, but I might a forgot it. Gee, it musta been that five I dropped in the craps game! What d'ya think of that?"

So Ham would sit down and write Max another check. It was as soft as that.

Lorimer Needs Cash Now; Demands Accounting.

But Ham dropped a wad the time of the market crash and stopped handing Max checks and big cars. Then he took sick and spent several months in a hospital, where it was reported his outlook for recovery was none too good. So Baer naturally lost interest in Ham and hooked up with Ancil. Lorimer is now suing for an accounting and demanding his share of the purse money. It seems he was the manager of record, as all the time he had his contract on file with the State athletic commission, and the piece and percentage managers had nothing on file, but were just getting the money.

They say Baer has reassembled various missing parts and percentages of himself until now he gets 30 per cent of the purse every time he fights and the Baer holding company has to be content with 70 per cent. But Baer thinks he ought to get 70 and the managers 30. That's another reason he intends to sit down for a few months. If they get tired of no percentage perhaps the boys will compromise at 10 cents on the dollar.

Now they're trying to spread a story that Jack Kearns owns Baer, undercover. No chance. Kearns is a 50-50 manager. Add that 50 per cent to the other 70 and Baer would have to pay his managers 120 per cent of every purse taken in. And after expenses had been deducted from Baer's end that might be very difficult.

Fields Wants Battle With McLarnin.

From what I read, it seems Jackie Fields thinks his eyesight is O. K. for a fight with Jimmy McLarnin. If that match goes on it's going to be another terrible disappointment to Young Corbett 3d, of Fresno, Calif. Several months ago Fields was signed to fight Corbett at the welter limit, with the title at stake. Corbett said at the time it was too good to be true.

Young Corbett soundly thrashed both Fields and Thompson while they were holding the welter title, and since then both have dodged him.

The Corbett-Fields fight was suddenly called off after a dispatch saying Fields had injured his eye in a training bout and wouldn't be able to fight again for a long, long time, if ever.

If Fields fights McLarnin you'll know what Fields thinks of Young Corbett. Not that it will do Young Corbett much good. He'll probably have whiskers down to his ankles before any welter title holder will risk getting into a ring with him unless Corbett is chloroformed first.

McLachlen New President Of Columbia Country Club

Is Successor of Asher; Other Officers Are Also Chosen.

LANIER P. McLACHLEN, prominent Washington banker, is the new president of the Columbia Country Club, having been elected at the annual meeting. He succeeds Clyde B. Asher, president for the last two seasons.

Mr. McLachlen's election came with the appointment of other officials for the year. Robert H. Dalgleish, chairman of the greens committee, was selected vice president, Arthur B. Shelton and John Poole were reelected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Chosen to serve on the club board of governors for the term expiring October, 1935, were Clyde B. Asher, Edmund L. Jones, Louis F. Julien, Paul B. Lum and M. J. Gormley. T. Baker Robinson will serve an unexpired term ending with October, 1933.

yard, but a Cardinal was detected in unorthodox play and the team was penalized to its 1-yard line, from which point Rovinski went through the Cardinal left tackle for a touchdown.

Following this setback the Cardinals tried the overhead game and in two passes were down on the Holy Cross 25-yard line, still running the forwards, but their frontier seemed to crumble under the hard charging onslaught of the Crusader line. McVean was thrice hurled down for big losses as he vainly sought an eligible receiver and was forced to kick on fourth down with 42 yards to make first down.

DOWN the FAIRWAY

by DAVE HERMAN

BILL HARDY, professor of "golfology" at Chevy Chase, was discussing tough holes and easy ones the other afternoon. "All are tough to play if you don't know how," Prof. Hardy remarked, in recalling some good and bad shots made over his home course.

Chevy Chase is no easy layout. It is loaded with traps and bunkers. Hazards menace the advance of golfers. One of the best trapped courses in the Middle Atlantic section, it is tricky and treacherous. Still, it has been underrated. Regardless of what outside golfers think, Chevy Chase, with its par 69, offers a challenge to any topnotch professional or amateur.

Back in the spring, a certain expert who likes to dabble in figures discovered that in an invitation tournament at Chevy Chase the third hole yielded less pars and the twelfth produced the most birdies.

From his own experience, and what other crack players have said, Hardy finds the sixth and eleventh the hardest holes to negotiate properly.

From the middle tee the former measures 440 yards, and has a par 4. Although there are no hazards to carry, one must whip out two strong and accurate wooden shots to get home nicely. A drive to the right will force the golfer to bang his second over a sand trap. Many is the day golfers amble into the clubhouse with a story of difficulties on the sixth.

Eleventh Hole Mental Proposition.

The eleventh, 424 yards from the back tee and 400 from the middle, is what Hardy describes as a "mental proposition." Split the fairway with your drive and follow with a true iron shot and you are on the green in 2. The second shot, played from a slightly downhill lie, must be perfect and high. A ditch and high bunker run across the fairway. Hardy explains that the eleventh keeps the golfer guessing; at the same time has a tendency to worry him. From the tee it is 125 yards uphill.

Perhaps the most deceptive hole at Chevy Chase is the seventeenth. Here many matches, usually tight, come to grief. The player is keyed up in anticipation of victory, and the strain sometimes is terrific. Traps guard the green on all sides, save for a little neck to the left. The traps are deep on this 371-yard hole, and light and wind often change the second shot. The hole is slightly uphill on the tee shot, and there is a tendency to get twisted up in a tree.

It was on the seventeenth that contestants in the sectional qualifying for the national amateur and those in the District championship encountered much trouble. Harry Pitt, of Manor, playing with Roger Peacock, new titleholder, in the District event, had a battle on this hole before getting down in six. He missed his second and flubbed his third in the trap.

Ninth Most Difficult, Tourneys Show.

Of the four short holes at Chevy Chase, the ninth, 222 and 247 yards, has given players in championship events the most trouble. It is the longest of the quartet. Tall trees are to the left of the green. Therefore a hook would not be so good. The golfer who scores his birdie has done himself proud. Bob Barrett, fiery-thatched pro, stood up on the tee a few years ago and swatted a booming wooden shot dead to the cup for an ace—a real feat.

Playing a practice round in preparation for the amateur sectional test, Billy Howell, blond star from Richmond, Va., elicited applause from his three comrades, Chandler Harper, who eventually led the field the next day; Regis Loftus and Brown Miller, by firing his tee shot 6 inches from the hole to get a deuce. Howell employed his longest wooden club, the ball barely rolling past the cup.

One of the longest shots ever made at Chevy Chase was registered by the late Capt. Frazier Hale about five years ago, Hardy recalls. It happened on the 365-yard fourteenth. A tremendous clouter, his tee shot landed in the ditch in front of the green. Talking about long shots, little George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring pro, belted his drive on the 503-yard twelfth at Columbia in the recent Maryland championship over 400 yards.

Rain Slows Up Course at Washington C. C.

Players who stroll the rolling hills and fairways of Washington Golf and Country Club these days are finding the grounds heavy. As a result the holes that formerly required a driver and spade now call for two wooden shots in some instances, and in others a driver and either No. 2 or No. 3 iron. The balls roll very little and the golfer is denied considerable carry, Jimmy Norvell, affable assistant to Dave Thomson, explains. The greens are slower than the average course, Norvell states. With the course heavy as it is golfers will have to pay a little more attention to their second shots on third, seventh, eighth, twelfth and eighteenth.

For instance, the home hole at Washington, with the tee situated in a little valley, will cause some golfers no end of worry. The green is up on a slope. From the tee 150 yards away is a ditch cross the fairway. A hook with shot No. 1 will put the player in difficulty. A slice places him near sand traps between the eighteenth and first holes. Formerly a driver and No. 3 iron for this hole, two wooden shots are being used. Feminine players found the course in no way to their advantage during the medal handicap event this past week. Scores were unusually high.

No one ever has been able to beat the brilliant course record of 66 claimed jointly by Dave Thomson and Maurice McCarthy, Walker Cup star, who used to burn up the Washington course while attending Georgetown University. Thomson equaled the mark not very long ago by shooting a remarkable 32 for the first nine and a 34 coming in. McCarthy's first nine round was even greater. His was a 31. Say what you want to, but Dave Thomson's course is no easy stretch for any good golfer.

Dr. Webb Fine Chip-Shot Player and Putter.

One of these days Dr. Tom Webb, who defeated Reese Hair for the Washington championship last Sunday, is going to hit a torrid streak and pound Old Man Par squarely on the nose for a better than 70 score. In his finals, Dr. Webb made a specialty of canning consecutive birdies after losing a hole or so to Hair. A steady performer, Dr. Webb is ranked as the best chip-shot player and putter at the club.

A familiar figure in District professional ranks will take up his new duties at Army and Navy Country Club tomorrow. He is J. Munro Hunter, sr., formerly of Indian Spring. Hunter will replace Lionel Walker, who will terminate a year and a half of service as tutor at the club. The towering Hunter knows his golf, having behind him vast experience. Walker's next step is not known. Wherever he goes, he will make some club a good pro.

No other change in the personnel of the Army and Navy Club has been announced. Cecil Whittington, conscientious young assistant, now rounding out his ninth month at the club, will continue, as will John Connolly, greenskeeper. Whittington, a former caddy at Beaver Dam, served as aid to Henry B. Miller at the Landover, Md., club for four years.

Fourth, Twelfth Toughest At Beaver Dam.

Expressing the opinion of a host of golfers at Beaver Dam, Cliff Spencer considers the fourth and twelfth holes the toughest to battle.

Take the 465-yard par 5 fourth. Woods are to the right, a road to the left. About 100 yards from the green is a ditch running parallel through the fairway. A perfect tee shot and spoon are needed to get on, but what trouble is encountered before the boys get home!

The twelfth is a distance of 418. The tee is elevated and the hole runs through woods. A trap is 150 yards from the tee. Again a ditch presents itself across the fairway about 275 yards from the tee. To the left of the fairway is a trap, about 50 yards past the ditch. On the right of the green is a trap. The carpet sits in the corner of the woods. The idea is to play short of the ditch, and spank a mashie to the green, Spencer states. Some, he says, get bold, and attempt to drive over. They encounter trouble.

Today's mixed foursome at Beaver Dam, with lots of emphasis placed on costumes, promises to be a unique affair. Seventy-five have signified their intentions of participating. Mrs. R. C. Mitchell and John Money took top honors in the last event. Play will start at 1 o'clock. Eight prizes are to be given.

On November 6 the former caddies from Brightwood are to have their day at Beaver Dam. Beaver Dam's representatives will be Johnny Miller, W. J. Cox, Jesse Bagget and Harry Bailey. Bill DiEste, Argyle's cross-handed expert, is another contestant. There's talk of George Voigt, Walker Cup ace and former District titleholder, coming down to play.

Bobby Cruickshank to Play in Kenwood Open.

Bobby Cruickshank, the wee Scot now holding forth as pro at the Country Club of Virginia in Richmond, will be a contestant in the National Capital Open at Kenwood November 12 and 13. Cruickshank recently took over the reins at the Capital City course. A story drifting up this way is to the effect that Cruickshank was flooded with letters from out-of-town golfers seeking to have him instruct them. All of which happened a few days after his arrival. The wee Scot is said to be a splendid instructor. His greatest bid for the National Open Championship was made in 1923 at Inwood, Long Island, where he tied Bobby Jones at 296, and lost by two strokes in the eighteen-hole play-off.

It is interesting to watch the performances of the two ranking feminine golfers of the Middle Atlantic sector—Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, of Columbia, and Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring. Both are champions of their clubs. On the same day of last week, both were claiming the spotlight in separate tournaments. Mrs. Haynes, Middle Atlantic champion, pounded her way over her home course for a record-breaking and par-equaling 77 in topping the field for the club, qualifying by a wide margin. Over at the National Women's course, Mrs. Meckley paced a field of 60 women with an 84 to win low gross honors for the second straight year in the final event of the year sponsored by the District of Columbia Golf Association.

Both Shoot Record Figures At Indian Spring.

Early in August, Mrs. Haynes toured Indian Spring, setting a new women's record with a 79. A few weeks later, Mrs. Meckley had a brisk round and lowered Mrs. Haynes' mark with a shining 77.

Mrs. Frank R. Keefer soon completes her third season as president of the District of Columbia Women's Golf Association. Under her leadership, women's golf has made forward strides. Last week's "grand finale" tournament brought out a large field and was a fitting climax to a most successful year. Mrs. Keefer's work as president is something District golfers will never forget.

Tomorrow at Chevy Chase she will stage a tournament in compliment to her officers and members of the association committees. Mrs. Keefer is donating a handsome silver plate. The event will be conducted annually.

The golf bug has crawled into an energetic band of workers at the Annapolis Hotel. A few months ago some of them ignored the game. Today you can see them stroking away feverishly at East Potomac and Rock Creek. A tournament for the hotel championship has been planned. The latest to renew his divot-digging is Assistant Manager Sam Iseman. Other constant players are Teddy O'Keefe, Andy Rathgeber, Bob Fitch, Bill Fritz, Elbert Bur, R. B. King and J. M. Seward.

The season would not be complete without a tournament for the southpaws. One will be contested today at Indian Spring. Byrne Curtiss will defend the title he won last year. Heading the list of competitors will be the most formidable of all challengers for the title, Sam Rice. Rice won the event several times before.

White House Announces Winter Social Program

Cabinet Dinner on December 8 Is First Event With 6 State Receptions to Follow—Diplomatic Corps Seems Settled.

THE first official reception at the White House, which took place Thursday, October 13, was the opening of the season, but the date having been advanced several weeks before the regular time for the judiciary reception, to accommodate the American Bar Association, other White House dates were not announced until yesterday. The official program this year includes the regular six state receptions with the annual New Year's Day reception on January 2, instead of January 1, due to the fact that New Year's falls on Sunday. The Cabinet dinner will be given on Thursday evening, December 8, and the diplomatic reception on Thursday evening, December 15.

The Vice President's dinner will be Thursday evening, January 12 and the Diplomatic dinner for the chiefs of mission and their wives on January 19. On January 24, will be the reception to members of the Senate followed on January 26, by the dinner to the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court. The short month of February will be well filled with three State receptions and one State dinner. On February 2, the President and Mrs. Hoover will entertain at a reception in honor of the members of the House of Representatives, and on February 9, the dinner will be given in honor of the Speaker of the House of Representatives. On February 16, will be the reception to the officials of the Treasury, Postoffice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor Departments, and on February 23, little more than a week before Inauguration Day, will be the reception to the Army and Navy.

Yesterday the Turkish republic celebrated the ninth anniversity of its declaration, and though the Ambassador of Turkey, Mr. Ahmet Muhtar did not give his annual reception on that occasion, the day was celebrated in New York where a luncheon was given in honor of the Ambassador by the American friends of Turkey, a society of which Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol is president. Later in the afternoon the Turkish Consul General in New York, Basri Bey, entertained at a reception for the Ambassador for the Turkish colony in that city.

Until the end of the war, Turkey was ruled by a Sultan, who was at the same time the Caliph, or the spiritual leader of all the Mohammedans in the world. The title "Sultan" corresponded to that of Emperor, and his realm was called the Ottoman Empire.

After the Armistice of Mudros, in October 1918, Istanbul was occupied by the Allied troops. This event did not signify the end of the war for Turkey; for four long years the struggle for independence continued, until the Peace Treaty of Lausanna, in July, 1923. The Treaty of Sevres, which had been negotiated in the meantime and which would have reduced practically to nothing the sovereignty of Turkey, was never accepted by the Turks.

Just preceding and following the conclusion of the Treaty of Lausanne, Turkey, proceeded to a thorough internal reorganization, the Sultanate, as well as the Caliphate, was abolished, and the republic was proclaimed on October 29, 1923. Gazi Mustafa Kemal was elected the first president of the republic, and is now serving his third term in that office. A new Ankara was built to serve as capital of the young republic, instead of the ancient Constantinople, or Byzantium, which had been successively the capital of the Eastern Roman and Ottoman Empires, from 309 A. D. until the end of the great war.

In 1927, at the resumption of diplomatic relations between the United States and Turkey, Muhtar Bey, veteran diplomat and statesman, was appointed the first ambassador from the Republic of Turkey to the United States. He presented his credentials to the President on December 5 of that year.

Muhtar Bey, who is now a widower, has two married daughters, Mrs. Feriha I. Nebil and Mrs. Fahire B. Enver, who with their children have visited him in Washington at different times.

The diplomatic world of Washington, which in the summer and early fall seemed to be undergoing a complete change, has now settled itself in more or less the old grooves, with exception of one or two changes. Rumor persisted in depriving the Capital of such popular diplomats as Ambassador Debuchi of Japan, Poet-Ambassador Claudel of France, and Herr von Prittwitz of Germany. However M. Claudel and Herr von Prittwitz are here again with no immediate prospects of departure, and Mr. Debuchi is now in Manchuria, making an airplane tour of that region gathering data on Japan's case. With Mme. Debuchi he is due to arrive in Washington via Europe before Christmas.

On Wednesday the new Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Don Oscar Cintas, and his charming wife arrived in Washington from New York, where they spent a few days on their return from a short trip to Europe.

The entire staff of the embassy met Senor and Senora de Cintas when they arrived in Washington, and made them welcome. This is the ambassador's first diplomatic post, his interests having been previously in banking and business. But he is not a stranger in this country, having had business affiliations for years, and has divided his time between his house in New York and his residence in Havana.

Still in his forties, Senor Cintas will be one of the younger chiefs of mission in Washington. Senora de Cintas is the daughter of the late Col. Jose Miguel Tarafa.

The ambassador, who has traveled extensively in Europe and South America, is by no means only a business man. He is widely known as an educational worker, a philanthropist and as an art collector. Many priceless pictures are being sent from his

Dr. Selby and Mr. Quarles entertained at dinner in honor of Mr. Paul Shirley, viola d'amore of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, last evening, and after dinner about twenty other guests were invited for a musicale.

Mr. Shirley was assisted by two concert artists, Leonard Davis, barytone, and Emerson Meyers, pianist.

Representative and Mrs. Fish to Present Their Daughter End of November.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann is expected in Washington the last of the week from the West, where she has been making a series of speeches. The Vice President and Mrs. Gann have been making speeches in Ohio and Indiana.

The Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Ogden L. Mills, will return to Washington tomorrow morning from New England, where he has been campaigning. Mrs. Mills, who went to New York Friday, is expected back in the Capital on Tuesday.

Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley was among those assisting at the tea which was given yesterday afternoon by Col. and Mrs. William A. McCain for the members of the 1932 class of the Army Industrial College and their wives.

Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., will present their daughter, Miss Susan Le Roy Rogers Fish, to Washington society this season. They plan to give a small tea for her at their home the end of November. Miss Fish is taking an extensive course at the Holton-Arms School this winter. Last year she went to school in Switzerland, having attended the same one as Miss Gladys Szechenyi, daughter of the Minister of Hungary and Countess Szechenyi. Miss Fish spent most of the summer visiting her cousin, Miss Marian Gray, on Long Island, where she attended a number of parties given for the New York buds of this season.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank McIntyre have returned to their residence in Massachusetts avenue after a three-weeks' motor trip in the South. They were accompanied by their daughters, Miss Marie McIntyre and Miss Nora McIntyre, and their son, Mr. Edward McIntyre, of New York.

Maj. Gen. Francis Le Jau Parker had five guests dining with him at Wardman Park Hotel, where he makes his home, last Tuesday, at an informal affair.

Mrs. Theodore F. Jewell, widow of Admiral Jewell, has taken an apartment at the Dupont.

Mr. Charles B. Rugg, Assistant Attorney General, left Washington on Friday evening for Boston and Worcester. He will return to the Capital in about ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. Harral Mulliken and Miss Eleanor Mulliken have returned to Washington for the winter, and Miss Ruth Mulliken, who is at Vassar College, will be with them for the Thanksgiving and Christmas vacations.

Miss Phillips Is Engaged to Diplomat

Marriage to Lucien Van Hoorn, of Netherlands Legation, Takes Place Nov. 26.

FORMER REPRESENTATIVE AND MRS. THOMAS W. PHILLIPS, Jr., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katharine Phillips, to Mr. Lucien van Hoorn, Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, and Charge d'Affaires ad interim. The wedding will take place on Saturday, November 26, at Phillips Hall, the country home of the bride-elect's parents, in Pennsylvania. The wedding will be small and the guests will include only the immediate family.

Mr. van Hoorn has recently received orders of transfer from Washington to the Netherlands Legations in Austria and Hungary, where he will be charge d'affaires and chief of mission. The residence will be in Vienna where Mr. van Hoorn and his bride will make their home. They plan to sail on November 30. Mr. van Hoorn has been in Washington for the last five years and has many friends.

Miss Phillips, who made her debut in Washington a few seasons ago, is the sister of Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhart, wife of the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy. Mrs. McCormick-Goodhart was formerly Miss Janet Phillips, and her marriage four years ago was one of the brilliant social events of that season. Mr. and Mrs. McCormick-Goodhart, who are at present traveling in Europe, will not return to this country in time for the wedding.

Mrs. Albert Redmond Fishburn, of London, is a guest at the Shoreham for a week before sailing on the Leviathan for home.

Miss Shaffer Is Married to John C. Wray

Wedding Solemnized in Norfolk; Bride Attended Trinity College Here.

Of interest to Washington was the wedding at St. Andrew's Catholic Church in Roanoke, Va., on Saturday, October 23, of Miss Julia Anne Shaffer, daughter of Mrs. Sidney James Agnelly, and Mr. John Clarke Wray, of Ithaca, N. Y., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Wray, of Boston. The marriage took place at 9 o'clock, with a nuptial mass, celebrated by the Rev. T. B. Martin, pastor of the church.

The altar and sanctuary were decorated with clusters of pink dahlias, against a background of ferns, palms and candles. The altar rail was interwoven with smilax and gardenias. The white satin priedieux were decorated similarly.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Sidney James Agnelly, and wore her mother's wedding gown of old ivory satin, fashioned along princess lines, with leg o' mutton sleeves and a fan-shaped train, which was a continuation of the skirt. Her veil of illusion fell from a cap of Belgian lace and a coronet of seed pearls. The train was likewise trimmed with a band of the lace and clusters of orange blossoms and lilies of the valley. The bride wore a diamond pendant necklace, the gift of the bridegroom. She carried a shower bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and swanzolia.

Miss Mary Josephine Shaffer, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and wore a gown of dusky pink pebbled satin with a turquoise blue velvet turban, trimmed with dusky pink velvet ribbon. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and dahlias and blue delphinium.

Mr. James Wray, jr., of Boston, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Henry Craig Kerlin, of Roanoke, Va.; Mr. Harry England, also of Roanoke; Mr. James Lonergan, of Ithaca, N. Y., and Mr. John Todd, of Pittsburgh. The ring bearer was little Richard Lacy 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lacy, jr., of Roanoke. He was dressed in white satin and carried the ring on a white satin pillow.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride. The bridal couple was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Sidney James Agnelly, the mother of the bride, who wore a gown of black crepe with a shell-pink lace bodice. Her corsage was of gardenias.

Mrs. Wray, formerly of Washington, attended Trinity College and is a graduate of Cornell University. Mr. Wray is a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity of Syracuse University.

Among the out-of-town guests for the wedding were Miss Claire Wray, sister of the bridegroom, of Boston; Miss Stella Hart, Miss Helen Hart, Mr. James Hart, of Oakland, Md.; Mr. Edward Shaffer and Mr. Francis Shaffer, also of Oakland; Miss Marguerite Hart, of Washington; Mrs. Thomas Eugene Rhodes and daughters, the Misses Helen Theresa and Dorothy Rhodes, of Washington; Miss Mary Clark, of Worcester, Mass.; Miss Helen Lake, of Fairmont, W. Va., and Mr. Morton Wilson, of Coxsackis-on-the-Hudson, N. Y.

White House Dates Events for Winter

New York and Havana homes to be hung in the embassy here.

To the great delight of their many Washington friends, an official verification has been given to the rumor that Dr. Ricardo Alfaro, until recently president of Panama, and Senora de Alfaro are to return to Washington, where the former will resume his duties as minister, which position he held until he was called to his native country to become Panama's chief executive.

Senor and Senora de Alfaro are due to sail for New York tomorrow on the S. S. Quirigia. However, the rejoicing that the Ricardo Alfaros are returning is somewhat tempered with regret at the thought of losing the present Minister, Dr. Horatio Alfaro, Senora de Alfaro and their charming family. The two men are brothers and the retiring minister will remain in town until his brother's arrival, and later will serve on one of the Pan-American commissions here.

Mrs. Coolidge to Entertain At Luncheon Today.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, of Pittsfield, Mass., will entertain at luncheon today in the Pan American room of the Mayflower. Mrs. Coolidge is well known in musical circles as sponsor of the chamber music concerts given at the Library of Congress.

Mrs. Mary L. Chapin will entertain this afternoon with an informal tea in honor of her daughter, Mrs. Henry N. Richmond, of Whitesville, N. Y., who is visiting Washington with her 2-year-old twins, Jean and Jane.

Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes will entertain at luncheon on Tuesday at the Mayflower for her debutante daughter, Miss Mal Sykes, and other debutantes.

Capt. and Mrs. Earl M. Findley will leave today for Dayton, where they will be guests for a week of Mr. Orville Wright, coinventor of the airplane.

Mrs. Karl Fenning will entertain a theater party of twelve tomorrow at the play, "Green Stockings," in honor of her sister, Mrs. N. J. B. Healey, of Cobh, Ireland, who is her guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Nader Entertain at Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Nader entertained at the dinner dance at the Shoreham last evening, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kearney, jr., the occasion being their second wedding anniversary. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. William P. Donnelly, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pricci, Mr. and Mrs. Robey, Miss Helene Kearney and Mr. Carl Genzle.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph M. Foster, of Wardman Park Hotel, entertained nine guests there at the dinner dance last night. Mr. Paul E. Wilson played host to a party of six, later escorting his guests to the supper dance in the gold room of the hotel.

Mrs. Herbert Gordon has joined Mr. Gordon at Wardman Park Hotel, coming from Schenectady, N. Y.

200 Bachelors To Attend Ball For Debutantes

Black and White Dance of Mrs. Dunlop Takes Place Next Saturday.

Approximately 200 Washington bachelors from Diplomatic, official and residential circles will be present at the first formal debutante dance of the season, the Black and White ball, to be given by Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, jr., on Saturday at the Mayflower.

Promptly at 10 o'clock that evening all the debutantes will form in line with Mrs. Dunlop and be formally introduced to the young cavaliers, who will join in many of their social functions during the coming season.

The debutantes' mothers in formal black evening gowns, the debutantes and other young girls in white and the men in formal full dress will make an unusually striking picture in carrying out the black and white color scheme.

This will be the second time that Mrs. Dunlop has given a "black and white" ball for the debutantes, the first one given last autumn having been one of the most original and beautifully arranged dances of the entire season for the girls who made their bows last year.

During the serving of supper in the Chinese room of the hotel, a special serenade will be given each one of the debutantes when her favorite songs will be rendered by a well-known singer.

Debutantes from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other nearby localities have been invited again this year by Mrs. Dunlop to be present.

Among those entertaining at small dinner parties preceding the ball will be Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas T. Craven, Mr. and Mrs. Percival Risdale, Mr. and Mrs. William Jeffries Chewning, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Albert Conradis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Trowbridge Tittmann, Mr. and Mrs. George Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Sullivan announce the marriage of their sister, Miss Eileen Elizabeth O'Leary, to Mr. Henry Edwin Tuohey yesterday at St. Stephen's Church. The Rev. George B. Harrington performed the ceremony, which was followed by a nuptial mass. Because of the recent death of the bride's mother the wedding was a very quiet one, with only the immediate families present. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was held at the Dodge Hotel.

Dr. Jane N. Baldwin and Miss Amy E. Shaw, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., are guests at the Dodge. Dr. Baldwin is the college physician at Vassar and Miss Shaw is a member of the faculty there.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Cranford announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Jane, to Mr. Louis Joseph Rauber, son of Mrs. Catherine S. Rauber. The wedding will take place on December 1.

The Society of Mayflower Descendants of the District of Columbia held a reception and tea Saturday, October 22, from 3 to 5 in the afternoon on board the U. S. frigate Constitution, lying in the harbor at the navy yard.

Members, dressed in Pilgrim and colonial costumes, served tea. The ship's crew assisted materially in entertaining by conducting the guests about the ship, pointing out objects of interest and recounting bits of the ship's history. The mildness of a beautiful autumn day added much to the enjoyment of those present.

Among those attending were: The Governor of the Society and Mrs. Frederick W. Newcombe, Mrs. G. M. Brumbaugh, Mrs. Bertha M. Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. John K. Freiot, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hopkins, Mrs. Mary C. Greathouse, Mrs. Bertha M. Robbins and Miss Robins, Mr. and Mrs. C. Leonard Brown, Mr. Frank F. Nesbit and Mr. Harold Jenks.

Armistice Day Ball of Legion To Be Notable

Distinguished Guests to Attend Event Which Will Be Riot of Color.

Lady Lindsay, wife of the Ambassador of Great Britain; Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State, and Mrs. William D. Herridge, wife of the Canadian Minister, will represent the Diplomatic Corps on the ladies' committee of the Armistice Day ball to be given by the American Legion on November 11 in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower.

Mrs. George Barnett, who is chairman of this committee that will supervise the sale of boxes, will also have assisting her Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Frederick H. Payne, Mrs. Peyton C. March, Mrs. William D. Connor, Mrs. Herbert B. Crosby, Mrs. John T. Myers, Mrs. Lutz Wahl, Mme. Georges Thenault and Mrs. Victor Kauffmann.

The Armistice ball, which will climax the day's celebration in the Capital, is being supervised by the American Legion Bicentennial committee at the request of the United States George Washington Bicentennial Commission and the District of Columbia George Washington Bicentennial Commission. Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, U. S. A., retired, has been chosen as chairman of the ball committee.

A tableau depicting life in the days of George Washington will be enacted by talent furnished by the Bicentennial Commission.

Mrs. George Barnett has announced the full membership of her committee, which includes Mme. May, wife of the Ambassador from Belgium; Mrs. Frederick H. Payne, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Victor C. Kauffmann, Mrs. Leuella H. Wahl, Mrs. William D. Connor, Lady Lindsay, Mrs. Peyton C. March, Mrs. Sarah Spencer Thenault, Mrs. Herbert B. Crosby, Mrs. Mildred Herridge, Mrs. Lulie Swanson, Mrs. Alice C. Myers, and Mrs. Michael MacWhite.

One of the features of the ball at the Mayflower Hotel will be the presentation of "Gen. Washington's Birthday Party." This will consist of a series of tableaux as well as a series of dances popular during colonial days and performed by a cast of 24.

An invitation to attend the ball has been extended to Mr. Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War during the administration of President Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Baker will be the principal speaker at the Armistice Day services at the National Cathedral in which the District of Columbia Department of the American Legion will play a part.

The national commander of the American Legion, Louis C. Johnson, will be one of the honored guests.

In addition to members of the Diplomatic Corps, many representatives of the executive, judicial and legislative branches of the Federal Government and officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, have signified their intention of attending and it is expected that the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel will be a riot of color. The decorative scheme of the ballroom will be a most distinctive and colorful one as the flags of all nations will be grouped around the Continental Army standards while the general colonial motif will be portrayed throughout the entire evening.

Card Parties Arranged for Stratford Hall

Nation-Wide Entertainments to Provide Funds to Preserve Lee Home.

A Nation-wide card party for the benefit of Stratford Hall will be held on Wednesday, November 9, at 2 o'clock. In every city and in every community in the United States where groups of people are interested in the preservation of the lovely old mansion on the Potomac, where Robert E. Lee was born, players will gather around bridge tables at the same hour on the same day in certain particularly interesting private homes which will be loaned for the occasion.

Washington, because of its enthusiasm for the memory of Gen. Lee and the traditions and achievements of his ancestor, Richard Henry Lee, also born at Stratford, will be especially active in the card party. Among the houses being loaned for the occasion are Highland, the picturesque residence on Wisconsin avenue of Admiral Cary T. Grayson; the Georgetown home of Mrs. Frederick Hicks, and the homes of Mrs. J. Harry Covington and Mrs. S. McDowell Meek.

Alexandria mansions open for this special occasion will attract guests from both Washington and Alexandria. Mrs. Caenove G. Lee, jr., is chairman of the Washington committee, which includes Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Mrs. Lloyd P. Shippen, Mrs. Brooke Lee, Mrs. Louis S. Greene, Mrs. J. Frederick Essary, Mrs. Benjamin F. Weems. Mrs. Robert M. Reese is chairman for Alexandria and her assistants are Mrs. Gardner Boothe, Miss Elizabeth Boothe, Mrs. C. Beatty Moore and Mrs. James Grafton Rogers.

Contests in each house will be arranged by Mrs. Stephen O. Fuqua and Mrs. John W. Davidge. Prizes will be awarded for different groups and there will be two grand prizes awarded to the top scores made among all players at all the parties.

November 9 was chosen for the date of the card party because it marks the 200th anniversary of the birth of Richard Henry Lee, the picturesque "Light Horse Harry" of Revolutionary fame, whose serious contribution to the formation of the new Republic was "The Westmoreland Resolution" of 1776, the first organized protest of the colonies against Great Britain. Ten years later, in 1776, Richard Henry Lee moved in the Continental Congress "that these colonies should be free and independent States."

Constitution Group Visits Old Ironsides

The following members of Constitution Chapter, D. A. R., were received by Commander Louis J. Gulliver in his cabin on board the frigate Constitution on Navy Day: Mrs. Charles L. Dasher, regent; Mrs. T. Hardy Seay, vice regent; Mrs. Edward W. Raab, Mrs. Alfred Talbot, Miss Louisiana Blackmer, Mrs. Rob Roy McKahan, Mrs. Daniel Roper, Mrs. Robert H. McNeill, Mrs. Adelaide Smith Beard, Mrs. C. B. Stephenson, Mrs. Vina Opdycke, Mrs. Harry Denham, Mrs. Ella Knight, Mrs. Goodwin D. Ellsworth, Mrs. Frank H. Farlin and Mrs. Martha Jackman Junkin. Other guests in the party were Mrs. Cara Pryor Buchanan, Miss Denden and Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Stevens.

The members were presented to Commander Gulliver by the regent, after which prayer was offered by Mrs. Daniel Roper; then the salute to the flag was given. The George Washington Bicentennial pledge was read by Mrs. Edward Raab. Commander Louis J. Gulliver was presented with a small D. A. R. flag and he responded in a gracious manner, stating that the flag would have a place of honor on the historic frigate. Commander Gulliver in welcoming his guests said the work performed by the society was much appreciated and that he hoped it would continue.

Miss Anne Woodbury, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Woodbury, 1801 Hoban road, is treasurer of the French House at Oberlin College. It is Miss Woodbury's junior year at Oberlin.

Miss Ruth Groff, who has just entered Oberlin this fall, was elected to the freshman council from her dormitory, Fairchild. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Groff, 3900 Ingomar street.

Miss Ann Madison Washington and Mrs. Wade Ellis motored to Fredericksburg, Va., yesterday to attend a tea given by the Kenmore Association.

The Arts Club of Washington will be at home this afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, at which time an exhibition of oil paintings and etchings by J. C. Claghorn, of Washington, and pastel portraits and water colors by Miss Edith McCartney, of New York City, will be shown. Mr. and Mrs. Claghorn will receive the guests.

Pretty Wedding Celebrated in Chevy Chase

Miss Groseclose Married to Egbert K. Clark; Many Parties During Week.

The marriage of Miss Catherine Groseclose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson Groseclose, and Mr. Egbert Kent Clark, son of Dr. and Mrs. Egbert A. Clark, took place Friday at high noon in St. Margaret's Church in the presence of the members of the two immediate families. The Rev. Herbert Scott Smith, rector of the church, officiated.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a becoming traveling costume of bronze green Melton cloth, trimmed with wide bands of beaver. Her hat was also bronze green and her accessories brown. She wore a shoulder corsage of Talisman roses and fern. She was unattended.

Mr. Millard F. West, jr., cousin of Mr. Clark, was the best man. After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained the members of the two families at a wedding breakfast at the Shoreham. Later Mr. Clark and his bride left for a wedding trip to New York City. They will be at home after November 7 at Cathedral Mansions North.

The bride was graduated from Western High School and she attended George Washington University. Mr. Clark also attended Western High School and he is a graduate of the University of Virginia.

Mr. Clark's maternal grandfather, Mr. Edward O. Leech, was Director of the Mint in President Harrison's administration.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hook Tompkins were hosts at supper last Sunday evening in their home, Battery Terrill, when they entertained in honor of Mr. Norman Hackett, of New York City. Their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Canfield Peelle, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Larson, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Sherier, Mr. and Mrs. Chester C. Caywood, Mr. and Mrs. Detlow M. Marthinson, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Meade Thompkins, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ash, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Bacon, Dr. Herbert Schoenfeld and Mr. Oris Payne.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompkins entertained at a "drag" and tea yesterday afternoon at their country home, Spring Hill Farm, Casanova, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. May
Now in Miami.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. May are spending five weeks in Miami, Fla., where they have taken an apartment at the Hotel Everglades. They will return to Chevy Chase on Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. Jack Powell, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Eris Powell, has gone to England, where he will attend Oxford University.

Mr. Walter C. Henderson has joined Mrs. Henderson in their home after a ten-day absence. He attended the meeting of the American Ornithologists' Union in Quebec and visited in Boston and New York City en route home.

Mr. Stephen Nyman, of New York city, formerly of Chevy Chase, has returned to his home after being the house guest for two weeks of Mr. Fletcher Henderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Henderson.

Mrs. Charles P. Smith will be hostess at bridge tomorrow in her home, when her guests will be the members of the Monday Afternoon Bridge Club. This will be the first meeting of the year.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. James A Campbell and their daughter, Miss Louise Campbell, have returned to their home from Rehoboth Beach, Del., where they spent the summer and early autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving M. Tullar returned to their home last week. Mrs. Tullar motored to New York City with Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Service, where she and Mrs. Service remained while Mr. Service made a trip to Boston. Mr. Tullar attended his class reunion at Albion College, in Albion, Mich.

Mrs. Speer Entertains
Woman's Church Guild.

Mrs. Luther F. Speer entertained the members of section 13 of the Woman's Guild of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church at luncheon on Tuesday in her home. It was the first meeting of the season of the section. Mrs. E. O. Roberts is leader of section 13. Mrs. Webster S. Ruckman was the assistant hostess.

Col. and Mrs. Arthur Kelly Evans entertained in her honor at Malvern Hall and had among other guests, Mrs. Henry Gassaway Davis, 3rd, Mrs. Francis Emory Warren, Mrs. Richard Nott Dyer, Mrs. Lawrence C. Phipps, Father Richard B. Washington and many others. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Reeves entertained at another large luncheon in Mrs. Vanderbilt's honor in the Homestead.

Mrs. Daniel H. Holmes is issuing invitations to more than seventy-five for a hunt breakfast to be held next Saturday at Passifern Farm following the drag hunt of the Bath County Hounds of which her daughter, Mrs. Fay Ingalls, is master and huntsman. The October hunt program closed today with a drag near the Homestead and the November program will open on Wednesday with a fox chase.

A gay assembly was held this evening in the Crystal room. Prominent among those occupying tables with guests were Capt. and Mrs. William W. Galbraith, Maj. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, Miss Mary J. Crowley and Miss Florence E. Lees, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Fenn, Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Walholm, Mrs. T. Suffern Tailer, with Mr. and Mrs. J. Lorimer Worden, Mrs. Edward V. Hartford, Sir Henry Thornton and Lady Thornton and scores of others.

The Misses Mary and Matilda Mellon gave a large luncheon for friends at the Casino Terrace Restaurant this week.

Miss Blum Wed in Summer Home

A wedding took place yesterday afternoon, at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. William Blum, on the Wicomico River, in Charles County, Md., when their daughter, Miss Janice Blum, was married to Mr. Robert Allen Pugh. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Peck. Owing to the recent mourning in Mr. Pugh's family, the only guests present were the members of the immediate families of the bride and groom.

The bride wore an afternoon gown of old gold crepe satin, with hat and accessories to match. Her flowers were Talisman roses The maid of honor, Miss Mary Crowley, of Washington, whose gown was of dark blue, with hat of the same dark shade. She carried pink roses.

Mr. Pugh, who is the son of Mrs. E. L. Pugh, of Georgia street in Chevy Chase, had as his best man his brother, Lieut. E. L. Pugh, of the U. S. Marine Corps. Mr. and Mrs. Blum have a winter home on Cleveland avenue in Cleveland Park. On their return from their wedding journey, Mr. and Mrs. Pugh will be at home in Takoma Park.

Annapolis Gay With Festivities For Halloween

Naval Academy Takes Lead in Planning Wide Range of Social Events.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 29.—The spirit of Halloween is rampant in local circles, and there will be a number of celebrations, formal and informal, over the week-end.

As this year the holiday falls on Monday, the larger celebrations took place tonight, although there will be numerous informal observances in private homes Monday. Actually, however, public celebrations got under way Thursday night, when members of Annapolis Lodge of Elks gave their annual party at the Elks Home, in State Circle. The affair took the form of a supper and dance and was marked by a large attendance. Last night the soldier boys of Company M gave thtir annual masked cabaret dance in the Bladen street armory. But perhaps the largest and most fashionable celebration was that staged tonight at the Annapolis Roads clubhouse. The regular dinner-dance was transformed into a costume affair, and a gala evening followed.

Washington members of the committee who arranged for the event included the following: Mr. Waverly Taylor, Mr. John H. Wilkins, jr., Mr. Kenneth Donaldson, Mr. J. Holmes Branson, jr., and Mr. Arthur D. Condon.

Movie Ball at Baur House.

The Baur House, at Bay Ridge, also presented a scene befitting the occasion. The dance there was called a "movie" ball, those attending being costumed and impersonating various moving-picture stars. The cleverest impersonations were due to receive prizes.

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Holmes, wife of Capt. Ralston S. Holmes, commandant of the Naval Academy, gave the second of her series of receptions of the fall season. Until the season of Lent rolls around Mrs. Holmes will be "at home" on the third Wednesday of each month.

Mrs. Oman, wife of Capt. Charles M. Oman, Navy Medical Corps, entertained at luncheon Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. MacArthur, widow of Capt. Arthur MacArthur.

State Senator and Mrs. Ridgely P. Melvin entertained a large party of friends at an oyster roast last night at their country estate, Aberdeen, on South River.

Lieut. Good Better After Recent Operation.

Lieut. George F. Good, Marine Corps, who is convalescent from an operation performed recently at the Naval Hospital, Washington, will leave early next week for a trip to Florida to recuperate. Mrs. Daniel M. Garrison, of Annapolis, mother of Mrs. Good, will visit her daughter at Quantico, Va., during the absence of Lieut. Good.

How Slender Women May Be Graceful

Gawky, Skinny Effect Can Be Removed By Study of Up and Down Lines.

By DARE.

"SERENE and unperturbed over the heads of the restless mob——."

There is no need to be embarrassed if one is a tall woman. The most picturesque of women are tall, slender, willowy ones. Who has not thought of a slender woman when they saw a eucalyptus tree swaying in the wind? Slenderness is always associated with grace, therefore you must make this true in your appearance. Above everything else, don't stoop; don't try to camouflage your height with an unbeautiful carriage, because this not only does not do it, but makes your slenderness ungraceful, a caricature. And it takes not one inch from your height! Many an interesting actress has deliberately accentuated her height with the lines that make her seem taller and more slender, and this is not a bad idea if you strive for the picturesque.

Of course, when a woman's husband puts his arms around her and says, "Well, you don't seem to be any shorter because you followed Dare's advice——" well, there is very little you can do about it, because they have actually hung women for murder. Nor, if you stand up alongside the pencil mark you made on the wall with a book on your head before you changed the lines of that costume, and find that you are the same height, can you do anything about it. But the effect is there, nevertheless, and though you may be actually taller than your husband or escort there is no reason why your clothes should make it appear that you tower over him.

Illusion.

Remember that everything in the world is an illusion. When a person talks to another about a color, for instance, or the size of the moon, or any number of other things, one person does not know exactly what color or size that same thing seems to the other, nor can he describe it.

You say, "Red," and I say, "Yes, red," and we may both have in mind, and probably do, an entirely different thing which we call red. The same thing applies to the tall woman. You say, "I am tall, awfully tall, and painfully thin." But you do not know exactly how tall you appear to the other fellow. So see to it that if you are actually tall and thin you do not emphasize it either in your clothing or your mental attitude.

Anything that will cause you to look upward will make you seem taller; the eye follows lines. Therefore stripes make one's eyes go upward, while lines from the left to right make the eyes go from left to right. The eye follows anything hanging; follows anything that goes up and down, in an unbroken sweep of color. So stripes are anathema to the tall and too slender, as are shoes and hats that exactly match the costume, for this makes the eye follow the long, unbroken sweep of color.

Long earrings—just try them and see how they change that swan-like neck into one more resembling a turkey's. And hats that flare off the face not only add to the illusion of height, but actually add height in inches.

If you have a long, slim or even "skinny" neck, why expose it? Don't wear V necks that emphasize it. Scarfs are so graceful and high collars always chic. But wear your scarf in the Parisian way, wrapped around the neck, letting one end fall in back and one in front. Wear fur around your collars.

Grace in Long Sleeves.

A long, loose transparent sleeve will make of an angular arm a thing of grace, that emphasizes the slender and graceful figure. The eye would be so affronted by the unbeautiful arm otherwise that it could never see the lovely hands!

Coiffures must also be considered. A too-long face always requires bangs or similar hair arrangement over the forehead to shorten the effect, and some fullness at the sides. It is possible with the proper haircut and earrings to entirely eliminate that hatchet-like appearance of a thin face.

Tiny and seemingly unimportant things are very important to the clever woman. Even a handbag, long, slender, having a hanging tassel for its only ornament, can add height! The square bag is ever so much more appropriate to the slender. Two-colored and two-piece garments are good.

It can all be summed up into certain rules; lines going from head to foot make one seem taller and more slender, lines going from left to right make one seem shorter and heavier. If one wishes to combine the two, then it must be done carefully for a desired effect.

Everything you could possibly wear either goes up and down or from right to left, so just ask yourself when you purchase a bag, a shoe, a hat or anything at all, "Does this go up and down and add to my height and slenderness" (whether you have it or the lack of it) "or does this go from left to right and shorten me and make me more heavy?"

If you are tall and slender, see that you are not tall and awkward, "gawky," "skinny" or any of the other so descriptive American slang words! Be tall and gracefully willowy with the lines that emphasize neither your height nor slenderness.

And reverse all this advice, furiously, emphatically, if you are one of the majority who are too heavy and wish to look taller and more slender!

Boas of Feathers

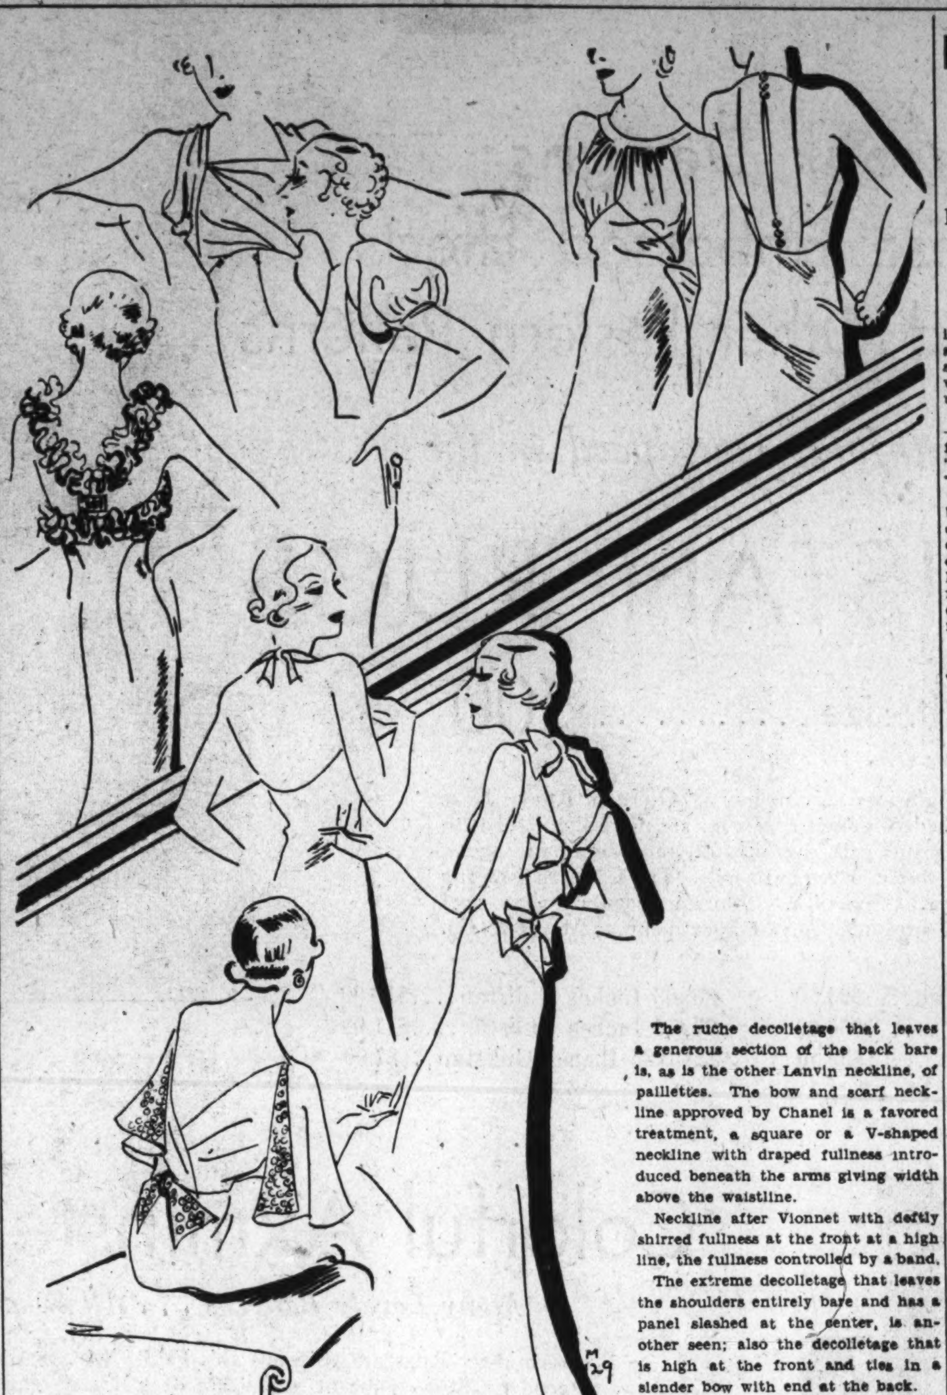
Fine feathers make smart boas these days and when not of feathers, they are frequently of the fabric of the gown.

New Coats Slim

The new coats are slim and molded as to silhouette, but they do things in a big way when it comes to fur. Shoulders are broadened by huge collars and the fur is the long-haired type.

Silver Fox Collar

If you want to look just too elegant for words, have a black wool suit with a silver fox collar. The skirt has the new narrow flare and the built-up waistline.



The ruche decolletage that leaves a generous section of the back bare is, as is the other Lanvin neckline, of paillettes. The bow and scarf neckline approved by Chanel is a favored treatment, a square or a V-shaped neckline with draped fullness introduced beneath the arms giving width above the waistline.

Neckline after Vionnet with deftly shirred fullness at the front at a high line, the fullness controlled by a band.

The extreme decolletage that leaves the shoulders entirely bare and has a panel slashed at the center, is another seen; also the decolletage that is high at the front and ties in a slender bow with end at the back.

Then there is the covered shoulder with looped and twisted sections that join a lower bodice, built up and molded, also shoulder treatments.

Dame Fashion Decrees Milady Must Wear Warm Clothes in Winter Done in Woolens

By ELEANOR GUNN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Fashion has succeeded in getting women to do something doctors have tried in vain to make them do—dress warmly for winter. No pneumonia this winter if Dame Fashion can help it, for at the first opportunity her followers wrapped themselves in wool from the shallow crowns of their tiny woolen hats to the tops of their tweed or felt shoes. Wool coats cover wool dresses and wool dresses now cover the daintiest sort of woolly undies.

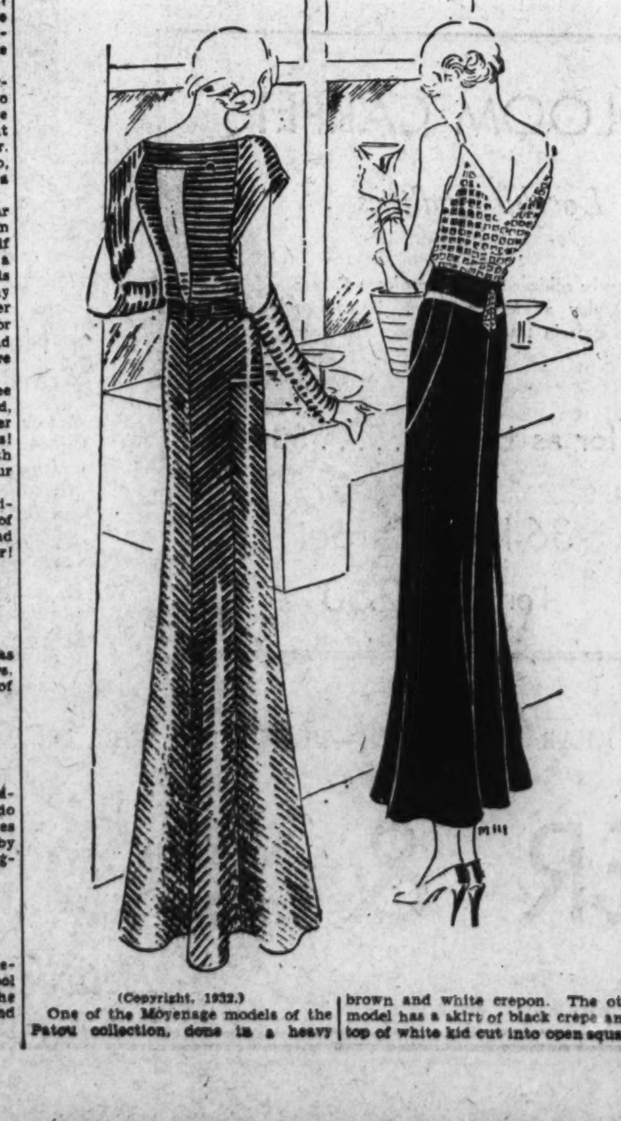
It's impossible to imagine daintiness and woolen united in underwear, you may think, but the new pink fleecy things are just baby clothes grown up and will convert you on sight quicker than it takes to tell about them. Even when we change for evening, we are apt to be merely changing from wool to wool or velvet. No wonder these open-work things and spaced effects are taking on; one must have ventilation!

However the season may develop, it does not seem possible that everything worn will be cut to the same pattern. As usual, there are certain outstanding successes among the imports. These have been copied and recopied until they are familiar objects, but for all the big puff sleeves of fur, the Persian lamb bordered capes and the bias treatments, there is plenty of individuality and plenty of alternatives, with waistlines anywhere they happen to suit you and sleeves full where you desire them, and all the rest of the obliging little tricks one may learn to do in her own little way.

If you are the type for tweeds and for jerseys and go in for swanky sports things, the plainer the better, you will need some heavy looking gold jewelry to balance the picture. Gold's the thing, not when there are diamonds and precious stones involved, but when you are using your metals straight. Begin gold digging right away. Get yourself some heavy bangles, ever so wide, and some clips and huge gold safety pins, and a necklace or so. Button earrings if you like—and you probably will like, if you are one of those who have rediscovered their ears.

The real point to remember just now is that fashion has arranged things so that one may be as mannish as any one should want to be part of the time—usually the daytime part, and as feminine as all the aids to femininity can produce for those after-6 sessions when life is no longer real or earnest, but a recess for the tired business man who likes prettily frocked women about.

Moyenage Models by Patou



(Copyright, 1932.)

One of the Moyenage models of the Patou collection, done in a heavy brown and white crepon. The other model has a skirt of black crepe and a top of white kid cut into open squares.

Midseason Gowns Shown To Parisians

Molyneux started off the midseason showings, though he, as always, insists that this is a showing for the Parisiennes and other society women, rather than for buyers. A large part of the collection was devoted to formal afternoon and informal dinner and evening clothes. No extreme evening dresses. Silhouettes remain close with fullness below the knees and not too much of that. All dinner and evening dresses featured large bows. This time placed flat or incrusted either front or back on the bodice. When wore at the back either above or at the waistline.

A great deal of velvet, including transparent, paysan, and what Miss Dorothy called a crackly velvet, which is a more brilliant paysan in wider line effects, giving something of a moire impression. The dresses that were not of velvet almost invariably carried velvet belts and trimming and were shown with velvet gloves. These gloves have a velvet palm and are now being supplied by Alexandrine. They are crushed wrist types, tubular in cut, flaring just at the wrist, from which they are straight and would reach the elbow if they were not crushed. They are all Lyons velvet. Miss Dorothy tells me they are making a glove with velvet palm and inside, with the backs of printed leopard ribboulding, not so crinkly as Agnes'. They didn't show these, but did show one pair with suede insides, and a hat of the leopard.

Beside the velvet they showed georgette and two or thre satins, navy lace, a two-toned dahlia in triple georgette and two or three satinps. One of the most striking combinations was an orange velveteen dress with two large cabbage roses in the front on the corsage, and a short brown velvet cape. Another excellent dress was a grass green transparent velvet with a five-eighths coat in brown Lyons with a band trimming on the sleeve which ended at the elbow with a flounce lined with ermine. A long narrow scarf of the ermine lined with velvet replaced the collar. Interesting and exotic color combinations like the palest yellow satin with handkerchief scarf of wine georgette at the belt. (Belts are always present on Molyneux's evening things as usual, though there is not the emphasis on lower waistlines as last year, though rather wrap effects). Rust with black and white trim, green velvet on white satin for belt linings and ends, white with bright blue, &c.

In day clothes they featured dresses of soft wool with marocain tops and short jackets of the wool with hats of the same material.

Skirts are decidedly narrow, and are about 12 inches from the floor, a couple of inches longer than last season. There are many silver button trimming effects.

Effective Use Made of Furs In Fall Styles

Employed as Trimming for Capes and Coats Showing New Shoulder Line.

Paris, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Fur is finding effective use in the winter mode, as trimming for capes and coats that show the new shoulder line—and in various ways that are novel and unusual.

And about the shoulder treatment—there's a new decree that's come from one of the Paris establishments. "Shoulders must be broad," it says, "and waists slender."

Frocks, coats and suits launched by Maggy Rouff show widened accented shoulders tapering to a slender normal waist with such broadening effects as tiny pockets at the hipline. Sleeves are often voluminous to carry out the wide shoulder effect, while skirts concentrate fullness at the front.

New wool ensembles with matching skirts and hipbone length jackets built along sports lines and worn with gaily striped, high-necked tunic blouses, are among the outstanding features of the winter collection.

A black wool suit cut on broad-shouldered tapering lines has a hip-length tunic blouse of red, black and yellow striped wool; a brown ribbed wool suit accents the high round neck of its blouse with blue, red and green twisted jersey strips; and a purple wool sports costume has a matching turtle-necked sweater blouse finished with a narrow belt of black seal.

The tunic effect also appears in afternoon clothes, black satin skirts being worn with trim hipbone-length blouses of red velvet and black crepe skirts being accompanied by blouses of white quilted satin.

Style Show Features Dance of Democrats

The Democratic "Victory Ball" at the Mayflower Hotel on Friday will feature a style show of gowns by a nationally known costumer. The modeling will be done by members of the younger social set in Baltimore and Washington. A drawing-room setting for the styles will be established in the Chinese room. The grand ballroom will be used for dancing.

Members of the Young Democrats Club have asked Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt to head the list of patronesses. Others on the list of patrons and patronesses are Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cusick and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Russell. Mrs. John Allan Dougherty is in charge of the advisory committee.

Capitol Hill Club

The Capitol Hill History Club met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Raymond V. Root, Mrs. Jason Waterman assisting the hostess. Mrs. D. N. Shook, the president, presented Mrs. J. P. Yort, recently elected to membership in the club. In the absence of Mrs. Patterson, the director, Mrs. Beasley gave a report of the recent meeting of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. H. N. Link was appointed to serve on the legislative committee of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

Two most interesting papers were read, "The Founding of New Orleans," by Mrs. Link, and "The Louisiana Purchase," by Mrs. C. E. Ferguson. Mrs. W. M. Collins told the club about her recent motor trip to the Pacific Coast. The roll call showed an attendance of 22 members and 1 visitor.

The next meeting will be held November 9 at the home of Mrs. Shook, 3710 Chesapeake street northwest. Mrs. Harvey Baker Smith will be hostess.

The dress at the left is developed in black heavy sheer crepe and is interesting for its tunic line, also the skirt fullness introduced at the back in box pleats. The yoke that creates a high neckline is in lace.

The other dress, more tailored in type, is fashioned of a black and white striped novelty woolen, giving a gray look, with the fabric applied in slender sections to give width above the waistline, also forming pockets. The scarf is a gay red woolen.

Shapes of Hats Worn in Paris Vary Greatly in Their Contours

The most interesting note about the hats being worn in Paris is their variety, especially in shapes. As regards fabrics, velvets and felts lead, followed by taupes, jerseys and woolens.

Among the newest hats are those which can be described as Robin Hood hats, consisting of caps fitted closely to the head and worn sideways and forward, bordered by upstanding cuff that is higher at back than front, and dips over the forehead.

Closely allied to these Robin Hood shapes are others which remind one of the fatigue caps worn by American soldiers; narrow at the sides, but long from front to back.

Tricornes may also be called new, as they have not been seen for a season; those this year are very small, and worn with a veil.

Those upstanding bows that look like rabbit ears are quite a little seen, as well as upstanding feather fancies.

Berets, Breton sailors, and other old favorites are still worn but have taken on new guises. Nearly all the berets, for instance, are either pulled forward into visor drapes, or have their rims padded to thicken the outline. Mlle. Chanel is one of those who continue faithful to the beret.

Both pins and clips are a great deal worn, placed as if to weight the hat at side front where it dips.

Very short veils, both plain mesh and bordered, are popular for the dressier type of hat.

Fashionable Reboux clients are wearing velvet or fur toques trimmed with feathers or flowers, stimulating the trimmings trend.

At the Ritz appeared a turquoise velvet draped cap with a bunch of violets on top, matching scarf twisted tightly around the throat, worn with a black coat.

Augustabernard introduces scarlet with hyacinth blue in a blue crepe dress featuring a shoulder ruffle that is box pleated into a stiff outstanding effect, and lined with the scarlet.

Ideal School Frock

An ideal school frock is the one that dispenses with all ornament, and turns its attention to achieving smartness with simplicity. Buttons and belt in contrasting color are thoughtful details.

Collars for Young

High collars are having their day and nowhere are they more flattering than in the youthful mode. A yoke smooths the way for young shoulders and sleeve fullness comes to light below the elbow.

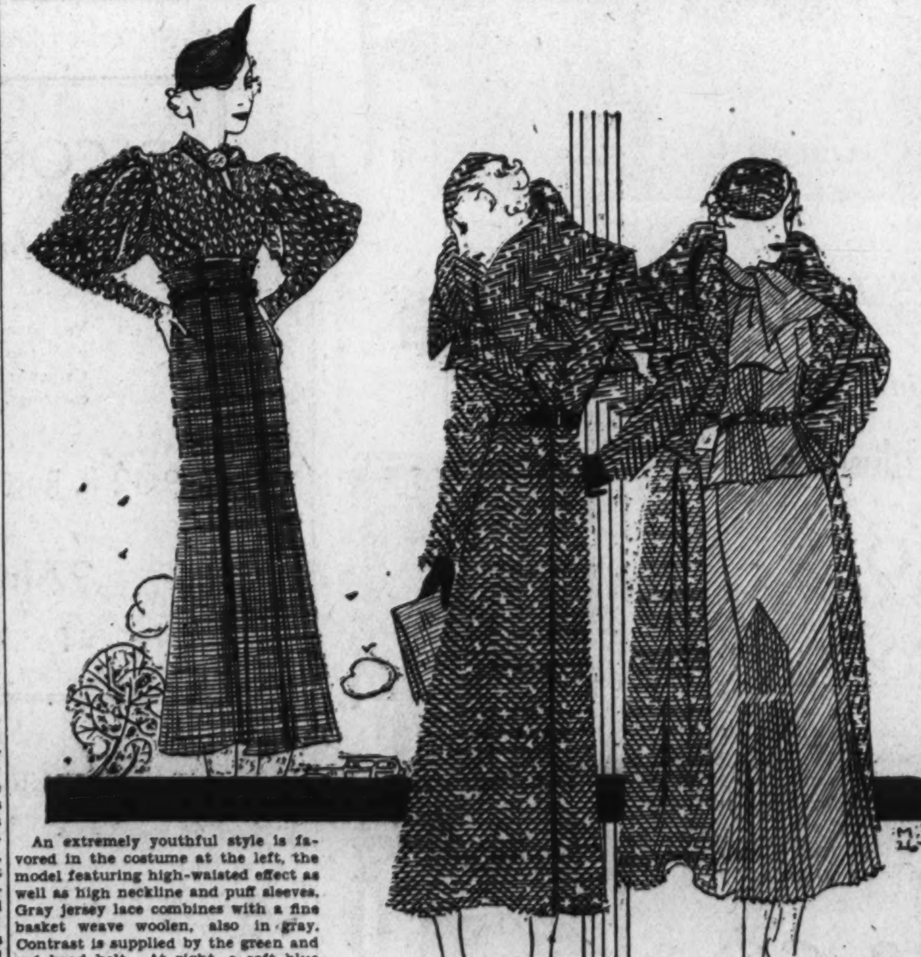
Coats for Young

Little coats follow the fashions of big ones in scarfing themselves cozily and buttoning themselves firmly. The sleeves are cut according to regulation raglan design and pockets are patch style.

Frocks for Young

Young ladies of fashion have their own jumper frock styles which, in this case, consist of a charmingly gathered guimpe and a dress whose armholes are cut out in a new and interesting manner.

Gray With Contrasts Charms in Sports Clothes



An extremely youthful style is favored in the costume at the left, the model featuring high-waisted effect as well as high neckline and puff sleeves. Gray jersey lace combines with a fine basket weave woolen, also in gray. Contrast is supplied by the green and red bead belt. At right, a soft blue with slight violet cast is featured for the tweed coat in large herringbone pattern with white flecks. Gray is introduced in the coat lining and dress, both of fine crossbar woolen. The pleating in the blouse is noteworthy.

Modish Hats Now Securely Pinned to Hair

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt Uses Old Gold "Weapon," Formerly Barred by Law.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

MODERN woman, led by Mrs. Herbert Hoover, wife of the President of the United States, and Queen Mary of England, have revived the hatpin to keep the hats of the moment securely on the head. Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, who stopped over in Washington between airplane flights, also had her modish little felt hat securely pinned to her hair.

Mrs. Hoover wore her hatpin when she traveled to Detroit with President Hoover last week, but those who keep up with the First Lady say that she has been wearing one for several months—in fact, ever since the smart hats have not fitted down so securely on the head as those to which we have been used to in recent years. The hatpin used by Mrs. Hoover is a short one with an inconspicuous head and with the point carefully protected so as not to be a menace to the eyesight. Queen Mary, however, wears gold or jeweled hatpins, with safety caps on the ends. The one noted on Mrs. Roosevelt's hat was more on the order of a glorified class pin of dull gold.

Dame Fashion is to blame without doubt for the revival of the deadly weapon of women. The new hats perch precariously on the head, some of them only coming across one side and can not really be "wished" on. Somehow the short-haired girls manage to keep them on, but the women who have not cut their hair or have let it grow long again find it hard to keep this type of hat on properly without the aid of a hatpin. Their knots or coils of hair are inclined to keep pushing the hat awry.

Caps Put on Points.

It is recalled that in prewar days, Germany and a number of other countries had laws, and still may have for that matter, against the use of hatpins with points sticking out unless caps were placed on the points. No less an advocate of woman's rights than Mrs. Helena Hill Weed, of the National Woman's Party, came under the ban of the German police when she fared forth in Berlin with two hatpins protruding from the crown of her smart chapeau. She was not allowed to go on her way until she had purchased tips for her pins at the nearest shop.

The difficulties of keeping on the new hats or at least keeping them at the proper angle for the short-haired woman who can not use hatpins probably is accountable for the sudden vogue of hat strings that tie under the chin or knot under the curls at the nape of the neck at the back. One smart woman was seen recently attending a convention in Washington with a small brown hat perched high on the side of her head held securely in back by a brown silk ribbon covered elastic.

Even those who do not wish to tie their ribbons under their chin like the girl in the old song who "tied a young man's heart within" at the same time have ribbons on their hats hanging down the back or over the shoulders like the fair ladies of the turn of the century.

Mrs. Hoover in Brown.

Mrs. Hoover's preference for brown this year is seen in the handsome afternoon gown of brown velvet which she is wearing for formal afternoon functions. As with so many of Mrs. Hoover's dresses, this has a touch of soft lace at the neckline.

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt presented a very chic and well-tailored aspect when she paused in Washington for a brief pause on her airplane flight from Atlanta to New York. She wore a suit of tailored tweed in the new fall grayish beige tones, made with a skirt quite plain which came to a length a little shorter than the longest ones for tailored wear we see in Washington, but not so short as the shortest ones. The coat was fingertip length tailored in semifitted effect and was worn over a flowered blouse with a scarf collar to harmonize with the suit. Mrs. Roosevelt wore one of the new small felt hats and a cross fox fur scarf.

Lady Lewis, wife of Sir Wilmott Lewis, is looking very smart in an evening gown of black velvet with a lace top with short puffed sleeves. With this Lady Lewis wears a long closely fitted black velvet coat with a high white fur collar.

Mrs. Terrence Shone, wife of a member of the British Embassy staff, has a dainty evening dress of sun mist satin crepe, made with a princess effect, a square neck line and short puffed sleeves.

Mrs. William D. Mitchell, wife of the Attorney General, is wearing an evening dress of black velvet with built-up shoulders and a tunic skirt effect.

Mrs. Charles Carroll Benedict looked very distinguished at one of the evening concerts in a dress of black silk made along modish lines with a vee shaped neckline and short sleeves.

Mrs. Magna in Black Cloth.

Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general of the D. A. R., has a fall ensemble of black cloth with which she wears a becoming blue scarf and blue hat.

Mrs. Henry B. Joy, of Detroit, is wearing a dress of black rough crepe with white silk flange in front and long white cuffs. With it Mrs. Joy wears a black coat with a high collar, and a small black felt hat turned back in front.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend looked handsome at a concert in a dress of black velvet made with a very long skirt and short sleeves. With this she wore a brocade evening wrap with a sable collar.

Mrs. Stanley F. Reed is wearing an evening gown of the new shade of black rust, made on long lines with short sleeves. Mrs. Reed also has a black lace evening gown, over chiffon, which is very becoming.

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone had on recently a dress of silver metal cloth made on princess lines with a cowl neckline and silver lace sleeves.

Mrs. Edward Foy looks smart in a fall ensemble of brown cloth trimmed with brown fur with which she wears a small brown felt hat.

Mrs. Charles L. Hussey wore for a recent dinner party a dress of black velvet made on closely fitted lines with a square neck line and short sleeves.

Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley is wearing an evening gown of blue brocaded chiffon, made on modish lines with panniers of the material on the hips. Mrs. Hurley has a fall ensemble of blue cloth with a gray fur collar, with which she wears a small blue stitched hat.

WINTER WAS CRADLE OF NOTED VIRGINIANS

Coming Season Will Draw Visitors to Shrines of Old Dominion.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.). With the arrival of winter Virginia is again preparing to turn its attention and that of its many visitors to those of its famous sons whose birthday anniversaries fall within the season.

It has been pointed out that the birthday anniversaries of many of the famous men born on Virginia soil or of Virginia parents read like an abridged calendar of the winter months, and on many of these dates the eyes of the entire Nation are turned to the Old Dominion, mother of States and of men famous in the Nation's history.

Perhaps first, chronologically, is that of Woodrow Wilson, one of the latest great figures Virginia has given to the Nation. The late war President was born December 28, 1856, in Staunton, and studied at the University of Virginia, founded by Thomas Jefferson, at Charlottesville.

Other anniversaries of those either native of or closely associated with Virginia are January 19, birthday of Robert E. Lee, and Edgar Allan Poe, the latter a foster son of Virginia, born in Boston, Mass.; January 20, Richard Henry Lee; January 21, Stonewall Jackson; February 6, J. E. B. Stuart; February 12, Abraham Lincoln, born in Kentucky, a daughter State of Virginia, of Virginia parents, and February 22, George Washington.

Poe, his father dead and his mother in poverty, was brought to Richmond as an infant to be reared. He was sent to England for his early education, and returned to the University of Virginia, where his room, like that of Wilson, is preserved as a shrine.

"Stonewall" Jackson was born in Clarksburg, Harrison County, which is now West Virginia.

Washington and Lee were born in the same county, Westmoreland; Washington at Wakefield, which has recently been restored to its original appearance; and Lee at Stratford, several miles away, which still stands as one of the most famous old homes in America.

Gen. Stuart, hailed by some military experts as the greatest cavalry genius of all time, was born in Patrick County and died in Richmond after being wounded in battle at Yellow Tavern.

Many shrines throughout Virginia, closely associated with these and other famed Virginians, will be the mecca of thousands of visitors during the coming winter.

Georgetown U. to Place Corner Stone on Dec. 8

The corner stone of the Gravenoe-White building, the new science hall being erected on the Georgetown University campus, will be laid with ceremonies on December 8.

Work is progressing rapidly on the building which is now about half completed and will be ready for occupancy in ample time for the opening of the midwinter semester. Maryland's earliest history will be recorded on stone tablets which will decorate the exterior of the building as in the case of Copley Hall. Dr. W. Coleman Nevils, president of the university, is himself planning these features, which will link Georgetown's history with the founding of St. Marys City.

Pierce Hall Players to Give Comedy.

The Pierce Hall Players of All Souls' Unitarian Church will give their first play of the season, a four-act comedy, "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary," by St. John G. Ervine on the evenings of November 29 and 30, it was announced yesterday.

Law Observance

Taken from the Christian Science Monitor.

"If a man be just, and do that which is lawful and right * * * he shall surely live, saith the Lord God." The truth of these words of the prophet has been abundantly proved by the realization of peace and harmony in the lives of many who habitually practice justice and obedience to established laws.

At times it may seem that less is heard of lawfulness than of lawlessness, the extent of which is frequently expressed in emphatic terms. Some few suggest remedies, but more merely deplore the situation and dwell upon its evils. It is a step in the right direction to be awake to a harmful condition, but more than this one step needs to be taken in order to correct a wrong situation.

The teachings of Christian Science affirm the necessity of obedience to all rightly recognized laws if one would be harmonious, happy and healthy. First in the line of this practice is obedience to the laws of God as taught by Jesus in his three years' ministry of teaching and healing. These laws of God are spiritual laws and have regard to reverence for and understanding of God, and with our relations with one another.

When Jesus was questioned as to his interpretation of a certain governmental requirement his answer was wise and consistent. Therefore, if we would follow his example we, too, should intelligently obey the laws of the land wherein we dwell.

This example of Jesus' careful consideration of conditions imposed by national laws is set forth in the twenty-second chapter of Matthew. Jesus and Caesar were not in accord in their points of view, their doctrines, or their modes of living, yet Jesus recognized the need of obeying the acknowledged authority of the land when he said, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's;" and he referred to the tribute "penny" required of its subjects by the Roman government.

Because of his orderly consideration and obedience to God's law, he demonstrated order and harmony in his own life and restored health and peace to multitudes of others. His spiritual understanding of God enabled him to express harmony in human affairs, because an understanding of God demands and supplies orderly thinking.

Ignorance or disregard of the laws that govern a community, a state, or a nation, results in confusion and chaos. Criticism of the laws should be constructive, and should not be attended by disregard. Obedience to an existing law is the only right action. It is important to be awake to the fact that there are no degrees of lawlessness.

There may be degrees of seriousness of the effects of breaking laws according to the nature of the laws, but that individual who disregards a traffic signal through carelessness or because it seems safe to do so, or who neglects to obey the prevailing rules of sanitation, or evades a legitimately imposed tax, either large or trivial, is as much a lawbreaker as one who may break another law with far more disastrous effect. The difference is in the immediate effect. The general effect of all disobedience to law is the same, confusion and disorder. Disobedience must be corrected in individual thinking and practice before it can be wholly eliminated.

Disinclination to restraint of any kind is a prevalent human trait, and is largely responsible for disregard of laws. Certain laws may be distasteful to some; others to others. Right restraint is recognized as a necessity if one would progress. The mathematician confines himself to proven rules if he would solve his problems.

The teachings of Christian Science are very clear and unmistakable in the matter of needed obedience to correct habits of thinking. There is much food for thought in the words of the Leader of Christian Science, Mary Baker Eddy, on page 60 of "Miscellaneous Writings." "Mind's possibilities are not lessened by being confined and conformed to the Science of being." The Science of being recognizes only perfection, toward which all right thinking people are working, and its rules, when obeyed, have brought health and peace to multitudes of unhappy ones.

It is not a Utopian dream to visualize an era of more order and far greater harmony than now exists in human affairs. Those who are correctly governed by God's spiritual laws, and are, therefore, consistent in their daily living and their adjustment to human affairs, are experiencing a measure of peace and harmony not otherwise possible. Responsibility is individual; and when this is universally and actively recognized, great progress in the individual, the race, and nations will be realized.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"SCORPIO."

If October 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 6 a. m. to 7:15 a. m., from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m., and from 7:30 p. m. to 8.45 p. m. The danger periods are from 9 a. m. to 10:15 a. m. and from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m.

Forces and influences operating on October 30 will tend to keep you "running around in circles." You will be inclined to feel that you do not know "whether you are coming or going." Little will be accomplished on this day, but out of the seeming chaos may be born some worthwhile ideas that you will be able to put into practice at some later time.

The child born on this October 30 will be a quiet and restrained little individual. He will be a comforting person to have about the house; pensive, with an understanding nature, and thoughtful of the needs and desires of others, he will indeed have an important influence in his home. He will be a good student, not brilliant, but a plodder.

If you were born on October 30 you are most probably one of those people who, even in the face of almost certain defeat, are hopeful. Your ability to anticipate the "silver lining" even in the darkest cloud will keep you striving onward long after most would have turned back. In those ventures where hard work and steady plodding win the day, the victory will be yours. You would make a success of almost any kind of research work, whether scientic or economic. You are not at all secretive, but at times you are most uncommunicative. When in a group you are very reticent and reserved. When you do speak, and it is only after much thought, your words are carefully listened to, and your advice usually followed.

You are not particularly imaginative or creative. Once, however, a course of procedure has been mapped out, you are adept at following it and carrying it out to its ultimate successful conclusion.

Successful people born October 30:
Andrew J. Downing, horticulturist.
Roscoe Conkling, politician.
John Rogers, sculptor.
Charles A. Needham, artist.
William S. Rainsford, clergyman and evanegilst.
Gertrude F. Atherton, author.

UNUSUAL EXHIBIT HOME NOW OPEN

Many Features of Famous American Houses Incorporated in Residence.

The opening of an unusual exhibit home at 3319 Quesada street northwest, offers to the public the first of the second group of authentic early American reproductions, built by Muhleman & Kayhoe, of Richmond, Va., and sponsored by J. Wesley Buchanan, Inc., local realtors.

Two homes are being completed on Quesada street, each representing many absolute replicas of early American features from original famous old American homes.

In designing and building these homes, Muhleman & Kayhoe have endeavored to reproduce in detail the many charming and quaint features of the colonial and early American homes and at the same time to provide all the modern conveniences and improvements characteristic of the ultramodern home.

With a background of years of close study of early American architecture and convenient access to the remarkable restoration work now being done at Williamsburg and on many individual historic residences throughout the State of Virginia, their facilities for this character of work are exceptional.

Better Designs Seen.

In the history of American building, styles of architecture have varied and changed with practically each generation, and many types that are now thoroughly unattractive to the eye have come and gone. In the past few years there has been a remarkable revival of interest in architecture, particularly as applied to the home, and the public is fast becoming educated to better designs in architecture.

Of all the periods in the history of this development the colonial and early American types have proved the most lasting. The graceful lines and fine detail of the houses of these periods have survived in spite of all changes, and it is well for the family investing in such a permanent thing as a home to bear this in mind. Little or no doubt exists in the minds of competent judges that there is a measure of permanent value added to the investment in such a home that should not be overlooked by those contemplating the purchase or erection of a place in which to live.

In working out the details of these homes, the builders have chosen with care from many hundreds of available details and have copied exactly from original old houses the finest features obtainable.

Some were taken from one house and some from another, but they are all authentic.

Duplicate of Wakefield.

In the exhibit home offered today, the fireplace end of the living room is an exact reproduction of the house at Wakefield. The entrance detail is taken from the Raleigh Tavern at Williamsburg, erected prior to 1735. The front door is copied from the old Travis House recently restored at Williamsburg. The outside blinds are from the St. George Tucker House in Williamsburg.

The wainscoting, window sash and the inside trim in the dining room are from the old Peyton Randolph House at Williamsburg, the home of Peyton Randolph, president of the first Continental Congress, which is now restored to its original condition. The rest of the inside trim is from the Neel House, recently restored at Williamsburg. The cornice molding in the living room, dining room and hall, the second floor landing newels and the baseboard on the first floor are from the Neel House. The oak flooring on the first floor is copied from the random-width pine floors to be found in most colonial homes and the window frames are from an old colonial house in Williamsburg.

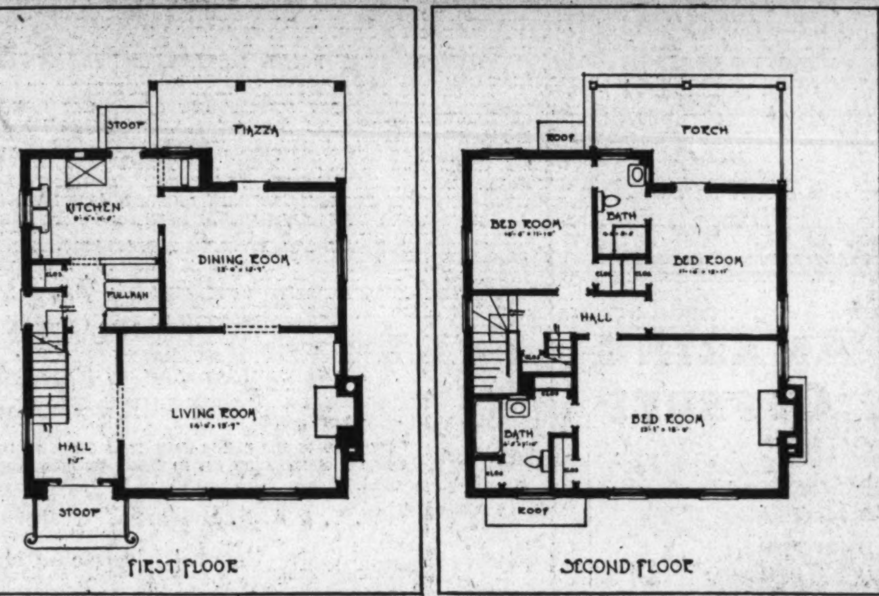
In reproduction these details, the architect has made exact measured copies of the originals at their source. Detail drawings had to be made and special millwork run to produce these exceptional homes. Heretofore, it has been possible to get this only in individually built houses at a very high cost and J. Wesley Buchanan, Inc., in offering this lovely home, presents one of the few opportunities ever available to home buyers of moderate means to acquire a home of outstanding individuality and special workmanship at a modest cost.

Realtor Association Meets Here in January

Washington has been selected for the midwinter annual business meeting of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, by action of the executive committee of the association.

The meeting will be held at the Willard Hotel, January 25, 26, 27 and 28.

QUESADA ST. EXHIBITION HOME AND FLOOR PLANS



Post Staff Photo.

Exhibit home at 3319 Quesada street northwest. It is the first of a second group of authentic early American reproductions built by Muhleman & Kayhoe, of Richmond, Va., and sponsored by J. Wesley Buchanan, Inc., local realtors. Below are shown the first and second floor plans.

INITIAL LANGHORNE HOME GROUP SOLD

First 10 Residences in New Development in Clarendon Quickly Purchased.

All ten of the initial group of homes in Langhorne community have been sold. Langhorne community is a recent development of moderate-priced homes in Clarendon, Arlington County, Va., by the District Corporation, for which Weaver Bros., Inc., are the exclusive agents. This operation attracted a great deal of interest among home seekers.

These homes typify the latest in modern house construction. The material and workmanship are of the best. Their features include tile baths, large tile sink in kitchen, electric refrigeration and the latest type of gas range.

Their location is particularly convenient for one employed in Washington, being between two bus lines and only two blocks from the center of Clarendon, where stores, schools and churches are available.

The properties are favored with plenty of natural shade, are fully landscaped, and complete in every detail, requiring no further expense after purchase.

Control of Tax Levies Sought.

A proposed constitutional amendment for control of tax levies and bond issues is on the November ballot in Oregon, as is also a bill extending the Multnomah County tax supervision plan to all counties of the State.

NEW CAFRITZ HOMES FIND READY MARKET

Community and Detached Dwellings Are of Original and Fine Design.

The favorable reaction of the Washington public toward the new Cafritz community of detached homes at Forty-sixth and Davenport streets northwest, has been evidenced by the fact that only a few of the first group remain unsold. This community is ideally located between Wisconsin and Massachusetts avenues, close to River road and adjacent to the country club section, and is protected by all desirable restrictions.

Many have been attracted to these homes by their striking individuality of architectural design. They feature early English and Dutch colonial motifs, and include many unusual and attractive features. Set back on large, beautifully landscaped lots, they contain seven and eight spacious rooms and offer a wide variety of treatment. No effort has been spared to make them outstanding in every respect and those who have not yet visited this distinctive Cafritz community will find it worth their while to inspect its many delightful features.

Step-Down Living Room.

All of the homes have the new step-down living room, two steps below the general first floor level, with an interesting colonial brick fireplace, making a delightful arrangement for proper furnishing. The dining room is raised and adjoins the living room. Another popular feature incorporated in these homes is the recreation room in the basement. Completely finished, with heat and ventilation and a charming wood-burning fireplace, it is an ideal place for a den or entertaining.

The kitchens are bright and spacious and feature a new silver and green color scheme. Their completeness and practical arrangement leave nothing to be desired in housekeeping convenience. A green porcelain sink, with double drainboard, built-in cabinets, electric refrigerator and consolo gas range, appeal to the modern housewife. The floor is covered with inlaid linoleum, cemented down.

On the second floor there are three or four bright bedrooms, large wardrobe closets, linen and cedar-lined closets, and two attractive colored tile baths. The baths are completely equipped with built-in tub and shower, Venetian mirror, medicine cabinet and chromium plated fixtures.

Metal Weather Stripping.

All of the homes have bronze screens and metal weather stripping throughout, either built-in or separate garages, concealed radiators, numerous convenience outlets and a radio outlet. The cellars contain double laundry trays, instantaneous hot-water heater, Red Jacket heating plant and toilet.

No detail has been overlooked in the design and construction of these homes, built to give the greatest value for today's dollar. Many features found only in homes selling at higher prices have been included without extra cost, due to the enormous purchasing power of the Cafritz organization and its program of continuous operation throughout the year.

HOMES SELL FAST AT MEADOWBROOK

New Standard of Building Finds Market for Ten; Four More Ordered.

An amazing demand for homes in Meadowbrook, the beautiful Chevy Chase development just south of Columbia Country Club, is revealed by the fact that ten houses of this fine residential operation have been sold in the past three months and four are being built to order for owners.

Meadowbrook, Inc., managed and directed by Monroe Warren, has set a new standard in fine home construction. Mr. Warren believes that there are many families who are in need of and will purchase homes today, if these can be secured in a restricted and controlled community at a price in keeping with reduced incomes.

With this idea they have planned a number of individual homes that will meet with instant approval because of their surprising values that will be apparent immediately to all homeseekers. With years of experience in the building of fine resi-

BOSTON PLANNING SLUM CLEARANCE

First Complete Architectural Survey Is Under Way in City.

The first complete architectural survey of the City of Boston is now under way, and, it is expected, will prove of national value in community planning, according to William Stanley Parker, fellow of the American Institute of Architects, in a progress report of slum clearance in Boston.

"The Federal Government, through the agency of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has made available funds for low cost housing and slum clearance projects under certain conditions of State or municipal control," says Mr. Parker, chairman of the Boston advisory committee on housing appointed by Mayor Curley.

"These conditions involve complete supervision of limited dividend corporations organized to provide limited rental housing. It is generally understood that preference will be given to slum clearance projects rather than developments of housing on raw land.

Studies Under Way.

"Certain preliminary studies in the field of housing have been under way for the past nine months under the guidance of the Emergency Planning and Research Bureau, Inc., which has been aiding the unemployed architects and engineers and engaging them, among other ways, in the collection of statistics, the study of existing conditions and the development of studies for new housing in different sections of the city.

"Some three months ago, Mayor Curley directed the city planning board to investigate the question of housing and what steps would need to be taken to secure some of the R. F. C. funds for slum clearance projects in Boston.

"As a result of this original instruction and upon recommendation of the planning board, the mayor has appointed an advisory committee on housing to cooperate with the planning board in this study. The advisory committee on housing consists of some 34 persons representing the dozen or more organizations that are active in one or another part of the field of housing, and other citizens broadly representing the community.

"The committee is studying what legislation is necessary and will act as a coordinate force, to correlate the various existing activities and to develop whatever new activity is needed in order to meet the new, present conditions.

Experiment Made.

"The architectural division of the Emergency Planning and Research Bureau, Inc., has undertaken an experiment of some interest and possible real value. At the request of the division about a dozen architects have accepted the task of making preliminary surveys of as many different sections of the city, each one of which is an entirely separate and distinct problem.

"The men working on the bureau pay roll are available to do the drafting of the necessary charts and compile the desired statistics of occupation and other facts concerning the districts.

"These reports are not expected to be final, in any sense, but should be helpful as points of departure for the further detailed study of the desirable development of the districts.

"Taken together they will constitute the first complete architectural survey of the city and will prove of educational value to the profession as examples of the varying approach to community planning that will doubtless govern the reports of a number of different architects acting on the most general instructions and with complete freedom to develop their surveys and reports entirely according to their own ideas.

"The combined reports will constitute the first contribution of the architectural profession to the work of the mayor's advisory committee on housing.

Slum Clearance Work.

"Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds constitute a new opportunity to accomplish slum clearance. The local legislation needed will perhaps develop opposition of selfish interests, but that will be the easiest part of the problem to solve.

"The real problem will be to obtain the slum areas at any price that will permit demolition of the existing structures and the construction of new housing of the required low cost units with a density per acre that will not exceed what the surrounding local conditions will determine to be reasonable.

"There's the rub. Until this underlying land cost problem is solved consideration of the details and costs of the contemplated new housing units is somewhat academic. Concentration on this problem should be, I believe, the first concern of the organized study of slum clearance, and low cost housing here and elsewhere."

HOMES IN MEADOWBROOK, CHEVY CHASE PROJECT

JUNIPER ST. HOME EXCITES COMMENT

Realty Associates Report Newly Opened House Being Praised.

Many persons have visited the new home opened for inspection at 1615 Juniper street northwest by Realty Associates, with offices in the Chandler Building, 1427 I street northwest. The beamed library and many other of its fine features are receiving much praise.

On entering the doorway of the house, built on the center-hall plan, a spacious hall greets the visitor. To the right of the hall is the drawing room. To the rear of the drawing room is a flagstone porch, overlooking a garden. To the left of the hall is a dining room, and at the back of this there is a breakfast room. The kitchen is perfect in equipment and efficiency, according to the builders. The rear stairway leads to the second floor from kitchen entry and the basement, enabling servants to enter or leave without using the main hallway.

The second floor contains five bedrooms and three modern bathrooms. Fixtures in the bathrooms are of the ultra modern colored type with chromium, plated glass door shower.

The guttering and down spouts are of copper. There is bronze screening throughout on steel casement windows, insuring protection against weather. The house is equipped for the use of gas. There is a de luxe gas furnace in the basement and a gas automatic storage hot water heater. The kitchen contains a modern console colored gas range and an up-to-date electrolux refrigerator.

The furnishings, drapes and wall paper present many new ideas in design.

The home may be reached by driving straight out Sixteenth street to Juniper street and turning left. The house is built of stone and dark red brick.

NEW STANDARDS OF BUILDING SELL MEADOWBROOK HOMES

dences, with the most capable mechanics in their employ, with today's low cost of construction materials, they have been able to realize this ideal.

By elimination of all overhead, financing and carrying charges and finally by a willingness to accept a very small profit, they have been able to produce a dwelling built in accordance with the following specifications on large lots in Chevy Chase, Md., on ground owned and subdivided by the Chevy Chase Land Co., at the remarkably reasonable price of $10,750.

The Chevy Chase Land Co. is cooperating with Mr. Warren in every way possible in the furtherance of his commendable project. The rapid disposal of his homes, built to plan, proves beyond doubt the soundness of his policy of small profits and quick sales. The site for this operation contains 58 home sites, 24 of which are built on or are being built on.

The tract is located conveniently to schools, stores, transportation, neighboring developments and clubs. Every lot has a minimum frontage of 65 feet and is abutted by concrete streets and curbed sidewalks, installed and paid for. The entire community is served by every utility—sewer, water, gas, electricity—and handsomely planted with shade trees.

The houses, built to plan, are of various designs, each being planned by a good architect. Their architecture is controlled so as to be in conformity with the generally fine appearance of the development, and their construction is the most modern and substantial.

In explanation of this plan, Mr. Warren announces the design for a 1933 model home that can be built for a prospective home owner for the foregoing sum on terms of one-fourth cash and $56 a month. It is of sightly colonial style of architecture and all brick construction, with slate roof, copper flashing, gutters and downspouting.

It can be situated on a large, landscaped lot, bounded by concrete sidewalks and streets. The plan includes a large living room, open fireplace, dining room, breakfast nook, de luxe kitchen with built-in cabinets, one-piece sink with double drainboards, and equipped with electric refrigeration and ventilation. The buyer has the choice of either gas or electric range. The kitchen floor will be covered with inlaid linoleum.

The plan will provide for three large bedrooms, cedar closets of ample size, two baths and a large, floored attic over the entire structure.

CENSUS OF HOUSES IN CITIES IS URGED

Knowledge of Occupancy and Vacancy Needed for Sound New Construction.

Cities must make periodic counts of the occupancy and vacancy existing in various types of buildings if they are to build and keep a sound foundation for new construction. That is No. 1 of nineteen recommendations by the National Conference on Construction, which outlines its program for orderly and healthful development of new building activity.

The recommendation is: For every city of over 100,000 population, some kind of continuous and frequent inventory of the supply and demand for real property. In these cities some way of measuring current need is held an essential part of any coordinated effort to stabilize the construction business. For smaller cities, at least annual occupancy-vacancy surveys as an invaluable check on changes in construction needs.

Building Codes.

Formed to bring about a better organization of the entire real estate and construction industry, the conference, made up of official representatives of the various groups through their trade associations, and sponsored by the Department of Commerce, met in Washington, D. C., October 13 and 14. Discussion included problems of eliminating waste, of financing real estate development, of safeguarding appraisals.

Some agency set up in each community with authority to hear complaints and recommend adjustments in the building codes as rapidly as new prdoucts and new methods of construction make changes advisable.

Adoption of the uniform mortgage act approved by the national conference of commissioners on uniform State laws.

Discussion of appraisal practices with a view toward securing techniques and organizations which will have the support of all branches of the real estate and construction industry.

Further study of proposals for facilitating the assembly of large plots of land under united ownership or control for the purpose of improving present blighted areas of cities. This assembly should be made in such a way as to conserve the interests of all property owners.

A summary of such surveys in 38 towns and cities as made by local real estate boards and other organizations covering present residential vacancy was published by the Department of Commerce August 1. New such inventories have been made within the last few weeks by the real estate boards of Philadelphia, Salt Lake City and Tampa, Fla.

The Commerce Department's Division of Building and Housing, working in cooperation with the conference and drawing on the experience of surveys already conducted by real estate boards through the aid of their local postoffice staff, published in March of the present year in preliminary form a detailed model plan on how to make an occupancy survey.

Home Loan Banks Filling Great Need

Deplorable Mortgage Conditions No Longer Exist, Says Chairman Fort.

With the twelve home loan banks now open, Franklin W. Fort, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said in a radio address October 17:

"No longer does any excuse exist for a continuance of conditions in the mortgage market that have been deplorable this past year. Every honestly managed building and loan association, savings bank, or insurance company in the United States is eligible to join the system. . . . And not only can they get money, but they can get it simply and at lower interest than they charge.

"If lending organizations will not do their duty now—if they do not join this great national system and, relying upon its aid, relax the abnormal tension in the real estate and building markets—then the home loan banks have the power to make direct loans up to 40 per cent of the value of the property. But we hope and confidently believe that, now that we are open for business, the great mutual lenders will prove their mutuality of character by doing the job which is rightfully theirs—by lifting, with the funds collected from the neighborhood, the threat to any neighbor."

PRODUCERS COUNCIL WILL MEET TUESDAY

Architects, Manufacturers and Builders to Plan Steps to Recovery.

Action of the construction industry to combat the depression will be discussed by architects, manufacturers and builders at the ninth semiannual meeting of the Producers Council at the Architectural League, New York, Tuesday and Wednesday, it is announced by the American Institute of Architects, with which the council is affiliated.

Speeding trade recovery through new construction, elimination of waste, and the adoption of improved trade practices will be the theme of addresses, reports and discussions. Greater cooperation of all branches of the industry to meet changing conditions will be urged.

The opening event is a meeting at 10 a. m. Tuesday of the board of directors of the council, which is a national organization of manufacturers and associations of manufacturers of materials and appliances used in building construction. The president of the council, F. W. Morse, head of the Chamberlin Metal Weather Strip Co., New York, will preside, and deliver an address.

F. Leo Smith, technical secretary of the Structural Service Department of the American Institute of Architects, will submit a report on the advancement of knowledge of materials, methods of construction and equipment for buildings with the aim of bringing about a better understanding of the art and science of architecuure.

Reports From Officers.

Reports also will be received from the officers of the council, including the president, the treasurer, A. B. Tibbets, and the executive secretary, H. H. Sherman, F. P. Byington, chairman of the board of the council, will report on the progress of the Construction League of the United States, and J. C. Bebb, secretary, for the committee on trade practices.

A joint luncheon will be held Tuesday at 12:30, the Producers Council, the Producers Council of New York, and delegates from other council clubs participating.

A general session will convene at 2 p. m. on Tuesday. A paper on the affiliation of the Producers Council with the American Institute of Architects, prepared by N. Max Dunning, of Chicago, chairman of the institute's structural service committee, will be presented by Stephen F. Voorhees, of New York, fellow of the institute.

Robert D. Kohn, of New York, chairman of the Construction League of the United States and past president of the institute, will deliver an address on "What the Producers Council Has Done for the Construction League." H. R. Dowswell, of Shreve, Lamb & Harmon, New York architects, also will speak.

There will be discussions at the general sessions on trade recovery and structural service activities, price cutting, trade practices and bid peddling.

New and Improved Products.

On Tuesday, at 7 p. m., Raymond M. Hood, of Hood & Fouilhoux, architects, will speak on "The Significance of New and Improved Products to Modern Architecture." Rolland J. Hamilton, president of the American Radiator Co., will discuss "How the Manufacturers of Quality Products Are Meeting New Trends in Building." Mr. Morse will be toastmaster.

Technical and official topics will occupy the final sessions on Wednesday at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday afternoon there will be a golf match and dinner at the Hempstead Golf Club, Hempstead, Long Island. W. L. Keplinger is chairman of the golf committee.

Government Loans to Public Corporations Opposed by Realtor Committee.

In view of the pressure for early decisions by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation as to loans for housing under the emergency relief act, it becomes important that there be established at this time a clear understanding as to what policy will, as a matter of practical effect, advance the general public interest of the communities affected.

The housing committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, for this reason, has adopted the following resolution:

"The housing committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards believes the construction and operation of housing facilities of all kinds to be a private business function and not a public utility. We are opposed, therefore, to laws which create housing corporations under State supervision which are granted special privileges, including tax exemption, thus creating a favored class of citizens. We are opposed also to governmental loans or subsidies to such housing corporations."

LANDLORD GRANTING AID IS COMPENSATED

Owner Housing Tenants on Relief List Rewarded on Tax and Water Rates.

Owners of rented rooms, flats and apartments are not left to meet the entire cost of emergency relief for their cities in respect to the item of shelter under a plan which Ontario cities employ.

The plan, which has been in operation for two years in the city of Windsor, Canada, is based on the city's compensating the owner who is housing tenants on the relief list, that compensation being in amount to meet at least the owner's tax charge and water rates for the premises thus occupied.

Upon inquiry by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, C. J. DeFields, who has charge of this side of the emergency relief work for the city of Windsor, outlined the plan as follows:

The city makes an allowance to the owner of an amount equal to 1-12 of the yearly tax rate per month, plus $1 for water rates. Under the present provision the total amount now paid in Windsor may not exceed $10 per month, but under an "order in council" recently passed by the provincial government, municipalities are now permitted to make the maximum amount $15 per month, and the Windsor city council is contemplating action to allow the increased amount. The new plan would make the compensation equal the yearly tax rate plus 50 per cent as a basis, plus, also, the $1 per month allowed for water.

If there are any taxes standing against the property in question the amount allowed by the city is turned in to the city treasurer and placed to the credit of the taxes owing. If all current taxes are paid to date, it is suggested to the owner that the allowance be credited to the 1933 taxes.

For rooming-house keepers the same plan is followed. If there are taxes owing on the property, the allowance is paid into the city hall and the landlord is notified to give the rooming-house keeper credit on his rent in the amount allowed. Rates for furnished rooms are based on the tax rate on the part of the house occupied.

Fully 70 per cent of the amount involved is, in practice, returned to the city treasurer on back or current taxes.

The city at the present time is housing approximately 1,000 families. The work as to housing is being done under the supervision of the fire department at a cost to the city of approximately $100 per month, plus the cost of the gasoline necessary for investigating work.

SHOEMAKER REALTY FIRM GOES TO K ST.

Pioneer Company Moves to Make Way for New Bus Terminal.

The Louis P. Shoemaker real estate office, now at 1407 New York avenue northwest, is moving to 1719 K street northwest, the building which is now occupied being one of those to be removed for a new bus terminal. This is the fourth move of this office in the 56 years of its existence.

The late Mr. Shoemaker started his career as a real estate broker August 15, 1876. He and Albert F. Fox began their separate operations on the same day and in the same building, 920 F street northwest, occupying the same office. It probably required considerable courage to open a real estate office there at that time so far from Pennsylvania avenue.

Some years later Mr. Shoemaker moved to 612 Fourteenth street northwest, showing the trend of real estate business. Later he had his office at Fifteenth and H streets northwest. The Naval Intelligence Bureau required this space during the war and the office was moved to its present location.

Mr. Shoemaker died in 1916. His friends recall he experienced the usual ups and downs of the real estate business. He went through booms when a piece of property could be sold several times on the way to the office. He also saw conditions as flat as any of us today have experienced. His great interest in citizens associations and civic affairs generally did not interfere with his real estate business and he was president of the Brightwood Citizens' Association for many years until he died.

Since Mr. Shoemaker died, his office has remained under his name. The new location is perhaps no more drastic a move than has been made by the office on other occasions. Better parking facilities and more satisfactory operating conditions were the factors behind it.

BUILDING PERMITS

Chevy Chase, D. C.

A composition of authentic reproductions of the best and most charming touches from early colonial homes.

The fireplace end of the living room is an exact reproduction of the home at Wakefield in which Washington was born; the entrance detail is taken from the Raleigh Tavern at Williamsburg prior to 1735; the front door is copied from the old Travis House, recently restored at Williamsburg. In reproducing these details the architect has made exact measured copies of the originals at their source.

In working out the details of this home the builders have faithfully copied from original old homes the finest features obtainable.

The house is all-brick construction, with slate roof. A master's bedroom with open fireplace and private bath; a model kitchen with breakfast nook adjoining, are modern convenience features. Each room in the house is worthy of a study from a standpoint of fine architecture and good taste.

Stocks Give Up Early Gains; Fractional Loss Recorded

Market Is Still Stalemate as Trading Slows Down to 359,820 Shares.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The weekly report of freight car loadings, showing a slight decline after five weeks of gains, nipped a rather feeble rally in the stock market today.

Important liquidation failed to appear, but small early gains were lost after publication of the report, and in leading issues, fractional net losses prevailed at the finish, with some down as much as 1 to 2 points.

On the whole, however, the market was still a stalemate, with nothing in outside developments of a character to break it out of the extremely narrow trading range in which it has fluctuated all the week, making it the dullest week since July. Today's transfers were only 359,820 shares, making it the smallest Saturday turnover since October 1.

Union Pacific, Santa Fe and Lackawanna lost about 2 points, and rails off a point or so included Chesapeake & Ohio, Great Northern preferred, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, Northern Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Industrials off a point or so included U. S. Steel, Allied Chemical, American Tobacco B, Liggett & Myers B, Case, National Biscuit, Corn Products, United Aircraft and Westinghouse Electric. International Business Machines dropped 3 in a thin market.

Norfolk & Western failed to follow other rails down, rising 2½ in the early trading. A couple of the railway equipments, General Railway Signal and American Brake Shoe, were up a point or so in small turnover. Hershey rose 2 points.

Wall street was interested in a news ticker report that General Electric and Westinghouse might distribute to stockholders their interests in Radio Caorporation of America, but shares of the companies involved were not much affected. The radio issues and Westinghouse were off a little, while General Electric was steady.

Week-end business surveys hinted that the seasonal peak may have been reached, but inasmuch as it has appeared later than usual, the hope is being expressed that the year-end letdown may be less than usual. The modest gains in steel production appear to be held. The movement of freight, which usually reaches and holds around the year's best levels this month, normally turns downward in November.

A sag in commodity prices may have been a factor in the late dip in the share market.

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

Stocks.

Important liquidation failed to materialize in the half-day session. Narrow trading was still the rule, and the market closed with an average loss of seven-tenths of a point. The sales volume sank to 359,820 shares. Rails generally sagged slightly, with the exception of Norfolk & Western, which gained 2½ points.

Bonds

Feeble flurries in oil and rail specialties failed to move the market out of the stagnation rut. The turnover dropped to $3,986,000, the lowest since August 15, 1931. The averages at the close were unchanged. Foreign obligations were quiet, and United States issues remained inactive.

Trading on the curb was extremely dull, with leading issues recording moderate losses at closing. About one-sixth of the entire short session activity was in Electric Bond & Share issues. Aluminum of America lost 1 point. Total sales dropped to 50,000 shares.

Wheat.

A dramatic last minute flurry sent wheat prices to the lowest level in the history of futures dealing. The collapse followed cabled advices that the 1932 southern hemisphere harvest had begun and that offerings were pressing Liverpool, foreshadowing a fierce world competition. Corn and oats joined the decline. December wheat sold at 44 to 44⅛ cents.

Cotton.

The market was easier as week-end hedging increased. Trade buying declined, and prices sank 13 to 15 points. December contracts sold at 6.12. Private advices from Liverpool reported hedging and scattered liquidation.

BOND VALUES STAND UNCHANGED IN SALES

Feeble Flurries Fail to Move Market; Turnover Is $3,986,000.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Outside of a few flurries in oil and rail specialties, the bond market was a stagnant affair today with most trades holding firmly to the side-lines.

It was the dullest session since August 15, last year. Sales totaled only $3,986,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged.

The day's features consisted in a run-up of some petroleum company securities and a moderate reaction of several of the recently buoyant carrier liens. Pan-American of California 6s and Richfield Oil 6s advanced 5½ to 7 points, respectively, while Shell Union Oil 5s were up as much as 1⅞ points.

Losses of a point or more were suffered by some issues of Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago & Northwestern, Chesapeake Corporation, Rock Island, Erie, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, New York Central, Nickel Plate and Chicago Great Western. Nickel Plate 6s, which will be removed from the trading list of the stock exchange on November 1, dropped 5½ points. Trading in the deposit certificates of this issue, however, will continue.

Minor gains and losses were about evenly divided in the majority of the utilities and industrials.

Foreign obligations were quiet and generally easier. The Australians were weak, losing a point or more, and bonds of Buenos Aires were down as much as 10 points.

The United States Government list was steady and inactive.

10 Leading Auto Plants Pay $1,169,756,602 on Common

By LANE CARTER.

Net sales of ten leading automobile manufacturers during the past five years amounted to $10,320,448,242, and their earnings on common shares aggregated $1,169,756,602, it was revealed yesterday in an analysis of the automobile business covering 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930 and 1931.

The survey did not include the Ford company, which does not report to the New York Stock Exchange. The earnings applicable to common of the ten companies were equivalent to 11.3 per cent on net sales.

Nash Motors, with a figure of 17.2 per cent, led the group with the highest percentage of earnings on common to net sales. The five-year dollar sales of the Nash company were $428,794,757, and the five-year net for common was $73,913,456.

General Motors was second, with a percentage of 15.9 per cent. Net sales of this corporation were $6,025,902,911, and earnings applicable to common amounted to $960,923,975.

A severe drop is then noted, with Auburn in third place with 7.7 per cent common earnings of net sales; Studebaker, fourth, with 6.2 per cent; Chrysler, fifth, with 5.68 per cent; Hudson, sixth, with 5.5 per cent; Hupmobile, seventh, with 5 per cent; Reo, eighth, with 3 per cent, and Graham and Willys Overland in the red to the extent of $16,695,768 and $21,256,838, respectively.

Only four years were included for the Hupmobile Company, as it did not report its 1931 dollar sales. General Motors led in total net sales; Chrysler was second in this field with $1,254,276,666; Hudson, third, with $684,382,426; Willys Overland was fourth, with $594,129,757; Studebaker, fifth, with $587,494,636, and Nash sixth, with $428,794,757; Reo, seventh, with $215,870,668; Hupmobile, eighth, with $195,814,203; Graham, ninth, with $194,188,783, and Auburn, tenth, with $139,593,435.

For concerns doing a strictly automobile business Nash led the field in actual common earnings, as General Motors does a great deal of business outside of the automobile. Nash also showed the highest percentage of profits in relation to sales.

Officials of the Nash company attribute their low place in net dollar sales to the fact that "they have never seen fit to enter the fiercely competitive very low priced car field" or undertook marketing of trucks. High sales of the other companies is believed due to this activity.

During the five-year period the ten companies paid out in dividends on their common the sum of $938,774,427, or 77.7 per cent of the net earned on common. General Motors led with disbursements of $717,736,092. Nash was second with $69,513,500. The Graham company was the only one not to pay dividends.

Four of the companies, Reo, Studebaker, Hupmobile and Willys Overland paid out in dividends more than was earned in common. The Auburn Co., with an extremely small capitalization, leads in the size of earnings per share and is second in the amount per share paid in dividends. Nash, with the fourth largest amount of outstanding common stock, is first in dividends per share and second in earnings per share for the five years.

CURB PRICES LOWER IN DULLER TRADING

Leaders Lose Moderately in Short Session Sale of 50,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Activity in the Curb Market was at an extremely low ebb today and prices, after mulling around uncertainly in the early part of the short session, closed slightly easier.

Most of the leaders opened a bit firmer, but, on the final count, moderate losses prevailed. The turnover approximated only 50,000 shares.

About one-sixth of the entire day's transactions were in Electric Bond & Share, which, after opening at 25½, and edging up to 25¾, slid back to 23⅞ for a loss of 1⅛ points. Aluminum of America lost a point and fractional declines were recorded by American Gas & Electric, Cities Service, United Gas and Utilities Power & Light. Standard of Indiana, the only one of the leaders that was active, eased ¼ of a point. Neither Humble nor Gulf made an appearance on the tape.

Cash Incomes of Farms Advance Above Normal

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—September farm cash income rose sharply above normal seasonal expectations and reached substantially the same figure as in the corresponding month of 1931, according to a joint estimate of the State Street Research & Management Corporation and the Corn Industries Research Foundation.

The estimate covering a 71 per cent sample of all farm items sold for cash during the month totals $313,000,000 compared with $237,000,000 in August, an increase of 32 per cent as against a normally expected seasonal betterment of only 21 per cent.

Christmas Booms Richmond Tobacco

Work on Packages Starts Early; Output of Plants Gains.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Work on Christmas packages, started this year earlier than usual, is increasing the output of Richmond tobacco plants and some additional workers have been added to the payrolls, information gathered today shows. Plant officials said that although Christmas holiday business does not start normally until between the first and middle of November, Christmas packages already are being prepared here for delivery to the Pacific Coast, and in anticipation of heavy orders expected early next month.

The Richmond branch of the American Tobacco Co. reported a full 5-day schedule and early orders for Christmas goods in advance of those received last year.

During the last two weeks more than 100 workers have been added and a night shift started by the Whitlock branch of the P. Lorillard Co. in order to meet an increased demand for the regular line of products aside from the holiday trade which is expected later in good volume.

Hides Increase in Price.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Responding to reports of sales of large quantities of spot hides by leading producers, values on the New York Hide Exchange rose sharply for a time during the past week.

COTTON PRICES CUT ON HEDGING DRIVES

Trade Buying Is Less as 13 to 15 Point Losses Are Recorded.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The cotton market was easier today under week-end hedging. Trade buying noted during the middle of the week was less in evidence and support otherwise may have been restricted by talk of a possible increase in crop estimates.

December contracts sold off to 6.12, or 15 points net lower, and within 4 points of the previous low price for the present movement. They closed at the lowest for the day, with the general market barely steady at net declines of 13 to 15 points.

The opening was 4 to 8 points lower under scattering liquidation and increased Southern selling, particularly from the Eastern belt. A private report placed the indicated crop at 11,677,000 bales compared with an indication of 11,362,000 by the same authority a month ago and the last Government estimate of 11,425,000 bales.

Otherwise, the pressure came chiefly from week-end hedging, but with demand limited prices sagged off, with spot houses sellers of near months.

Reports received from the Southwest said the country basis was the strongest of the season with a seemingly good demand.

Liverpool cables did not fully meet Friday's late decline in the local market, but private advices said there had been hedging and scattering liquidation in that market promoted by the labor situation. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance from U. S. ports at the end of the week was estimated at 188,000 bales against 198,000 last year.

Motor Industry Is Seen Passing Lowest Point

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Consensus in the motor trade is that the industry passed the low point of production in October.

Leading manufacturers are said to believe that operations should attain a greater volume in December when practically the entire industry will be in full stride on its 1933 program.

U.S. Sugar Consumption Declines 36,669 Tons

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—September consumption of sugar in the United States is estimated by B. W. Dyer & Co. as 537,082 tons, compared with 573,751 tons in September, 1931, a decrease of 6.39 per cent.

Distribution in the United States in the first nine months of 1932 was 4,473,261 long tons, a decrease of 2.86 per cent from the same period of 1931, the same authority estimates.

Cocoa Prices Weaken.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Prices were under pressure on the New York Cocoa Exchange during the past week on a further increase in New York warehouse stocks. They now stand at 645,356 bags, a record high, and an increase of 43,151 for the week.

Cheer-up—Everybody!
Better Times Are on the Way!

● Business is improving—slowly but surely—as indicated by many industrial "barometers." Soon, if nothing happens to "upset the boat," everybody will have a job and all will face the future with tranquility.

● Throughout its 118 years of usefulness and loyalty to its customers, the city and the National Government, The Metropolitan has witnessed many periods of stress and "hard times"...including the dark days after the Civil War...but after each trying experience our country, as well as this bank, has "come through"...stronger and greater than ever before!

SECURITIES MARKET IGNORES HANDICAPS

Speculative Forces Stalemated as Factors Aid Steady Tone.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Speculative forces reached a stalemate in the securities markets this week.

Favorable factors included maintenance of U. S. Steel's preferred dividend, further gains in electric power consumption, continued return of currency from hoarding, futher influx of gold and rapid piling up of excess bank reserves, which will eventually be seeking profitable employment.

Against this, however, was the fact that October was drawing to a close, and the time of the usual year-end letdown in general business activity approaching. Also, third-quarter earnings statements appearing for scores of corporations indicated that the summer period saw a new low for the depression in earnings, and that restoration of general corporate earning power would take time.

Sign of Strength.

Some quarters in Wall street felt that it was an impressive sign of underlying strength that the stock market was able virtually to ignore a tumble in wheat prices to new low levels since the founding of the Chicago Board of Trade, and early in the week a sharp recession in the British pound sterling. The action of commodity prices was rather disheartening, but important declines were limited to a few items. The bond market was also a rather sorry affair early in the week, but it stiffened later.

A modest decline from the previous week of 8,405 cars was shown in the freight car loadings report, as published for the week ended October 22. In view of the normal seasonal trend, the improvement in the movement of freight has been decidedly well maintianed, with the peak reached later than usual. November, however, normally sees a rather decided falling off.

Steel production, likewise, is likely to reach its normal autumn peak in October, although executives expressed hope that with the automobile industry starting on its 1933 models, and railroads likely to do a little buying, operations may be well supported through November.

Preelection Hesitancy.

Normal preelection hesitancy was widely mentioned in Wall street as a factor in the quiescence of the security markets. It was clear, however, that the market lacked anything in the way of decisively stimulating news to move it higher.

The steel preferred dividend was counterbalanced by the largest quarterly deficit ever reported by the corporation. On the other hand, the belief that the worst was seen last summer, that the seasonal betterment in business has been, to a degree, of a basic character which should tend to bolster it against the year-end downward tendency, and the hope of continued improvement when the seasonal stimulus appears in basic lines in the early months of next year, were important influences against selling.

The turnover in the stock exchange was the smallest for any week since July. Activity appeared to be greatest on advances, with business drying up almost completely on declines. The price average of 90 representative shares ended the week at 55.6, up 1.7 points from the previous Saturday. Bonds failed to recover fully their losses of the early part of the week, the average of 60 corporate issues ending the period at 70.0, against 70.3 on October 22.

E. W. GAMBLE JOINS BARNEY & CO. HERE

Broker to Affiliate With F. P. Morse in Managing Capital Office.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Resignation of Edward W. Gamble, jr., as representative in charge of the Washington offices of Stein Bros. & Boyce since 1929, to accept a new brokerage connection was announced yesterday. He is now affiliated with Frank P. Morse in the management of the Washington offices of Charles D. Barney & Co., members of New York and Philadelphia stock exchanges, New York Cotton Exchange, New York curb market, Chicago Board of Trade and Chicago Stock Exchange.

Simultaneous with this development, announcement was made that Charles D. Barney & Co. will materially increase their activities in this city. Ground floor offices, fronting Fifteenth street northwest, have been leased in the Woodward Building, at the corner of Fifteenth and H streets. This space, formerly utilized by the National City Co., permits construction of a spacious boardroom with an extended frontage on the lobby of the building and with entrances from both the lobby and the Fifteenth street front offices.

The new Charles D. Barney & Co. Washington offices will be ready for occupancy near the middle of November, at which time the personnel will be materially increased and all features of a thoroughly modern brokerage office will be made available to clients, including direct wire connections with the more important security and commodity markets throughout the country.

The new affiliation in the Barney Washington offices brings together once more two old friends and associates. Edward W. Gamble, jr., entered the employ of Redmond & Co. soon after his graduation from the University of Virginia. He became their Virginia representative during the period when Frank P. Morse was their Washington representative. Later, both men transferred to J. & W. Seligman & Co., Mr. Morse as Washington representative and Mr. Gamble as head of the firm's retail department in New York. Business rivals for three years, they are now back in teamwork as representatives for Charles D. Barney & Co., which firm was established in 1873.

Election Awaited For Cotton Rises

Worth Street Expects Rebound Regardless of Final Results.

(Associated Press.)

Cotton has climbed about 8 points above last week's close and the trade appears to believe it will stay in its present range until after the election.

Worth street merchants were quoted as saying the present situation in dry goods is merely a preelection discounting of the worst that possibly can happen and that rebound will occur regardless of who wins in November 8. Of eleven cotton opinions all were bullish.

At 6.11 cents a pound compared with 6.09 last Saturday, cotton still is one point under the price a year ago and the range of the December contract is 6.27 to 6.38—far from the 10 cents mark promised two months ago. At the same time the little hedging and local selling that reaches the market from time to time is absorbed by covering of trade buying, and the undertone is generally steady.

It was said in the trade that from now on hedge sales should slowly diminish with the passing of the peak movement and that it was doubtful whether the opportunity to make purchases at depression levels long may be offered. With the national election and the Government's next estimate of the 1932 crop falling on the same day, it was said speculative demand likely will be light until both the buyer and the seller has something definite on which to enter the market. There has been some slowing up in manufacturers' sales, but it was pointed out that the soundness of current improvement of textiles throughout the world remains unchallenged. Movement of American cotton to France and Germany continues heavy, and reliable sources reported Japan to be a heavy buyer of spot cotton for November-December shipment.

Congress Cigar Co. reports for the quarter ended September 30 net profit of $23,667, equal to 7 cents a share, compared with $36,416 or 11 cents a share in the preceding quarter and $34,557 or 10 cents a share in the 1931 period.

Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Co. reports for the nine months ended September 30 net profit of $385,959, equal to 41 cents a share, compared with net loss of $1,087,097 in the first nine months of 1931.

Wall Street Thinks Bears Begin Flight

Bankers and Brokers Say That Market Recovery Is Started.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—A direct question, asked by Allied General Corporation of a number of leaders in the Wall street investment field, showed that three-quarters believed the bear market in securities has turned, it was announced today. This marks the first rift in the clouds that has been seen by these students since the tremendous 1929 wave of liquidation swept over the stock and bond markets, carrying prices to only a fraction of their former valuation. In both 1930 and 1931, when a similar question was asked of the same group of authorities, the majority of their answers were "thumbs down."

The questionnaire, which has become an annual affair, was sent out by Arthur A. Winston, director of the statistical department of Allied General Corporation, an investment organization which has sponsored some investment trusts and is distributor of the shares of several others. These questions were asked: Do you think the bear market in securities has turned? Which are the five industries whose securities should come back first?

The questions were fired at bankers, economists, investment counsellors, statisticians and investment trust managers. Of the returned ballots, 76 per cent said the bear market was broken, 5 per cent said it still had some distance to go and 19 per cent were on the fence, explaining they couldn't tell yet. The five most favored industries, expected to come back first, drew majority support for chemicals, retailing, public utilities, motors and foods.

Electric Firms Consider Radio Stock Distribution

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Dow Jones & Co. said today that a distribution by Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturering Co. and the General Electric Co. to their stockholders of their holdings of Radio Corporation of America stock has been discussed by officials of those companies in their efforts to meet the Government's objections to the present status of the three organizations.

It was pointed out, however, that while various schemes have been considered to the end of acceeding to the desires of the Government, discussions have not yet reached the point where it is indicated that the distribution method will finally be adopted.

U. S. TREASURY RECEIPTS.

(Associated Press.)

Treasury receipts for October 27 were $10,885,703.02; expenditures, $17,591,525.35; balance, $770,685,779.78. Customs duties for 27 days of October were $22,125,682.91.

$8,725,675 SAVINGS ON CHRISTMAS LIST

Capital Banks Are to Pay Out Record Amount This Year.

A distribution of $8,725,675, a record amount of Christmas Savings Club deposits for the District of Columbia, will be made by local banks in December. More than 100,000 Washingtonians will receive amounts ranging from $25 to $1,000.

The average per member will be nearly $90, while the country-wide average, as reported by Christmas Club, Inc., is $52.60. The local gain is attributed to the educational campaigns of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, which have emphasized the slogan that "the Christmas Club is the best method ever devised to save money for any purpose."

Bankers report that their customers accumulate funds in this way to pay large insurance premiums, reduce or pay off mortgages, buy automobiles and labor-saving home equipment as well as for Christmas shopping. However, it is estimated that at least one-half of the total flows into the shopping district for presents and other purchases. Four or five millions will greatly accelerate local trade and indicates a busy season ahead.

While Washington leads the country in Christmas Club membership with one out of every five persons enrolled, nevertheless the reported total for all the States of $600,000,000 will be a tremendous factor in the stimulation of business throughout the land, giving employment to many thousands and releasing funds in every line of activity. Retail stores and local postoffices are planning to hire large numbers of additional clerks and carriers during the Christmas season.

It is anticipated by the banks that the lessons of the last two or three years and the reduction of salaries and wages will have the effect of emphasizing the value of the Christmas Club method of enforced saving and that the membership in Washington in the coming year will exceed the present high record.

In spite of the depression, each past year has shown a marked gain and this year's membership is more than double that of 1925. Bankers are divided in opinion as to the possible direct profit derivable from this type of business, but all are agreed that it adds very materially to the prosperity of the community and that in turn brings increased deposits into the banks.

Nearly all of the local banks have Christmas Clubs for the convenience of their customers and will begin the enrollment of members for 1933 on November 30. Disbursement for the current year will be made about December 1.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Gold transactions today were limited to an import of $25,700 from Mexico. There were no exports and earmarked account was unchanged.

John F. Grimm, chairman of the Cheney Bros. reorganization committee, announced today that more than 89 per cent of the outstanding bonds of the corporation have been deposited under the plan of reorganization. Mr. Grimm stated that if the plan is consummated interest due November 1, 1932, on the 5 per cent serial gold bonds will be paid in cash on that date.

Trading in silver futures on the national metal exchange turned quiet today after a sudden spurt on the previous day. Business amounted to twelve lots, or 300,000 ounces, compared with 6,375,000 ounces on Friday. Some of the contracts gained one-half cent an ounce on Friday, but a considerable part of the rise was lost today. The heavy turnover was accompanied by reports of buying for Chinese account. The market for commercial bar silver was slightly affected by the advance of Friday and the subsequent reaction. It rose ⅛ cent yesterday, ⅛ cent today, to a price of 27 cents. It has been holding around 26¾ to 27 cents for some time.

Unfavorable dividend changes in the past week totaled 24, unchanged from the previous week, the Standard Statistics Co. reports. There were six favorable changes, compared with eleven the week before.

Pennsylvania Railroad's net operating income in September reached the highest point so far this year at $4,519,365. Including subcharges, net operating income amounted to $5,165,955, compared with $2,627,696 in August and $5,706,983 in September, 1931. Gross revenues of $26,325,562 marked the largest for any month since May.

Construction contracts awarded in the 37 Eastern States during the period from October 1 through October 15 totaled $54,339,300, the F. W. Dodge Corporation reports. This compares with a total of $58,901,000 in the first half of September and $111,735,600 for the first half of October, 1931.

With the filing of official papers in Trenton, N. J., the capital readjustment of the Kelly Springfield Tire Co., has been completed. The new notes and stock provided for in the plan are being prepared for distribution to the stockholders.

WHEAT VALUES SINK LOWEST IN HISTORY

Collapse Follows Harvesting News From Southern Hemisphere.

Chicago, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—In a dramatic last-minute flurry, wheat fell today to the lowest price ever recorded for future deliveries in Chicago.

The collapse followed a cable flash that the 1932 harvest of Southern Hemisphere wheat had begun in Australia, and that offerings from below the Equator were pressing at Liverpool, foreshadowing fierce world competition. Accompanying were price breaks at Winnipeg showing that Canada was paralleling the downward course of United States quotations.

Almost unprecedented dearth of immediate available buying demand for wheat rather than unusual urgency of sellers here distinguished the overthrow of values.

Wheat closed prostrate at nearly the bottommost point reached, 1¼ to 1½ cents lower than yesterday's finish; corn, ⅜ to ¾ down; oats, unchanged to ¼ off, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents down.

Early Signs of Plunge.

Except for a fleeting show of strength at the outset, the Chicago wheat market gave evidence throughout the day that a plunge was virtually inevitable. Slight upturns in price at the opening here were ascribed to questionable reports that an Argentine house was buying wheat futures at Liverpool, and that locusts appeared to be spreading in northern Argentina. It quickly developed, however, that Buenos Aires was cutting prices, and that there was an acute scarcity of buyers in Chicago.

The climax came just as the closing gong was about to clear the crowds of brokers out of the big wheat pit and the surrounding other grain pits as well. Shortly beforehand, the market had been tottering within small fraction of recently established all-time low levels, but week-end rallies were looked for at the last. Suddenly the shouting of brokers grew louder, there was a brisk scurrying of messengers and the blackboards were hurriedly chalked up with the figures never before equaled.

A spasmodic recovery of wheat prices did ensue, just as the final bell sounded, but was less than ¼ cent a bushel, too slight to be deemed significant.

Corn, oats and provisions sympathized with weakness of wheat.

Steel Ingot Output Is Slightly Weaker

Decrease in Orders Cut Capacity Percentage for Week.

New York, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Steel ingot production this week barely maintained its recent rate, now estimated at 19 to 20 per cent of capacity, owing to decrease in orders for miscellaneous products, which were partly offset by slight gains in demand for bars, structural shapes and automobile parts. Tin plate production is being fairly well maintained. Prices were generally steady, although pressure for concession on sheets from the automobile industry was reported. Demand for pig iron was moderate with a somewhat easier tone noted in some sections, attributed partly to foreign competition.

Copper weakened as custom smelters reduced quotations to meet competition from second-hand sources. Electrolytic was obtainable at 5¼ cents, or 1 cent under recent producers' asking prices for delivery in the Connecticut Valley. Buyers generally continued to look on, although interest under the market was said to be increasing, owing partly to reports of better demand for finished products. Consumer demand for tin improved as the markt sagged in sympathy with easiness at London. Buying was described as active for both immediate and forward shipment with recent deliveries said to be reducing importers' stocks.

Lead was quieter, as buying tapered off somewhat after consumers had supplied their nearby requirements. Smelters, which had booked a fair volume of orders were not pressing the market, with the price unchanged.

Zinc remained quiet, although a slightly beter inquiry was reported at the recent decline. Larger sellers who had maintained their quotations, either met competition or withdrew from the market.

Antimony remained featureless with nominal quotations prevailing.

Dodge Expert Asserts Prosperity Is Created

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, Oct. 29.—Asserting that prosperity is created and not made and that its growth is biological and not mechanical, L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician of F. W. Dodge Corporation, told the procurement officers of U. S. Army this morning, that the transition from depression to prosperity is largely spontaneous and that in no event can it be forced. In his annual address at the Army Industrial College, Mr. Schnitman stated:

"It is indeed a sorry commentary upon leadership of business that on this, the third anniversary of the great stock market crash, many of our captains of industry have yet failed to comprehend the full import of the economic cataclysm that produced it and the tragic results that have followed in its wake."

"Far too many business men still believe that prosperity can be made. Prosperity is created and not made. Its growth and development, is biological and not mechanical. It germinates in fertile soil and only when the conditions of temperature and precipitation are in proper ratio. When these conditions are right prosperity is spontaneous and in no event can it be forced. By hot-house methods we can hasten the germination, but only if we understand clearly its manifold processes."

MAMMOTH FRENCH LINER IS LAUNCHED

73,000-Ton Normandie to Set New Records for Size; Beauty and Luxury.

At the historic Penhoet Shipyards in St. Nazaire, France, where so many famous vessels have been built in days gone by, there was launched yesterday the new mammoth French Line ship Normandie, which will, it is forecast, top all records for size, beauty and novelty of equipment and general comfort for the traveling public, when she is put in commission on the regular express run between Havre and New York.

That the new ship's speed will establish a record also is not doubted by her builders. It is stated she will make the trip in less than five days.

The launching provided a great day in France, and, in fact, was an epoch-making event of universal interest in shipping circles and to travelers everywhere. President Lebrun of the French Republic attended at the launchnig and delivered an address. Mme. Lebrun, wife of the president, christened the new giant liner, bestowing, with the traditional bottle of vintage shattered on the ship's bow, the name of that historic province of France whence comes so much important history and which is a mecca for travelers.

The dimensions of the ship are as follows: Length, 1,020 feet; width (beam), 117 feet; height, from waterline to top-mast, 202 feet; displacement, 73,000 gross tons; horsepower, from 160,000 to 200,000 turbo-electric drive.

Carrying capacity, 849 first class, 258 second class, 540 third class, 485 tourist class, total 2,132 passengers.

The cost will be $30,000,000, when finally ready for maiden voyage.

The ship has a cruiser bow of striking design and dimensions, and widely spaced funnels, the front one being the tallest, the middle one somewhat shorter, and the aft one shortest of all.

The sun-deck has a sweep of over 70 feet in width, with an even greater dimension between funnels. There is to be a winter garden forward, 100 feet wide and 70 feet deep. Inside, on the promenade deck, there will be over 300 feet of unobstructed view. The ship will boast a shopping and amusement center on miniature streets, a glass dance floor, a children's playroom, a swimming pool de luxe, "pocket edition" theater, hospital, chapel, lounge and repose rooms of extraordinary size, even a garage that will accommodate 100 cars. The chapel will be a beautiful, dignified room, two decks high, containing three altars and seating 200 persons.

A semicircular terrace cafe will offer an all-night bar and grill service, overlooking and adjacent to the glass dance floor, which will be capable of a varied light radiance making it a sight rare to behold. The entire ship, in fact, will be decorated by the best artists of France, and will be fitted out with the most modern equipment, to set a new mark in ship beautification, and in comfort-giving innovation, for the whole word.

"Honeymoonlight Dips" Popular in Bermuda

Honeymooners in Bermuda have coined a new term for their favorite pastime, "honeymoonlight bathing," indicating the participants, the pastime and the ideal time to indulge it.

The wide coral beaches are doubly attractive on nights when a full moon illumines the water and lights up in clear detail, the cedor-bordered inlets. A real Bermuda bathing expedition is a simple affair. Choose a secluded island—and there are scores of them close in shore; sail out to it early in the evening and take possession of the beach; climb into your bathing suit behind the nearest shrub and plunge in.

The water in excellent for swimming the year round, and there is very little undertow.

"Last Wilderness" Of East Auto Lure

Virgin Forests and Wild Life Protected in Great Smoky National Park.

Asheville N. C., Oct. 29—Millions of national park visitors, following the motor roads over which hundreds of thousands have already toured through the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, will see in future years the picturesque last stronghold of the eastern American wilderness which has been permanently preserved in this new national playground.

Within the boundaries of the 428,000 acres lie the last extensive tracts of virgin forest lands in the East. Wild life, native to the mountains, will roam the forests of the Great Smokies unmolested by the hunter, through all future years, as the national park is a permanent refuge for game and birds. Highways built across the Great Smoky central divide and into the more colorful and picturesque portions of the national reservation have opened the park to the touring public.

Camps and lodges to be later established and the hotel facilities in the towns, cities and thriving resort communities near the border of the park provide ample facilities for the accommodation of park visitors at present and in future years. Trails lead to the higher summits and into wilder sections of the reservation.

Industrial Home Work Adds to Family Incomes

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—Eight thousand Pennsylvania families added to their incomes this year by industrial home work, according to the Department of Labor and Industry.

About 5,000 of these families resided in the Philadelphia district; another large group in and around Lancaster; and the remainder were scattered throughout the State.

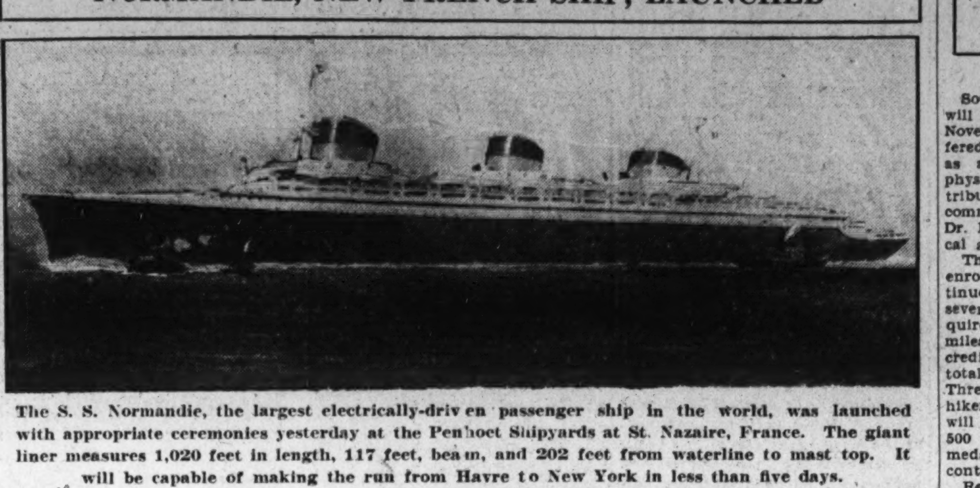
Industrial home work consisted largely of art needlework, knit goods, and all forms of clothing.

Gloves, handkerchiefs, neckwear, novelties, toys, sweaters, hair goods, wooden and paper boxes, medical and surgical supplies, artificial flowers and feathers, and babies' clothing were listed as articles produced in the homes for mercantile consumption.

Diamond Models Exhibited.

Philadelphia (U.P.).—Models of the world's most famous diamonds—stones that have played a part in the building of kingdoms and the wrecking of empires—have been placed on exhibition in the hall of the Academy of Natural Sciences.

NORMANDIE, NEW FRENCH SHIP, LAUNCHED



The S. S. Normandie, the largest electrically-driven passenger ship in the world, was launched with appropriate ceremonies yesterday at the Penhoet Shipyards at St. Nazaire, France. The giant liner measures 1,020 feet in length, 117 feet, beam, and 202 feet from waterline to mast top. It will be capable of making the run from Havre to New York in less than five days.

South Africa, Land of Gold, Full of Joy for Travelers

Marvellous Scenery, Topped by Victoria Falls, Vies With Incomparable Wild Life and Exotic Races to Compel Attention of Tourist.

By DARRELL PRESTON AUB.

Once known as the land of gold and diamonds, savage Kafirs and lions, South Africa has now emerged into the more kindly light of a perennial pleasure land. To the inhabitants of northern climes, it offers a healthful, delightful, different way of spending a winter vacation.

Washington Post readers have been wandering around the world with me in imagination. Every week we explored another fascinating bit of our globe. Last Sunday we finished a cruise to the South Seas and the Orient on the "Lurline." This time I invite you all to come along for an unusual travel experience, a visit to South Africa. We shall escape from winter weather, for South Africa, lying in the Tropic of Capricorn, has reversed seasons from ours. From mid-October to the end of March this region enjoys a sunny, temperate summer.

Once a month splendid ships leave New York bound for Capetown, the metropolis of the Union of South Africa. This sail southward through sun-gleaming waters takes 23 days, and is a wonderful vacation in itself. Days are filled with shipboard fun and relaxation while our ship cuts a diagonal trail of 6,000 miles across the Atlantic. Should we be in Europe when the desire to visit Africa comes, it takes only 17 days from Southampton, and sailings to Capetown from there are much more frequent.

Capetown, the lovely capital is the center of fashionable social life, and from here we will start on our excursions into the interior of the country. Before we sail into Cape Town's beautiful harbor, which has been compared to the harbors of Sydney and Rio de Janeiro, let us take a quick glance at the history of this absorbing land.

Acquired by British in 1815.

Although the Cape of Good Hope was rounded by Bartholomew Diaz in 1486 and eleven years later by Vasco da Gama, no effort was made to establish a settlement on the coast of South Africa. It was due to the enterprise and initiative of the Dutch East India Co., who followed the Portuguese navigators and had established trade relations with the lucrative trade of the Orient, realized the necessity of having a half-way station so as to provision their ships proceeding to and from the East.

The Cape twice changed hands between the Dutch and British as the result of complications arising during the Napoleonic Wars, and was finally captured by Britain through purchase in 1815.

With the discovery of diamonds in 1867 near what is now Kimberley, the population and prosperity of the Cape rapidly increased, and in 1872 responsible government was established. With the presence of the large foreign population attracted by the mines, trouble soon arose, culminating in the Anglo-Boer ar of 1899. The Peace of Vereeniging in 1902 established the Free State and Transvaal Republics as Crown Colonies.

Capetown! The first sight of it is like a beautiful discovery, a memory to be ever afterward treasured. Few cities have such impressive and magnificent natural scenery. Imagine tumultuous blue water curling into the quiet half circle of a bay, backed by a beach and a white city, a city from which church and cathedral spires rise peacefully side by side with the minarets of Allah calling the Moslems to prayer. Imagine directly back of this city, so that these various spires are silhouetted against it, a dark, abruptly rising mountain, its slope partly wooded, but its top a bare rock, huge, reddish, perfectly flat. This is the noted Table Mountain. The stone top is rarely seen in summer, for its swims in a swirl of clouds. Other bold, isolated peaks flank it to left and right—the "Twelve Apostles"—and dimmer mountains fade into the distance. The scene has an end-of-the-world uncanny look about it; and well it may, for south of Capetown, the uncharted ocean stretches to the Antarctic continent.

Exotic Street Scenes.

Morning in Capetown! We look out of our hotel window upon streets of modern shops and cars. It seems very English, displaying the clothes, and echoing the language of Britain, and white-helmeted policemen stand at the cross-streets, with their familiar air of calm and god-like authority. But then a black man passes, with his flat nose and heavy lips, attired in only a loin cloth, his frizzy hair stuck with bone skewers. Then comes a slim Malay woman, extensively wrapped in draperies, but with bare feet about whose ankles tinkle the inevitable bracelets of the Eastern woman. Next comes a Hindu with a turban, a Kaffir woman with her head encased in gaudy handkerchiefs. On they move, an exotic procession, reflecting the colorful heart of Southern Africa!

We visit the places of interest in the city; the houses of Parliament; Michaelis Art Gallery; the Botanical Gardens in which stands the South African Museum. This contains a very interesting and complete record of the African fauna and of the extinct Negro races that once roamed the Cape. There is also part of the marble cross erected by the Portuguese, Bartholomew Diaz, on his first passage around Africa.

The ascent of Table Mountain forms the most striking of our rambles. On our way down we go a trifle aside to view the lately erected Memorial to Cecil Rhodes, the Englishman who did so much to develop South Africa, and who is looked upon as a hero by the inhabitants.

Should we wish to see the famous Kimberley gold mines, a special train leaves Table Bay Docks for Kimberley, traveling through rich and fertile valleys of vine and fruit, and climbing the famous Hex River Pass. The name of Kimberley, the diamond city, is world-famous. It was Cecil Rhodes himself who said: "As long as men make love to women, the diamond business will be all right."

Center of Gold Industry.

Here we have an opportunity to inspect mining operations and acquire an insight into the improved methods of securing the gems. Within the last 55 years, 1,275 million dollars have been recovered from the mines.

Another tour takes us to Johannesburg, called the "Gold City," the largest town in South Africa, and the center of the gold mining industry. It was founded in 1886, when a few gold miners' shanties began to appear, and grew with unprecedented rapidity into the metropolis of today. It is no longer to be recognized as the "central sin spot of civilization," as one clerical gentleman called it in its early days. It is a city, which by the might of gold, has been developed to beauty from squalid and feverish beginnings.

We ride north to Rhodesia, and our first short stop is at Mafeking and thence to Bulawayo. The name Bulawayo means the "place of slaughter." It was the capital of the dread Lo Benguela before the British came to play cricket and golf on the fields of the Matabeles. The old tree still stands under which he used to administer justice, or his idea of it, which was distinctly personal and ferocious; but Lo Benguela's royal kraal has forever vanished. There are several interesting excursions to be made from Bulawayo, and one is to the Matoppo Hills, where Cecil Rhodes' tomb stands in the wilderness, and where we shall see the "world's view" as it is proudly called.

Right at the foot of the hills is an animal preserve. Here we see the long-necked, gentle giraffe, which has almost disappeared from Africa, or the world, outside of preserves. A striped zebra looks at us through the fence; deer, elands, waterbucks; the dik-dik, the smallest antelope known; the kongoni, and other of the gentler African animals are also at large here.

Spectacle of Victoria Falls.

Now we enter the gates of Matoppo Park, and climb on foot to Rhodes' grave at the top of a mount. The monument itself is very simple; the spot relies for its grandeur upon the superb view which it commands, the "world's view." This spreads as far as the eye can reach on every side. Near the grave of Rhodes stands a much larger memorial, to the men who died fighting the Matabeles. For Rhodes, without a thought that he would himself be buried here, selected this space to bury those "who deserved well of their country."

We are again traveling north, where one of nature's greatest marvels awaits us! Imagine a falls twice as high and twice as wide as Niagara! Imagine it, too, in an exotic tropical setting, and you have some idea of South Africa's greatest natural wonder, the Victoria Falls. This cataract on the middle Zambezi River was discovered by Livingstone in 1855. Its native name is Mosi-Oa-Tunya, literally, "the smoke that sounds." This is quite the strangest falls in the world, as well as the mightiest. Night paints the cascade with the brilliant colors of the rainbow, and transforms it into a singing, sparkling fairyland.

Weeks could be pleasurably spent wandering along the Zambezi banks and making excursions to the wild tropic islands in the river. Palms fringe its upper and lower banks. Huge ferns, mosses and fungus grow in the "rain forest," where the spray from the falls constantly drops.

If time permits the visitor to South Africa can enjoy a very thorough tour of this region of the continent once called dark and mysterious. A very excellent itinerary which is suggested takes 29 days, and follows a circular route from Capetown to Capetown, visiting George, Knysna, Oudtshoorn, Port Elizabeth, Bloemfontein, Durban, Johannesburg, Pretoria, Nelspruit, White River, Kruger National Park, Kimberley, Bulawayo and the Victoria Falls.

Cape to Cairo Railroad.

For the more adventurous, blessed with a plenitude of time, it is possible to travel overland all the way from Capetown to Cairo in Egypt. In comparative comfort and without risk, it is now possible to travel through the very heart of Africa by rail, river and lake steamers and automobile. In the future travelers will be served by the Cape to Cairo Railroad, one of the dreams of Cecil Rhodes, still now in the slow process of construction and development. Years may pass, however, before this dream is realized. The suggested itinerary from the Cape to Cairo would take 65 days, and it is a world in itself.

In traversing the continent we find that the white man has not entirely "denatured" Africa. Here mystery and romance still reign. The natives live as they did centuries before a white man stepped into their country. Witch doctors still concoct their weird and grisly brews. Painted warriors sally forth to hunt lions with spears. Vast herds of game roam over rolling plains. Truly a land where time has stood still.

The last two weks or so of the tour are spent on ships sailing the Nile and visiting the tombs of the kings and all the marvels of the ancient land of Egypt.

The word "Africa" always calls up visions of big game hunting, naturally, for here wander the world's greatest herds of animals. Big game hunting "safaris" or expeditions can be arranged for Nairobi, or Swaziland, which is nearer for the visitor to South Africa.

And for us hunters with the camera, there is Kruger National Park, the greatest game preserve in the world. No hunting is permitted here and lions and leopards stretch out in lazy contentment near the roadways or directly in the highways. Sightseers hold no terror for them Wildebeest, iguanas, hyenas—howling to their hearts' content—baboons and diminutive bush babies, animals we never dreamed existed, come to light in the tremendous effort at wild life preservation. We can live comfortably in the park in rest houses or bungalows, which we can rent at very moderate cost.

South Africa is a many-sided country. We may go there to marvel at its witch doctors or the latest stunt in surf riding; see Bushman paintings or the newest airplane model down from Cairo; wild animals and flowers or splendid buildings in modern cities. Land of gold and diamonds, any one may find his hobby here and enjoy the travel experience of a lifetime.

Forester Explains Colors of Fall Leaves

Harrisburg, Pa. (U.P).—Jack Frost's only paint is white, John Keller of the State Department of Forests said in explaining that time, not frost, gives forest leaves their autumn colors.

"The ripening of leaves is the cause of the change of color of the forest foliage and not the action of the frost, said Keller in disputing a popular belief.

"Frost may hasten the processes of turning leaves brown. A heavy freezing in late September or early October, robs rather than aids the leaves of their chances for brilliant coloration."

A long dry autumn with not too heavy frosts brings the finest succession of colors, while chemical changes in the mineral substances within the minute leaf cells produce the wonderful shades of red and yellow, according to Keller.

Municipal Garden Aids City's Destitute

Hastings, Nebr. (U.P.).—A 15-acre plot of ground converted into a municipal garden helped Hastings care for the needy this year.

The unemployed who applied for aid were given a chance to hoe and weed the garden plot and were paid off in groceries.

The crops grown in the municipal garden were harvested and distributed to the needy families.

Schools and Colleges

Southeastern University.

Southeastern University students will resume the course in walking on November 1. The course was offered for the first time last spring as an extra-curricular activity in physical education and "as a contribution to better health in the community." It was sponsored by Dr. R. Lyman Sexton, faculty medical adviser.

The course will start with a large enrollment Tuesday and will continue until June 1. During the seven months each student is required to walk a minimum of 500 miles. Students seeking elective credits in physical education must total 1,000 miles during the season. Three silver cups will be awarded to hikers with the best records, letters will be awarded to those who complete 500 miles and Dr. Sexton will give a medal to the winner of an essay contest on the benefits of walking.

Relationship between principal and agent was explained in lay terms by Prof. Fred J. Eden of the law faculty in the fourth of a series of radio talks on "The Layman and the Law" over WMAL last Wednesday afternoon. Prof. Edward C. Johnson will speak on "Making a Will" over the same station next Wednesday.

William H. Fry, Government chemist of the Bureau of Soils, Department of Agriculture, will give a lecture on "Agriculture and Forestry" before students of the Washington Preparatory School tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock.

Trinity College.

At Trinity College last week a Spanish club was organized by students majoring the language, under the direction of Miss Marion Pierce, head of the Spanish department at the college. Officers were elected as follows: Frances Blais, '33, of Pawtucket, R. I., president; Catherine Morrow, '33, of Scottsbluff, Nebr., vice president, and Mary Quartz, '34, of Boston, secretary-treasurer.

Plans are being formulated now by the Debating Society of Trinity for a political rally, to be held at the college on the evening of November 7. Speeches will be made in behalf of the candidates for the Presidency. There will be a traditional straw vote taken and a celebration following. Miss Ruth Cox, of Boston, Mass., president of the Debating Society, is in charge of the evening.

Columbus University.

A large turn-out of students for the first meeting of the season of the Taney Law Club, of Columbus University, is expected Thursday evening. The club has as its main purpose the gathering together of students into one group for a more or less informal discussion of law.

The Pi Chi Club, a girls' organization of the university, held its elections last week. Magdalene Boger was named president; Margaret Furey, vice president; Ruth Jones, secretary, and Mary Berberich, treasurer.

National University.

Two members of National University's Law School faculty now are installed in prominent offices in the bureau of comparative law of the American Bar Association, it was announced at the university last night.

Judge Charles S. Lobingier, former United States judge in the Philippine Islands and in China, now professor of Roman, civil and comparative law at National, holds the position of chairman of the association's bureau of comparative law, and H. Winship Wheatley, professor of criminal law at National, is a member of the council of the bureau. Other prominent educators on the council with Prof. Wheatley include Dean Roscoe Pound, of the Harvard University Law School.

Henry Reil, of New York, was elected president of Pi Alpha Epsilon at its annual election Tuesday night. Other officers chosen included James C. Parker, of Washington, vice president; Everett Mayo, of Maine, secretary; Earl Strong, of New York, treasurer; Mauro Baradi and Candido Tobias, of the Philippine Islands, sentinels. The staff will be installed at a banquet meeting at the Annapolis Hotel this Tuesday night, when Dr. Bernard Mayo, dean of the university's School of Economics and Government, will be guest of honor.

George Washington University.

Columbian Women of the George Washington University will sponsor the Cue and Curtain Club, student drama organization, in a benefit presentation of "Cock Robin" at the Wardman Park Theater on the evenings of November 18 and 19.

Written by Elmer Rice and Philip Barry, "Cock Robin" is a mystery play, which in literary excellence and plot device ranks far above the average of the type. The play will be directed by Constance Connor Brown, lecturer on drama in the university's department of public speaking.

Mrs. Earl Baldwin McKinley, wife of the dean of the school of medicine, has accepted the post of general chairman of the benefit.

The International Student Society, composed of students at the university from 40 foreign countries, has elected the following officers for the year: Fred Stevenson, representing the United States, president; Anna Bodony, Roumania, vice president; Rene Bonnerjea, India, recording secretary; Elizabeth Marechal, France, treasurer, and Platonio Papps, Greece, historian. Prof. Allen T. Deibert, adviser to students for foreign countries, is the society's adviser.

American University.

At the annual meeting of the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association held last week in Farmville, Va., the American University Eagle won the cup presented to the best bimonthly paper in the association.

The Student Christian Association sponsored a Halloween party last Friday night on the campus. American University's alumni were entertained yesterday as guests of the college at the annual Home-coming Day. Glad Williams, chairman of the college social committee, was in charge of the dance that followed the Shepherd-American University football game.

Mr. Harlan Randall, director of the Glee Club, states that the work on "Pinafore" is nearing completion. Mrs. W. M. Gewehr, president of the Faculty Women's Club, announces plans for a faculty party to take place November 2.

Georgetown University.

James A. Farrell, former president of the U. S. Steel Corporation, has completed arrangements with the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service for the series of seminar meetings on "Foreign Trade as a National Necessity," which he is to conduct at the school during the present academic term.

The series will open next Thursday afternoon at 5:20 o'clock in Hall 11 of the Healy Building, and then at intervals of four or five weeks apart, depending on Mr. Farrell's engagements. The seminar will be limited to advanced students, who have had previous training in economics, shipping, foreign trade and foreign relations.

In his capacity as foreign trade adviser to the faculty, Mr. Farrell has drawn up a schedule for six meetings. At the first meeting next Thursday he assigned the following subject: "The need of foreign trade in national economy. The interdependency of nations and the vital necessity of exporting surplus production in order to maintain prosperity."

Mr. Farrell recently retired from the presidency of one of the largest industrial corporations in the world and for 50 years had been actively engaged in the business world. He is at present the chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council and chairman of the committee on foreign trade of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Washington College of Law.

Washington College of Law freshman classes in both day and evening divisions completed on Thursday the short elementary course in Common Law Pleading under the direction of Prof. Helen E. Jamison. Beginning next Tuesday both classes will take up the study of contract cases with Prof. Lucian H. Vandoren conducting the course.

Plans are going rapidly forward for the dance to be given at the college next Saturday evening by the junior class in honor of the class of 1935.

The public speaking division of the freshman class of the evening division gave a series of talks yesterday on "Great American and English Lawyers."

Oliver Wendell Holmes Chapter of the Sigma Nu Phi Legal Fraternity held a chapter dance last night at Seven Knolls, near Laurel, Md. Members of the faculty and the prospective fraternity members were guests of honor.

Catholic University.

The newly created committee on student life met in the council room this past week and chose Timothy C. May, of Denver, Colo., as chairman and William J. Prezzane, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., as secretary.

Members of the freshman class are being encouraged to develop their literary talent through the action of the student council which, at a recent meeting authorized two cash prizes of $25 and $15 for the best essay on a topic to be selected by the English department.

The Right Rev. Mgr. James H. Ryan, rector of the university, left this past week to attend the funeral of the Right Rev. Mgr. Gavick, vicar-general of the diocese of Indianapolis, a friend of many years' standing, and on Friday was present in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City, when the Most Rev. James E. Kearney, an alumnus of the university, was elevated to the episcopacy, being made bishop of Salt Lake City, Utah. Bishop Kearney is the second alumnus of the university to be made a bishop this year, the other being the Most Rev. Joseph McCarthy, of Hartford, Conn., who became bishop of Portland, Me., in August.

Sidwell's Friends School.

First high, Robert McBride, president; Jane Dulaney, vice president; Minor Atwood, secretary-treasurer, and Keith Merrill, jr., representative.

Girls' Athletic Association, high school, Dorothy Day Green, president; Peggy McNeale, secretary-treasurer. Girls' Athletic Association, intermediates, Peggy Fleming, president, and Corinna Reeside, secretary-treasurer.

Mary Mills Ivins was elected editor in chief of the quarterly, and George Sutherland Elmore business manager.

ABOUT AUDIENCES, RADIO AND A PUZZLING PROBLEM

By NELSON B. BELL

ALTHOUGH it is never safe to attempt to estimate the support that will be accorded a dramatic attraction on a basis of comparison with the volume of business lured to the box office by a musical offering, it seems something less than hazardous to suggest that Max Gordon's production of "The Cat and the Fiddle," distinguishing the current week at the National, may serve as a measure of this diffident season's enthusiasm for the theater.

It is common gossip that those whose purse strings have least need to be tightly knotted are the ones who through the two months of the new season's early fall struggles have responded most grudgingly to the seductive enticements of the orchestra stalls.

Banning such meteorological considerations as pertain to every embroynic season's weather risks, it must be that, so far, those perspicacious gentlemen who see to the bookings have not guessed public taste with sufficient minuteness to reflect itself in aisles clogged with late comers after the rise of the first curtain or coffers bulging with profits. In times prompting rigid economies and observance of the letter of the budget, such as those in which we are living, it is, perhaps, not surprising that unknown quantities—like "The Good Earth" or "Forward March," for example—should fail to inveigle what may be termed the "sure-thing players" of the theater into haphazard attendance, with no New York verdict to guide them. That the older and better known pastimes—Ed Wynn's "Laugh Parade," to cite but one—should likewise languish can only be attributed to the vagaries of public taste and the need of a more elastic currency!

But now comes along, in "The Cat and the Fiddle," a production which concededly stands at the head of its class. It enjoyed the longest run Broadway was able to compile last season; it interweaves music and plot in a fashion which it is said only the most adroit of the musicalized screen features have been able to approximate and it brings, to all intents and purposes, the identical cast that accounted for so much of the operetta's popularity during its 53 Manhattan weeks.

Thus, if scant audiences present themselves at the National this week, the phenomenon can only be interpreted as a significant and tacit declaration of deliberate indifference to the best the playhouse has to offer.

* * * *

THAT there should be a conscious, if not positively deliberate, indifference to the traditional theater is not one of the hour's major mysteries.

Of recent years a great and growing lamentation has made itself heard in the land that with the virtual destruction of "the road" by the incroachments of the motion picture, with its myriad palatial but popular priced theaters, the consequent disappearance of the touring road company, as it was wont to flourish in years gone by, and even the discouragement of widespread stock company enterprises, the training school of the actor has been well nigh completely wiped out.

No longer may one achieve perfection in his art by dint of a long and arduous novitiate served "out in the sticks;" a novitiate in many instances painstakingly pursued under the tutelage of the most distinguished figures the older order found it possible to develop—the very bone and sinew of the theater that was.

This training ground of the future great of the stage, it is said, now is utterly destroyed. This, no doubt, in the large view, is true. But there is another aspect of the identical situation in which the theater unfortunately finds itself that is no less factual and considerably more startling. And it affects a vastly greater number of people and therefore exercises a proportionately more profound influence upon the present and future welfare of the stage that was known to our fathers.

If all of the circumstances and conditions characterizing the swiftly revolutionary age in which we live have conspired to destroy the training school of the actor, they have in no less degree conspired to destroy the training school of the informed and discriminating audience.

How can it reasonably be expected that the generation that now constitutes the great body of the theatergoing public should be actuated by a supreme interest in, and overwhelming devotion to, a theater that it knows only by merest hearsay and vague tradition?

Why is it to be expected that an overpowering clamor for the so-called legitimate theater should be raised by a youthful public that has come to maturity in the era of the inexpensive motion picture and the world-enveloping and ubiquitous radio?

By what process of logic is it to be expected that a tremendous love of drama should exist in the heart of the amusement seeker who knows it only from the adapted forms and occasional distortions that have been reflected upon the screens of the nation?

How, in short, is it humanly possible for an honest and enveloping reverence for the great personalities of the stage to be evolved wholly from an habitual contemplation of a group of shadows on a sheet or from listening to the perpetual pandemonium of the air?

Perhaps these are some of the reasons, as was suggested recently by one of the faithful whose love of the theater is a deeply ingrained passion of long and honorable standing, why the orchestra chairs do not fill up, even for the best of the current offerings, as rapidly as they used to or as promptly as they should!

* * * *

MUCH of that "perpetual pandemonium of the air," by the way, has been shrewdly appropriated by the cinema to give added impetus to a film that would be completely negligible, if not positively nonexistent, without it.

Stars Galore for Anniversary Bill At Earle Theater

Warner Bros. Earle Theater is celebrating the second anniversary of its vaudeville policy this week with a specially booked seven-act stage show and an outstanding screen attraction. The seven-act vaudeville program is headed by Johnny Perkins and Ruth Chatterton and George Brent are seen on the screen in "The Crash."

Johnny Perkins, "The Big Boy From the Movies," presents a ton of fun with Ruth Petty. Other acts include Daphne Pollard, "the Little Madcap," remembered for her comedy roles in several noted screen productions, who presents a familiar type of song and travesty; the Rollickers Quartet, N. B. C. radio stars; Harry Savoy, the Broadway jester; Vernon Rathburn, the prince of rhythm, assisted by Dorothea Grah, Una Lee, Dot Jones and Tom Rathburn; Dennis White and his five charmers, a dazzling dance revue; the Rath Brothers, a novelty presentation, and Maxine Doyle, mistress of ceremonies.

The screen's newest pair of lovers, who are also lovers in real life, Ruth Chatterton and George Brent, are seen together again in "The Crash," the First National picture which has been selected as the anniversary screen attraction.

Vividly "The Crash" shows how every class in the Nation, high and low, social leader and chambermaid, participated in the orgy of stock gambling that had its disastrous culmination in the fall of 1929.

In the case of the woman, played by Miss Chatterton, her problem is complicated by her return to the dreaded penury from which she had escaped by marrying her husband and her readiness to marry another wealthy man rather than endure poverty with the man she had once loved. How events help her to solve that problem and which of the two men she ultimately chooses form the vital drama of "The Crash."

In addition to Miss Chatterton and George Brent, other roles are taken by Paul Cavanagh, Hardie Albright, Henry Kolker, Barbara Leonard, Lois Wilson and Ivan Simpson.

The program is completed by a special array of short-reel subjects, including the Graham McNamee Newsreel and the Earle orchestral prelude.

Less than a year ago George Brent was unknown to screen audiences. A young Irish-American, who has played more than 300 stage roles in various stock companies on Broadway, he had failed in every attempt to crash the movies.

Irene Dunne Has Another Leading Role at Keith's

Irene Dunne, RKO-Radio Pictures' star, who is opposite Ricardo Cortez in "Thirteen Women," now at RKO-Keith's, has been signed to a new-term contract by David O. Selznick, executive vice president in charge of RKO-Radio production.

The charming brunette star, who won screen fame for her characization of Sabra Cravat in that immortal film from the pen of Edna Ferber, "Cimarron," which eventually brought her to stardom, was a feature prima donna in such stage successes as "Sweetheart Time," "Lollipop," "The City Chap," "Irene," and played the featured role of Magnolia in the Ziegfeld road show "Show Boat," which toured for 70 weeks.

It was while playing in the New York musical comedy "Irene" that Miss Dunne was given a screen test and signed to a long-term contract. Then followed her meteoric rise to success and stardom.

She made her debut in "Leathernecking," and for her outstanding work with Richard Dix in "Cimarron" was awarded her first starring role in "Consolation Marriage," and recently costarred with Ricardo Cortez in "Symphony of Six Million."

In addition to "Thirteen Women," Keith's has as a special added attraction "Shave It With Music," produced with the almost complete roster of the famous actors' club in New York, the Lambs. Features in this particular comedy are Fred and Dorothy Stone and Charles Winninger.

Other features of the program include "Prosperity," a Krazy Kat cartoon, an unusual short subject titled "Bache Collection of Oil Paintings," a Jesse Crawford organlogue, built around the famed melody, "Trees," and the Pathe News.

Ricardo Cortez, Irene Dunne in "13 Women." RKO-Keith's.

Tallulah Bankhead In M-G-M Debut Fox Major Feature

Introducing Tallulah Bankhead and Robert Montgomery, Hollywood's newest combination of screen lovers. They appear together for the first time as costars of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Faithless," now playing at Loew's Fox Theater.

The stage show currently has Duke Ellington, famous Negro orchestra leader, with his musicians in the headline spot. It is proving one of the most popular acts the Fox has presented since the recent change to straight vaudeville offerings. With Ellington are his twelve musical men and Ivie Anderson, songstress.

Prominent on the rest of the five-act bill are Carl Shaw and company, with Frank Gallagher and Frances Stewart in "Gotta Get a Girl," a comedy presentation with an abundance of songs and dances. Hilton and Garon, two of the best-known women entertainers in vaudeville, are next on the stage schedule with their customary nonsense and tunes.

May Joyce, singer of extraordinary talents, has the number two spot with selections old and new, but done in a modernistic manner. Van Cello and Mary, jugglers, begin the vaudeville with their accomplished and difficult feats.

Phil Lampkin, presenting a new overture with his Loew's Fox concert orchestra, a Fox Movietone News and selected short subjects complete the current bill.

In making the picture, "Faithless," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer borrowed Miss Bankhead to play the feminine lead in this drama of the penniless rich, based on a story by Mildred Cram. It is her first engagement away from the studio which brought her from the London stage to screen stardom.

To add luster to the occasion, M-G-M selected Robert Montgomery for the jaunty hero of the story. Harry Beaumont directed "Faithless"

Colman Is Laying By a Little Land

Ronald Colman is looking into the distant and misty future toward his retirement from the screen and public life and is making his preparations accordingly

He has bought a large tract of wild coast country on the Big Sur, 60 miles south of Carmel Calif. Here the savage Pacific beats against the rocky cliffs. There are quail, deer and all kinds of wild animal life But no tourists. For the property acquired by Colman is so remote from civilization that a road will have to be built at a cost of $25,000. There is unequaled surf and deep sea fishing which, combined with a tennis court that Ronald is building, will afford him his two favorite recreations.

After Colman finishes "I Have Been Faithful" (formerly "Cynara") and another picture for Samuel Goldwyn, it is likely that he will devote himself intensely to the development of his seacoast property.

Native girl in "Virgins of Bali"—Columbia.

Isle of Paradise Once More Yields Balinese Romance

"Virgins of Bali," a feature exploiting the beauty of the South Sea island and its inhabitants, is the current offering at Loew's Columbia

A William M. Pizor production, distributed through Principal Pictures Corporation, "Virgin of Bali" is a veritable poem in pictures, through which runs a dramatic story, having to do with the ambition of a beautiful and talented native girl to become a temple dancer and her subsequent kidnaping and then a wedding, the great festival occasion of the Balinese. In Bali the honeymoon always precedes the wedding.

Bali, which has entirely escaped the turmoil of the iron age, has no railroads, and the harvesting implements of centuries ago are still in use. The half-clad natives lead a life of peace and leisure. They take little interest in tourists, their methods of dress or the articles of advanced civilization which they bring with them.

There are said to be five women to every three men in Bali. Many travelers have called Balinese women the "Venuses of the Orient," for their well-formed, lithe bodies, pretty faces and pearl white teeth.

Balinese have all the roles in "Virgins of Bali," which was only recently filmed there. They do creditable work in this picture of their own native land. The scenery of the island also is featured in the production.

"Fangs of Death Valley," a nineteen-minute subject, is also added to the program.

Stars of the Air Assemble for the Palace Goings-On

"The Big Broadcast," the brand-new picture with all of the big names of the famous Columbia broadcasting roster of artists, is the feature offering this week at Loew's Palace Theater.

Such well-known personalities of the air, who are heard by millions from coast to coast nightly, as Bing Crosby, Kate Smith, the Mills Brothers, the Boswell Sisters, Arthur Tracy (the Street Singer), Cab Calloway Burns and Allen and Vincent Lopez, have featured roles in the production, along with Stuart Erwin, Leila Hyams and Sharon Lynne.

The picture is radio throughout. Burns, of the Burns and Allen team, is the owner of a radio station. Leila Hyams, in love with Bing Crosby, begs Stuart Erwin to buy the station so Crosby can be given a job as a crooner. Erwin does, and the fun begins.

Crosby has all sorts of trouble in getting to the station, in singing his songs and meeting with success as an entertainer. Working throughout the picture are the famous air performers. Each one does several numbers and has certain duties that are essential to the plot of the production.

Well-known announcers, such as Norman Brokenshire, William Brenton, Don Ball, Andre Baruch and James S. Wallington, also have roles in "The Big Broadcast," and, of course, play the parts of station announcers.

"The Big Broadcast" is reported to be one of the most costly of recent motion pictures. Every one of the stars in the picture commands a handsome salary for regular weekly radio and stage work.

For instance, Kate Smith is reported to receive $7,500 for personal appearances in motion picture theaters for one week. The Boswell Sisters receive upward of $4,000. This is all in addition to their regular pay from broadcasting.

Portions of the picture were taken in New York at the Paramount studios, and others were filmed in Hollywood.

In addition to the feature, the Palace offers a new Charlie Chase comedy, a Silly Symphony in color, the Hearst Metrotone News and other short subjects.

New Musical Idea Spreads to Other Feature Pictures

Scenes in music, rather than music in scenes, is the proper way to present song numbers in the talking screen's form of musical comedy, according to Norman Taurog, Paramount director.

Winner of the film industry's award for the best directorial work of 1931, Taurog now is making use of this new mode in "The Phantom President," George M. Cohan's starring picture.

"The industry has discovered how to place music successfully on the screen," Taurog explains. "The day is past when one of the characters suddenly leaves a scene and, stepping up to the camera, bursts into song. In a few instances it was effective. These were the out-and-out comic opera type of pictures. But for the average production, this was too unreal and the public refused to accept it.

"Now the screen has discovered that the musical comedy type is popular where musical numbers are a part of the story and not thrust in to hold up action.

"In 'The Phantom President' we not only do what was done in 'Love Me Tonight' and is being used in 'The Big Broadcast,' but we go further. We have an actual 'silly symphony' with birds, frogs, insects and even brooks and trees singing our number. We play the entire medicine show sequence in rhyme and music and do the same with hilarious convention scenes."

This new type of musical picture was presented in its first form in "This Is the Night." Benjamin Glazer, associate producer on that picture, aided in the development of the idea and is helping further it on "The Phantom President" as associate producer.

Drama of Fisher Folk Affords an Absorbing Story

"Tiger Shark," First National's "Trader Horn of the Seas," is the current screen attraction at Warner Bros.' Metropolitan Theater. It has a generous mixture of adventure, romance, high-powered drama, comedy and the most sensational sea episodes that have ever been brought to the screen to recommend it as one of the outstanding screen hits of the year.

Edward G. Robinson, star of the picture, and Richard Arlen, long a screen favorite, play together for the first time in this stirring and sensational epic of the seas, a story of life among the fishermen who take their lives in their hands practically every time they go to sea.

"Tiger Shark" presents a new version of the triangle, when a man, his wife and his best friend are involved; and the evolution of the drama against a background of ever-present menace from the sea and its creatures is said to be one of the most gripping ever seen in a film.

Richard Arlen sings for the first time rollicking songs of the sea in his role of Pipes, a mate of Robinson's fishing boat, and gets his nickname from his vocal accomplishments.

Another member of the cast is Zita Johann, the talented Hungarian actress, who has recently come to this country to enter pictures, and who has been a sensation in Broadway productions. Other important players included in the long list of characters are Leila Bennett, J. Carroll Naish, Vince Barnett, William Ricciardi and many more.

Many of the spectacular sea shots were made off the West Coast of Mexico, where man-eating sharks are found in great schools. These scenes are said to be thrilling in the extreme.

The bill is completed by a special program of short-reel subjects, which includes the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News.

Jack Warner, honorary member of the Rod and Reel Club, arranged for a private showing of "Tiger Shark" for the other members, and it was enthusiastically received by the dyed-in-the-wool fishermen audience. Everyone agreed that the authenticity of the fishing industry, as clearly depicted in the picture, will prove enlightening as well as entertaining to audiences, and it held a stronger, more potent meaning—it will help the boys get over their respective "fish" stories more easily in the future.

Dave Porter, president of the Pacific Electric Rod and Gun Club, with a membership of 1,500, the largest organization of its kind, was among the critical audience which found "Tiger Shark" completely absorbing.

Ghastly Thriller Offers Karloff a Shivery New Role

The height of horror and suspense is reached in "The Old Dark House," which is playing at the Rialto Theater as the attraction for the week.

Here is the J. B. Priestley novel brought to the screen with Karloff, the original "Frankenstein," in the leading role. In the supporting cast are Ernest Thesiger, Gloria Stuart, Melvyn Douglas and Charles Laughton, the eminent English actor, who is repeating in films his success in London.

Benn Levy, the playwright who did "The Devil Passes," adapted the Priestley novel to the screen and James Whale, the director of "Frankenstein," made the picture for Universal Pictures.

The background of "The Old Dark House" is the Welsh mountains, a land of superstition and horror, and the action occurs in a house built 200 years ago on a vast estate. A group of storm-driven travelers are compelled to seek shelter in this baronial house, and the action that ensues is a great story, done in Priestley's best manner. The grotesque, the real, the horrible, mix in a curious, hair-raising succession of episodes that permit Karloff to create an unforgettable servant, fully as repellant and terrible as "Frankenstein."

The Rialto has also on this program a screen comedy, selected shorter subjects and Graham McNamee with the latest Universal News.

In this, the weirdest of all picture hair-raisers, the atmosphere is an accompaniment of the action. J. B. Priestley, the English writer who composed "The Old Dark House," even before the recently famous days of his "The Good Companions," "Angel Pavement" and "Faraway," has taken as the scene of his story an ancient Welsh house, with baronial hall and trappings dating back to the seventeenth century.

James Whale, the director, called Charles D. Hall, the artist with whom Whale worked on the backgrounds for "Frankenstein," to his assistance, and no sooner ordered than done—the house was executed.

Gargoyles, faded tapestries, cavernous rooms—these under the persuasive magic of definite lighting effects become almost unreal. Even Mr. Priestley, when he sees the picture in London, will toss off a shudder or two. But the settings were designed as a distinct adjunct in carrying forward the story. They do. In exactly the manner Mr. Whale anticipated.

"The Old Dark House" is a thriller with a definite theme, and it was necessary in filming it to divide the theme in such fashion as to have two striking lines run concurrently.

A Unique Operetta Comes to the National for Week

The National Has A Record Work by Kern and Harbach

At last the ideal musical comedy—Max Gordon's New York, London and Pacific Coast success, "The Cat and the Fiddle," which opens at the National Theater tonight, remaining for the remainder of this week, with one matinee, next Saturday.

After a sensational metropolitan run of 53 weeks, it comes with the New York cast, including a son of New England, Michael Bartlett, of North Oxford, Mass.; a Princetonian, a lyric tenor, who is a direct descendant of Josiah Bartlett, Massachusetts signer of the Declaration of Independence; also Bettina Hall, prima donna; Odette Myrtil, Jose Ruben, Doris Carson, Bobby Jarvis, George Meader, Metropolitan Opera star, and others.

Written by Otto Harbach, with music by Jerome Kern, composer of "Show Boat," "Sweet Adeline" and "Sally," "The Cat and the Fiddle" opens here after the season's record run of 53 weeks in New York.

There has been much argument as to whether a musical play needs a chorus or whether it is better without one. In "The Cat and the Fiddle," Max Gordon offers to demonstrate that the right course lies somewhere between the two extremes. This play has no chorus in the conventional sense; no regiments of men and girls rushing on and off the stage for no sensible reason. At the same time, it has an unusually large cast, an army of stagehands is required to handle the production, and the orchestra is symphonic in proportions and quality.

It is a play within a play. A young Roumanian composer of serious aims meets in Brussels an American girl who writes jazz music—and falls in love with her. They part. And a misunderstanding arises, to develop into a bitter quarrel when the manager who is producing the young man's operetta decides to put into it the lovely dance numbers of the American girl. Delightful scenes show the preparations for and part of the performance of the operetta, and the romantic and realistic elements of a charming love story of theatrical life are blended in a natural and artistic way.

"The Cat and the Fiddle" is different from any other musical play. It has dramatic interest, artistic charm, bright comedy and haunting music by America's greatest composer. Among its popular numbers are "The Night Was Made for Love," "She Didn't Say 'Yes,'" Try to Forget," "The Love Parade," "A New Love Is Old" and "One Moment Alone."

Burton Holmes in Engagingly Fresh Traveltalks Soon

Burton Holmes, whose magic carpet has for four decades been bringing the world to our own backyards, will presently be back in town with several new offerings of his phantom tours. This is a year of retrospection, as well as a jubilee occasion, for Mr. Holmes, as it marks the fortieth season of his appearances on the lecture platform. From its negligible beginnings before a handful of people in Chicago, he has seen his enterprise grow to the enthusiastic acclaim of a Nation-wide chain of audiences of ever-increasing numbers.

This year, in discharging the obligations of the vicarite to which his followers have appointed him, Mr. Holmes recently completed his fourth westward passage around the world, and it is is with this pictured theme that he will open his annual cycle of screen journeys at the National Theater on Sunday afternoon November 13.

A few of the high spots in the travelers' elaborate intinerary for his initial appearance will be a visit to Death Valley, and other scenic spots in California, across the Pacific in hurricane weather, some uncommon aspects of the Japan of today, a visit to Manila and the highlands of the Igorots in the Philippines, the newest things in Shanghai, Hongkong and Singapore; sights in the important Malaya city of Penang, what it is like at Macassar in Celebes, exploring the barbaric island of Nias in the Dutch East Indies, motoring over the splendid roads of Ceylon, through the Suez Canal and the flight into Egypt, arrival at Marseilles, doing Paris, leaving Havre, across the Atlantic, arrival home.

"The color illustrations and the original motion pictures," says Mr. Holmes, "are all new and all true."

Don't Delay!

"Nana" is the name of the painting Suchorowsky, the celebrated Russian artist, gave to his masterpiece, now on exhibition at 1318 G street northwest. It is a beautifully developed young woman lying stretched on a divan, with right arm beneath the head, while the left falls carelessly adown the divan toward the floor. The handsome face, lit by a pleasing smile that plays from eyes of blue and pearly teeth, reveals gratification at sight of her own loveliness as the mirror discloses it to her.

AT THE PLAY IN NEW YORK

By MARK BARRON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—The play, customarily, is the thing, but it is pure craftsmanship that makes "Dinner at Eight" one of the few dramatic success of this season.

Facets which cut sagging links in the entertainment overbalance points in its favor, nevertheless the artful and smooth presentation of its authors, George Kaufman and Edna Ferber, make it a smart play which the sophisticates say "You really must see!"

Given a perfect and scintillating cast, an expensive production in every detail and direction of rhythmic tempo—there you have "Dinner at Eight." And it is these things, not the faulty playwriting, that makes it manna for the ticket speculators.

Not since the days of "Outward Bound" and "What Price Glory?" has Broadway seen such a perfect, full-rounded cast. Marguerite Churchill and Judith Wood offer beauty. Constance Collier contributes humor. Ann Andrews balances these with charming sophistication. Their male supports are equally good, especially the work of Conway Tearle.

Superlatives are these, but they are the things that save the play from its frequent flaws. The worst of these is that "Dinner at Eight" is so reminiscent of "Grand Hotel" that the auditors often feel they are dining on turkey hash the day after Thanksgiving.

FIRST, there is the episodic, quick-paced formula which so distinguished the Vicki Baum drama. Too, the plot concerns a small group of people, far apart in their daily habits and environment, whose fates are suddenly intermingled in a criss-cross skein when they are brought together by a cooperative event. Again, there are several characters and situations in the Kaufman-Ferber drama which are counterparts of those in "Grand Hotel."

To point out a few, there is in both plays the industrial magnate whose business is on the verge of ruin and, beneath his calm attitude of social charm, he is staging a desperate effort to save it.

Both plays have, in situation, practically the same third act curtain. In "Grand Hotel,' Grusinkaya, the dancer, nervously paced across the hotel lobby, awaiting the coming of her lover, the baron, not knowing that he lay dead in a room upstairs. In "Dinner at Eight," the debutante daughter of the shipping magnate nervously paced across the drawing room, awaiting the coming of her lover, the movie actor, not knowing that he lay dead in his hotel room.

Both plays, too, depend for their suspense much upon the time element. Always Vicki Baum's characters were hurrying; so much they had to do before their various deadlines, like so many scythes of time, swung down upon them.

THIS is true also in "Dinner at Eight." A society matron, wife of the shipping magnate, must assemble her ill-assorted guests for dinner. Last-minute cancellations by her guests of honor and an accident to the dinner preparations leave her fighting for time to repair the damages.

Her husband must save his business before an oncoming heart attack will end his life. His daughter is striving to win the love of a broken-down movie hero before her parents force her to sail to England with the fiance they have chosen for her.

The movie hero must win a job before his poverty is discovered. There is a Western financier seeking control of the shipping business before its owner discovers his shady manipulations to do so.

So we have the list of dinner guests, mostly strangers to each other, but whose lives all touch each other's and change each one's fate upon this single evening.

A Daniel Frohman Lecture Promised

Famous stars who played in his companies, theatrical celebrities who were his intimate friends, the favorites of two generations, all figure in Daniel Frohman's "Reminiscences of the Stage and Its Stars," which will be presented here on Wednesday, November 16, at 8:15 o'clock, in Constitution Hall.

"I do not like to call it a 'lecture,'" Mr. Frohman says, "as it is not a set speech, but an intimate talk about plays and players, of the productions which attracted millions of people, an inside view of the stage, its stars, playwrights and managers, as they were in real life. I want to take my audience behind the scenes, to give them glimpses of these personalities, their struggles and triumphs, as they were seen in daily association, as well as in the footlight's glow."

And he will answer questions, too, if his audience desires it, and his audience undoubtedly will desire it.

DAPHNE POLLARD, "the little madcap" of stage and screen, whose ludicrous songs and character studies headline this week's vaudeville bill at the Earle.

Rudy at Wardman For the Election

Rudy Vallee and his so-called Connecticut Yankees are about to descend on Washington and its environs to fulfill a series of big-time crooning engagements. The young maestro, who made the sawed-off megaphone what it is today, will appear at the newly redecorated Wardman Park Hotel ballroom November 7 and 8 to croon to the patrons dining on lamb chops and spinach and wondering about the election.

Mr. Vallee's press representative, who is the possessor of a lusty pair of pipes, assures us without being asked that his young boss is the highest salaried orchestra leader in the entertainment world. Two thousand bucks he garners for a 60-minute radio program each and every week.

Election returns will be shown on a special screen installed for the occasion, and Vallee promises to keep everyone in a jovial mood regardless of the outcome of the election.

Toscanini.

The famous conductor, Arturo Toscanini, will come to Washington with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra for one of the series of three concerts played by that organization. The other two concerts will be conducted by Bruno Walter and Issay Dobrowen. The dates are December 13, January 24 and March 7, at Constitution Hall, under the management of T. Arthur Smith Bureau.

This may be Washington's last chance to hear the famous genius, Toscanini, conduct, as it is rumored that this may be the last season of the Philharmonic in Washington.

Saengerknaben — Constitution Hall—Tuesday.

Ann Corio and her "Girls From the Follies"—Gayety.

Saengerknaben to Inaugurate Series Of Winter Events

Beginning with the first Washington concert of the Vienna Saengerknaben at Constitution Hall next Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, Mrs. Wilson-Greene's November concert schedule offers four attractions of unusual interest, two of which will be given at Constitution Hall in the afternoon and two at night.

The philharmonic series of afternoon concerts opens next Tuesday with the Vienna Saengerknaben concert, and on Saturday evening, November 12, Mrs. Wilson-Greene will offer Washington a concert of Ethel Leginska and her remarkable National Women's Orchestra of nearly 100 members, every one of which is a woman, including the tuba and double bass players. Leginska, also famous as composer and pianist, will not only conduct the orchestra, but will appear as piano soloist, playing a concerto of her own composition.

The artists' series of afternoon concerts will be inaugurated on Tuesday afternoon, November 15, with the first and only 1932-33 concert of Fritz Kreisler, the world famous Austrian violinist, while Lucreza Bori, prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, will appear in a costume recital on Saturday evening, November 26, as the third attraction of the evening course.

The program of the Saengerknaben is divided into three parts. The first and third parts will consist of choral singing, while the second or middle portion of the program will consist of the presentation, in costume, of Mozart's short opera, "Bastien and Bastienne." The program in full follows:

"Doerfchen" (a hamlet) (Franz Schubert); chorus of the "Messengers of Peace," from "Rienzi" (Wagner); "Zion Hears the Watchers Sing" (Dietrich Buxtehude); "Ascendit Deus" (quintet, a capella) (Jacobus Gallus); four folksongs, (a) "Schlafe Mein Prinzchen" (Berhard Flies), (b) "Jubilate" (Friedrich Burkhart), (c) "Aber Heidschi," (d) "Der Jaeger aus Kurpfaz;" "Bastien and Bastienne" (opera by Mozart), entire ensemble in costume; finale from "The Magic Flute" (Mozart); spinning song from "The Flying Dutchman" (Wagner); "Angel's Trio" (Mendelssohn); "Hallelujah" (Burkhart); four folksongs, (a) "Es Hat Sich Halt Eroeffnet" and (b) "Es Wollt ein Jaegerlein Jagen" (Fritz Krull), (c) "Der Tanz" (Schubert), (d) "The Wanderer in the Sawmill."

No Conflict.

Theatergoers who have been fearing a conflict between the bookings of the stage and screen versions of the New York and London dramatic hit, "Cynara," have no cause for concern, for when Lee Shubert, who owns the American production rights of the Harwood-Browne play, disposed of the movie rights to the Goldwyn company he restricted the release of the picture until after the country-wide tour of his stage play.

National Symphony Launches Exacting Week of Activities

Today's concert, scheduled at 4 p. m. at Constitution Hall with John Charles Thomas, famous barytone, as soloist, opens a busy week for the National Symphony Orchestra. Including today's event, three of the most interesting concerts of its season will be played during the week—one in each of its series of eight Sunday, Thursday and children's programs.

Today's program is as follows:

1. "Oberon Overture" .... Weber
2. Aria from "The Masked Ball .... Verdi (Sang by John Charles Thomas.)
3. "Pines of Rome" .... Respighi
4. Group of songs sang by Mr. Thomas:
   (a) "Gebet" .... Joseph Marx
   (b) "Liebliche Wangen." Johannes Brah
   (c) Waltz .... Krensky-Koshetz
   (d) "Sailormen" (written for Mr. Thomas) .... Jacques Wolse
   (e) "When I Think Upon the Mountains" .... Michael Head
5. Andante and Polonnaise from Eugene Onegin" .... Tschaikowsky

Aside from the singing of Mr. Thomas, whose splendid voice and artistry have brought him equal fame and popularity in light opera, grand opera and on the concert stage, the feature of the program today is the Respighi work. This unusual composition is one of the most successful modern symphonic writings of the day. It possesses vivid and varied orchestral colorings and extraordinary harmonic effects. It is also interesting in the fact that it is one of the few symphony compositions which makes use of the phonograph as one of the "instruments." At one point, Respighi has woven the orchestral harmonies around the song of the European nightingale. It is this song that the phonograph plays, accompanied by the shadowy overtones of the stringed instruments.

On Thursday at 4:45 p. m. Conductor Hans Kindler will present an all-Russian program—the first the National Symphony has ever played. For color and contrast, this concert will probably be one of the most outstanding events of Washington's music season. The program:

1. Introduction and Cortege de Noces, from "Le Coq d'Or," Rimsky Korsakoff
2. (a) "Chant Russe."
   (b) "Promenades."
   (c) "The Old Castle," pictures from an exhibition .... Moussorgsky
   d) "Tabatiere a Musique"..... Liadow
3. "Iron Foundry" .... Mossolow (Music for machines.)
4. "Symphony" .... Kalianikow
   "Allegro Moderato."
   "Andante."
   "Scherzo Vivace."
   Finale, "Allegro Robusto."

Kalianikow's symphony, as far as the records reveal, has not been played here since war days, or shortly thereafter, when Modest Altschaler, conductor of the Russian Symphony, presented the work in 1918.

On Saturday, at 11 a. m., the first children's concert will be held at Central High School. The program will be:

1. Grave-Allegro from G Major Concerto, Bach
2. Demonstration of stringed instruments.
3. Washington String Quartet, two numbers.
4. "Adagio from Concerto" ...... Vivaldi (Violin solo, with stringed orchestra.)
5. "Molly on the Shore" .... Grainger
6. Everybody sing "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."
7. Excerpts from "Pines of Rome," Raspighi

The Washington String Quartette, which will play two numbers on this program, is a direct example of how the Capital will benefit from the National Symphony Orchestra, not only by the actual concerts, but by the stimulus the orchestra will give to musicians to effect other organizations and develop and make use of their talents.

Ann Corio Returns As Guest Star for Week of Burlesque

Again coming to the front with a burlesque show of sparkling merit, the management of the Gayety Theater announces the arrival of Ed Ryan's "Girls From the Follies" this afternoon.

Mr. Ryan has spared no expense to equip his show with the best material obtainable. Fun is the keynote of this production, as it should be in any burlesque organization. Bright, witty humor is offered by that clever pair of comedians, Sam Raynor and Lee Hickman.

Those red-head charmers, the Reid Sisters, are singing and dancing experts who provide a feast of skill, grace and zip. Elinor Wlanet, a newcomer, is a platinum beauty with a most alluring specialty, and Anna Smith, chic soubrette, is a maid of versatility. Garrigan and DeMuth, original character actors and specialty dancers; Ray Parsons, burlesque's best vocalist, and Charles Dane, the rah-rah juvenile, and a chorus of young damsels round out the cast.

Guest star, Ann Corio!

A PUZZLING PROBLEM

It is the part of sagacious business to bring to the screen a considerable group that customarily attracts countless thousands—or is it millions?—to the loudspeakers and away from the box offices, as has been done in "The Big Broadcast." This, in the fallible view of these dispatches, would seem to afford tangible and indisputable proof that sweet, indeed, are the uses of adversity!

Radio has long been looked upon as a box office threat by those who should know best. Now that threat has been converted into an asset by transplanting a group of the foremost radio artists from the broadcasting to the picture-making studio and revealing them as they have never before been intimately disclosed to a public that will no longer be able to cherish them as "unseen artists of the air."

This is only carrying out in a large and impressive way a thought we once put into operation in a way that seemed small to everyone but Harry M. Crandall, who had to foot the bills, when we reduced to three reels of otherwise unsullied celluloid a complete broadcast of what was then the only theatrical unit going on the air regularly from Washington through WRC. By an odd coincidence, Kate Smith was a stellar performer in our masterpiece, made back in 1924 or 1925, precisely as she is now in Paramount's transmutation of ether into celluloid, currently at the Palace. Her rate of remuneration, however, at the present time is slightly different!

But all that is apart from the fact that a strongly competitive form of entertainment has been harnessed to the cinema in "The Big Broadcast" and for months to come will aid in hauling the producers of the picture over the economic rough spots in the road.

And it is perhaps one of the reciprocal ironies of a temporarily disjointed "show world" that the picture will unfailingly prove of priceless advertising value to the radio, the most insidious of its rivals!

* * * *

ANOTHER of the amusement world's perplexing contradictions obtrudes itself upon the current scene, too.

At the Earle, ostensibly dedicated to the glorification of the gelatine forms of art, an expansive anniversary observance is being celebrated, although instead of concerning itself with the shadow-and-sound portions of its bills it is two years of vaudeville that is being accoladed.

Seven acts, chosen from among the foremost of the varieties' gifted artists, lift Thirteenth street's prevalent diversion almost to the program status enjoyed by the more representative of the two-a-day houses that flowered in those seemingly remote days when vaudeville was vaudeville.

There may be evidence in this that the renaissance of the two-a-day that so many have so confidently predicted is on its way, but of even greater immediate interest would be a solution of the problem of what constitutes a motion picture theater's first claim to public interest and support, the pictures it shows upon its screens or the stage entertainment with which it embellishes them?

Or if that is too tough, how old is Ann? Unless, of course, you would prefer the one about which got here first, the chicken or the egg?

COMING TO LOCAL STAGES

THE ninth annual edition of Earl Carroll "Vanities" is now on tour and is coming to the National Theater the week beginning Sunday night, November 6.

This new "Vanities" is staged in 55 scenes and brings the usual Earl Carroll magnificence of production and costuming with some new song hits.

The featured comedians are Al Trahan, fresh from his tour of the European capitals and his command performance for King George in London, and Mitchell and Durant, a hilarious pair of funny fellows with some amazing comedy acrobatic tricks. The featured dancer is Lucille Page, whose "Dance of the Dinosaur" is an outstanding sensation.

The large company also includes Yukona Cameron, Betty Ceronica, Emily von Losen, Sylvia Nelson, Harry Stockwell, Ray Sax, Jack Starr, Claire Curry, Fern McAllester, Dedon Bluniere, and some of the most beautiful girls in the world.

FOR its election week attraction, beginning with a matinee performance on Sunday, November 6, the Gayety Theater will present the Empire Circuit burlesque troupe known as "Rarin' to Go."

The cast of principals to be seen in this new offering is composed of veteran comedians, pleasing singers and peppery dancers, among whom are to be found numerous specialty artists capable of a variety of diverting sketches, skits and routines.

The stars, of course, will be supported by a nimble chorus of agile young women, selected for particular capabilities in this ultra-modern form of entertainment.

Directors.

The Washington Light Opera Company, which is to produce "The Bohemian Girl" in the near future, has announced its board of directors composed of the officers, the musical and stage directors and three members at large. Those elected are Gerald P. Flood, president; Howard Severe, vice president and secretary; Jesse Veitch, treasurer; Alfred Manning, musical director; Donald MacDonald 3d, stage director; Esther Ingram, Christine Irish and Rita Reyes.

Civic Opera Opens Junior Membership For Free Tutoring

Several highly successful productions of light operas by juvenile companies throughout the country during the past year, prompts our own Civic Opera organization to offer this advantage to the children of Washington.

A junior membership, at reduced rates, in the Civic Opera has been inaugurated and 100 or more talented boys and girls, between the ages of 12 and 15, will be accepted for participation in the first production. A special vocal arrangement of the famous "Pirates of Penzance," by Gilbert & Sullivan, has been selected for the first presentation. The text will be followed without cuts, but the music has been scored for juvenile voices.

Expert coaching and directing will be provided. Special scenery and full orchestra will be used for the public performances. Children of the above ages should write at once to Miss Maxine De Silvia, 1919 S street northwest, giving age, height, weight and vocal experience so that they may be notified of rehearsals.

Columbia Players Prepare New Play

"Are you out of the bath, father?" asks Angela.

"In a manner of speaking, daughter," replies Mr. Batersby of Wyck-Trentham. "I'm just going in."

And with these words to be spoken next Tuesday for the first time at a first rehearsal for the first performance in Washington of A. A. Milne's deliriously funny "To Have the Honor," the Columbia Players are off on a new play and a new season.

November 1 is the date and Powell Junior High School on Hiatt place, between Park road and Lamont street northwest, is the place for this first rehearsal, which will be something in the way of a general meeting also, for every part is not yet cast and there will be some try-out readings.

Orris Holland will direct and the cast, which will introduce the National Capital to Mr. Milne's remarkable characters, includes, to date, Aurora Poston, Dorothy White, Dorothea Lewis, Frank Jamison, S. Allen Foster, Philip Cole and Benjamin Doehrer.

Following "To Have the Honor," tentatively scheduled for Wardman Park Theater during the second week of December, the Players will produce Galsworthy's "Escape" and Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion."

Stokowski.

The T. Arthur Smith Concert Bureau will bring to Washington the famous Philadelphia Orchestra in a series of four Tuesday evening concerts on November 22, December 20, January 17 and February 28, at Constitution Hall. The first two concerts will be conducted by the musical director of the orchestra, Leopold Stokowski.

Primarily, aside from all artistic considerations, an orchestra is a great business institution and too seldom regarded as such. Upward of three-quarters of a million dollars is spent each year in the presentation of 100 concerts which are possible each season only with an organization like the Philadelphia Orchestra.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

THE Founders' Day Concert at the Library of Congress, the first Sunday popular concert of the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall, and the singing of the famous European boy choir, "The Vienna Sangerknaben," make up the musical feast of the week.

Of course, the concert season will not get fully under way until election day has passed. Many patrons of such events are waiting at their homes in the States in order to vote before coming to Washington for the winter. Therefore, the impressarios with insight into this situation have not arranged their concerts in large numbers until after this period has passed.

Looking ahead to next summer, a feast of musical events are offered in Europe for the Washington music lover who could combine vacation delights with more development in his beloved fine art.

Around the world, and especially in Europe, will be celebrated the 100th anniversary of Brahms, the poet of the symphony, and in April festival performances will be given in Dresden in commemoration of his birth 100 years before that time.

The year 1933 is to be called "Wagner Year," in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the death of that composer. The high point of observance of Wagner Year will be the Richard Wagner opera festivals at Bayreuth in July.

In America the League of American Composers is planning a monster concert on April 16 in New York with a "review program," featuring important modern works heard here between 1923 and 1933.

The schedule of the U. S. Marine Band and Orchestra for the week includes the following concert dates: Tomorrow, at 4 p. m., band concert; Wednesday, at 8 p. m., orchestral concert.

The program for this concert will include the overture "Salvatore Rosa," by Carlo Gomes; the "Three Tonadas," by the Chilean composer, Humberto Allende, and the string quartet in E minor, by Mary Evelyn Calbreath. This quartet will be presented by Musicians Herman Hoffman, first violin; Ralph Bucca, second violin; Frank Scalzetti, viola, and John Auer, cello. The program closes with the fantasia "Boris Godounow," by Mussorgsky.

Friday, at 3 p. m., orchestral concert.

The concerts will be given in the auditorium at the Marine Barracks, and Capt. Taylor Branson, leader of the U. S. Marine Band, will conduct.

Elena de Sayn will play a program of representative compositions by American women composers on November 10, which date falls on a Thursday, and not on a Friday, as it was previously announced by mistake. It will be the first time in the musical history of any country that a program of a violin recital will be dedicated to women composers exclusively. The concert will be given at the rooms of the League of American Pen Women.

Esther Linkins has resigned as director of the junior choir of the Church of the Pilgrims.

The lovers of classic sacred music will be glad to welcome the return to the air, in its first audition this season, of the Choir Invisible, the popular soloists ensemble, from Station WMAL, tomorrow, the eve of All Saints Day, from 8:45 to 9:15 o'clock.

The choir, which is composed of a number of soloists of local churches, under the direction of William E. Braithwaite, choirmaster of the National City Christian Church; Gertrude McRae Nash, accompanist, will render a program of appropriate selections from the oratorios of Mendelssohn and Handel as a reverential tribute to the souls of the righteous in the hand of God.

The presentations will include, "Behold the Lamb of God" (The Messiah), "See What Love Hath the Father" (St. Paul), "Blessed Are the Men" (Elijah), "Souls of the Righteous" (Noble), "Cast Thy Burden Upon the Lord" (Elijah), "Happy and Blest Are They" (St. Paul), requiem, "Grant Them Rest Eternal" (Verdi's Mass).

The personnel of the choir is: Sopranos, Hazel Gem Hughes, Myra McCatheran Marks Meyers, Beatrice Orbison; altos, Jessica Tabler Benham, Theresa Shrader, Vera Ross; tenors, Dr. George A. Anderson, Wilbur Ganz, Roy Goff; basses, Edgar R. Kidwell, Walter P. Gray, Erbin G. Thomas, Alexander H. Galt.

The Rubinstein Club will conduct a combined rehearsal at the Willard Hotel Tuesday evening at 7:45 o'clock. Miss Marie Denecke was elected corresponding secretary at the last business meeting of the club. The club is working on some varied and interesting music for the first concert to be held early in the forthcoming year. New voices have been added to the active personnel of the club.

The U. S. Navy Band, Lieut. Charles Benter, leader, will play at the band auditorium in the Navy Yard Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. On the program will be Glazeunow's overture "Carneval," Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" and excerpts from Friml's operetta "High Jinks." Musician Earl Miller will be heard in a cornet solo.

Paul Shirley, former conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, gave an illustrated lecture to the students of Trinity College Wednesday evening in O'Connor Auditorium. The lecture, entitled "The Romance of Music," is Mr. Shirley's own creation, which he illustrated with rare lantern slides.

Mr. Shirley, who is now conductor of the "Little Symphony," composed of foremost members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, spoke on the development of modern strings, woodwinds and percussions from the original Oriental source and on the metamorphosis of the piano. In conclusion intimate character studies were given of the great composers from Bach to MacDowell.

At the morning services of the Universalist Memorial Church, the National Capital Choir, directed by Albert W. Harned, will sing "Immortal, Invisible, God Only Wise," by Thiman, and "When Thou Turnest Away From Ill," by Alcock, Dr. Harned will play the organ prelude, "Cantilena," by Matthews; the intermezzo, "Largo," from the "New World Symphony" (Dvorak), and the postlude, "Grand Choeur," by Faulkes.

Rox Rommel, former well-known musical director for the Universal Motion Picture Corporation in Hollywood and their foreign branch in Germany, is now pianist and arranger for Maxim Lowe's Concert Orchestra at the Shoreham Hotel. Mr. Rommel has arranged numerous concert numbers to be played from the lower lounge of the Shoreham Hotel during their Sunday evening recitals, 7 to 9 p. m.

This Sunday evening program will include "Der Freishultz Overture," by C. Weber; "Rose Marie" (Friml); "Largo," from the "New World Symphony" (Dvorak); "Serenade," arranged for string quartette by Haydn-Pochon.

Dorothy Mayer, soprano, will be the guest soloist with this concert orchestra, which is under the direction of Raoul da Costa. Some of Miss Mayer's selections will include "Lena Voce Poco Fa," from the "Barber of Seville;" "Estrellita," by Ponce; "Clavelitos," by Valverde.

Milton Davis, organist, assists Maxim Lowe's Concert Orchestra during the Sunday and weekly programs from the Lowe Lounge of the Shoreham Hotel.

The United Service Orchestra, composed of musicians from the three service groups of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, will begin rehearsals soon for the special concert to be given under the auspices of the Pan-American Union in the Hall of the Americas on Tuesday evening, December 27, in honor of the delegates to the convention of the Music Teachers National Association. The orchestra will be conducted in turn by the leaders of the three groups, Capt. William J. Stannard, of the United States Army Band; Lieut. Charles Benter, of the United States Navy Band, and Capt. Taylor Branson, of the United States Marine Band.

The event is considered of unusual importance as it will afford an opportunity for the music critics representing papers from various parts of the country, as well as the delegates to the convention, to hear for the first time many of the indigenous musical themes from the ancient civilizations of the New World. Selections showing the blend of aboriginal with colonial music, as well as numbers representing African influence, will be features of this unusual program.

The guest artist, Emma Otero, Cuban soprano, will sing for the first time a composition by her compatriot, Eduardo Sanchez de Fuentes, entitled, "Yo se de un beso," as well as another number by the same composer entitled "Navidad," especially appropriate for this Christmas concert.

Anne Yago McGuffey, contralto of both light and grand opera fame and experience, who left Washington, where she is making her home, to sing the contralto leads in Mr. Aborn's newest light opera company, has won additional praise for her work in "The Mikado," which opened the Civic Light Opera Company's season October 10 at the Hollis Theater in Boston.

When the Students Choral Society presents its first program this season in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A. headquarters, November 14, a group of sixteen Washington girls will sing a prize-winning work written by Franz Bornschein, well-known Baltimore composer and critic.

"The Singers" is the title of this work, which won the first prize awarded by the National Federation of Music Clubs for a women's choral number in 1930. Leroy Lewis' group of singers gave the first performance of this work in Washington in 1931, and Mr. Lewis will direct the group singing it this time. The soloists will be Cornelia Harkness, soprano, and Verna Richie, contralto. Mrs. Carl Chindblom will be the accompanist.

In addition to Mr. Bornschein's work two brief cantatas written by Lily Strickland Anderson and Mabel Daniels will be given by the mixed chorus of the society, and they also will sing Mendelssohn's beautiful arrangement of the "Thirteenth Psalm." Mr. Lewis will direct the entire program and will have a chamber orchestra of local and Baltimore musicians to accompany the singers.

Today the music hour at the Y. W. C. A. will be given by the members of the Saturday children's hour, which meets at the 614 E Street Center weekly. The programs will include piano and violin selections and readings. Ruth Dale Smith, president, will preside.

Registrations are still being taken for the chorus sponsored by the Washington Choral Society, working in cooperation with the National Symphony Orchestra to produce a work of Bach in the near future. Rehearsals are being held every Tuesday evening at Central Community Center at 7:30. New members must pass a simple audition test previous to registration. This affords a splendid opportunity to singers interested in good music.

CAPITAL ART AND ARTISTS

By VYLLA POE WILSON

THE fragment of a bronze statue, just 10 inches high, from the inspired hands of Gutzon Borglum, may preserve the burning flame of his genius and his fame to other generations, even as Shelley, through the fragments of poems, unfinished but surpassing in poetic beauty, has had his immortality aided by these means.

The Borglum statuary fragment is the latest addition to the exhibit of contemporary sculpture at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. It has been the center of art lovers' attention since it was placed on view. The head, hands and ends of the legs are missing from it, but the winged lightness, freedom of movement and spirit of the fragment is more alluring than many a completed figure to the discerning.

For those who have followed the career of this temperamental sculptor the work is very typical. He had this work in the plaster cast stage when it was broken. He tried to put it together, but to the real artist the creative urge is like a meteor across the skies. Borglum was not satisfied with the new parts, so he discarded them and the bronze statue in its present state is the result. Anyway, who would regret the absence of a head from "The Winged Victory," or would add arms to the Venus de Milo?

Gutzon Borglum has enriched Washington with the colossal marble head of Lincoln in the rotunda of the Capitol and the equestrian statue of Gen. Sheridan in Sheridan Circle.

He has written his name on the scroll of American sculpture by the gigantic enterprises which he initiated in designing and beginning the carving of the Confederate memorial on the face of Stone Mountain, in Georgia, and as the designer and sculptor of the first national memorial federally authorized, built by the State of South Dakota on Mount Rushmore in the Black Hills.

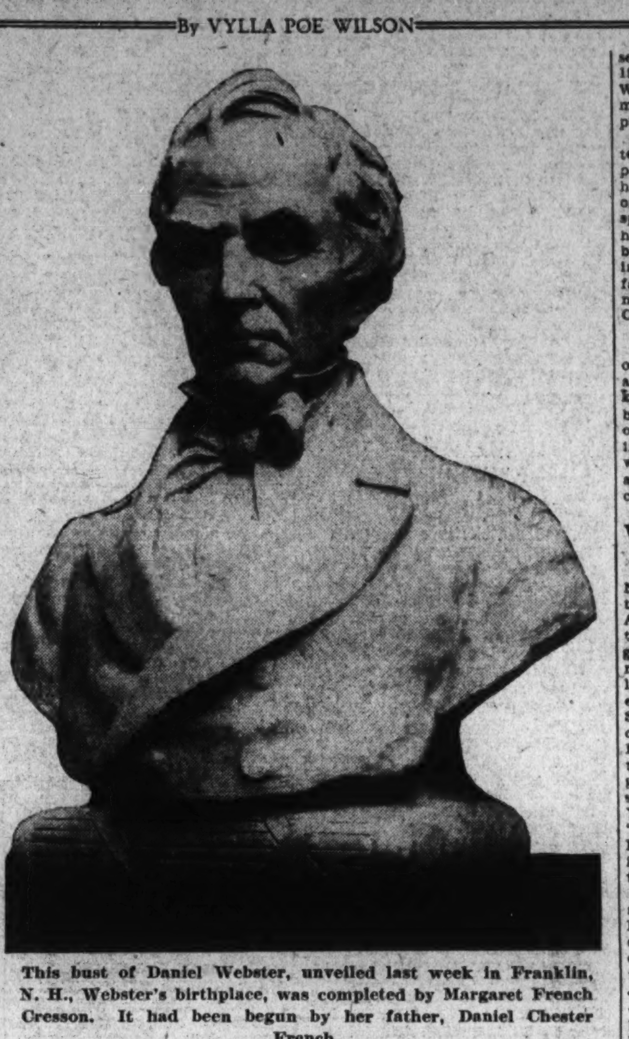
EVERY school of contemporary American oil painting is represented in the influx of pictures daily at the Corcoran Gallery of Art, in preparation for the thirteenth biennial exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings, to be held in December and January. All of these paintings, of course, will have to be passed on by the jury before they are hung. The announcement of the winners of the William A. Clark prize awards will be real art news throughout the world. As is true in most exhibits, many are sent in, but only a few are selected, the ratio being about one out of every ten. The jury is composed of Gifford Beal, chairman; Wayman Adams, J. H. Gest, Ernest Lawson and Edward W. Redfield, and, of course, C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the gallery, as an ex officio member of the jury and hanging committee.

Washington art students smile with real superiority as they sketch the nude figures in our art galleries or work in the life classes at the instructions issued earlier in the month by the minister of education of age-old Hungary to the director of the Academy of Art in Budapest forbidding nude models from posing before art student classes. The minister of this artistic city of the centuries insists that modern Hungarian art must be of the draped variety.

MUCH interest is exhibited in the opening, Friday, of an exhibit of oil paintings by Dr. Birger Sandzen, R. Emmett Owen, August Franzen, Jane Peterson and Fern Coppedge; water colors by Sears Gallagher, R. Emmett Owen; etchings by Ellsworth Woodward; lithographs and wood blocks by H. Glintenkamp, Birger Sandzen; sculpture by Prof. Ernest Durig, and the annual exhibition of the national soap sculpture committee at the Sears-Roebuck Art Galleries, of which Theodore J. Morgan is director.

Those who attend the weekly tea at the Arts Club today will have a first view of the exhibition by J. C. Claghorn and Edith M. C. Cartney, which will continue throughout the week.

Washington's art colony is interested in the unveiling of the bust of Daniel Webster, in Franklin, N. H., Webster's birthplace, last week in front of the little Congregational Church Webster attended. The bust was completed by Margaret French Cresson, but was begun by her father, Daniel Chester French. The Architectural setting was designed by Richard H. Dana, of New York.



This bust of Daniel Webster, unveiled last week in Franklin, N. H., Webster's birthplace, was completed by Margaret French Cresson. It had been begun by her father, Daniel Chester French.

THE portrait of Whistler's mother, copies of which has become popularized in the United States in recent years, is to be shown in this country for the first time in 50 years when it will be placed on view, loaned by the Louvre in Paris, at the exhibition of paintings and sculpture by American artists of the periods included in the years 1862 to 1932, at the Musum of Modern Art, in New York, November 2. This painting was the first work of an American artist to be placed in the Louvre in 1926. It was, however, purchased by the French government in 1891 and placed in Luxembourg until it was removed to the Louvre.

Preparations are being made in art circles all over the world for the celebration of the centenary of the birth of Whistler in Lowell, Mass., July 1834. Works of Whistler are to be found in a number of private collections in Washington, and in our art galleries, especially the Freer Gallery of Art, and in the treasurers of the Congressional Library.

MISS DOROTHY VARIAN, who is well known in art circles in Washington, will have a "one man show" of recent paintings at the Downtown Gallery, New York City, this month.

Miss Varian received early recognition. As far back as 1922 she exhibited at the Salon D'Automme, and had a solo exhibition at the Durand Ruel Galleries in Paris. Her work has been included in important group shows in American museums, and the Whitney Studio Gallery gave her several one-man shows, the last in 1929. She is represented in the Whitney Museum, the Phillips Memorial Gallery and in outstanding private collections.

In the present exhibition of fourteen paintings executed during the past three years, Miss Varian shows her diversified interests in the choice of material. From her small, intimate sphere in her Woodstock home she has selected familiar motives, the barnyard, the surrounding landscape, interiors, still life, and has painted a fascinating version of the great annual event in Ulster County—Spark's Circus.

Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian of the Public Library, announces that a bust of Pocahontas by the well-known local sculptor, Clara Hill, has been placed on exhibition in the second floor lobby of the central building at Eighth and K streets, where it will be seen by readers using the fine arts division and by hundreds of children daily.

WORD has been received by the Roerich Museum from Vladimir Petovic, director of the National Museum and professor of the University of the Royal Serbian Academy at Belgrade, of the installation in the National Museum at Belgrade of a Nicholas Roerich room. The room contains about twenty of Nicholas Roerich's paintings, some of them especially representative of the great Slavic culture. There are also several of Roerich's newest works, painted in India, where he has been for the last two years leading the scientific program of the Himalayan Research Institute of the Roerich Museum in New York. Among these recent works are "The Hunt," from the series "Chengiz Khan," and "Procession of the Morning," "Tchenrezi" and "The Palace of the Thakur," painted in Lahul.

This new honor has been founded at the special wish of his majesty, King Alexander, and follows numerous evidences of the profound reverence in which Roerich is regarded as the leader of Slavic culture by the Jugoslavians. H. M. Alexander I, of Jugoslavia, has in his collections the painting "Terra Slavonica," by Roerich, and last year his majesty accorded Roerich the distinction of the Insignia of the First Class Order of St. Sava.

The new Nicholas Roerich room in the National Museum at Belgrade adds a new unit to the various branches of the Roerich Museum throughout the world, and for the first time in history a museum has become a world-wide body.

At present the most representative unit of the branches is the group of eighteen painting at the Roerich Foundation of Peace, Art and Science, founded in Bruges during the recent world conference of the Union Internationale pour le Pacte Roerich. Several months ago a branch was officially installed in the Benares Museum of Indian Art, which contains about twelve paintings by Roerich. In Riga a Roerich room has been inaugurated in the premises of the Latvian Roerich Society, and the European Center of the Roerich Museum in Paris, inaugurated in 1930, has recently added ten new paintings to its collections.

ACTIVITIES OF D. A. R. CHAPTERS

The Army and Navy Society, C. A. R., held its first meeting of the season at the Army and Navy Country Club, Arlington, Va. The president, Mrs. Roy S. Geiger, gave a word of welcome and wished all a prosperous year. The Rev. Robert Shores, U. S. N., gave the invocation. An interesting program for the future was arranged, with Mrs. John Appick hostess for the November meeting and Mrs. Roy S. Geiger for the December meeting, Mrs. F. S. C. Layman for the January meeting and Mrs. Walter A. Bloedorn for the February meeting.

The following officers were elected: Joyce Geiger, junior president; Jacqueline Allen, vice president and chairman of membership; Aileen Allen, treasurer; Aeline Appich, recording secretary; Roy Geiger, corresponding secretary; Helen May Bloedorn, chairman of publicity and historical markers; Elizabeth Ann Strine, chairman of library, and Marie Medora Shores, chairman of distinguished guest committee.

Mrs. James T. Allen entertained the society and parents at a luncheon.

Sarah Franklin Chapter.

The October meeting of Sarah Franklin Chapter was held at the home of Mrs. Rosa Dodd Mulcare, with the regent, Miss Belle M. Browning, presiding. A number of members responded to the president general's request for a penny a day for the coming year to reduce the debt on Constitution Hall.

The chapter was invited to attend a reception to be held at the Washington Club, October 26, in honor of the president general, Mrs. William Russell Magna, toward which $5 was contributed.

It was voted to continue the scholarship at Blue Ridge Industrial School. Mrs. Abraham reported having sent two valuable boxes of clothing to the school this summer. Following adjournment, tea was served. Guests were Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, Mrs. Ada Mills Payne, Mrs. Alexander Swann Sinclair and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins.

Ruth Brewster Chapter.

The Ruth Brewster Chapter held a meeting in the cabin of the U. S. frigate Constitution Tuesday afternoon. After the meeting the members, accompanied by Mrs. Clarence B. Miller, regent of the chapter, made a personally conducted tour of the frigate.

Livingston Manor Chapter.

Livingston Manor Chapter held its October meeting Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. A. Browne, Cleveland Park. Members were entertained by an interesting description by Mrs. Browne of her travels abroad during the past eighteen months, Mesdames Giroux, Spratt and McIntosh assisting Mrs. Browne.

Fort McHenry Chapter

Fort McHenry Chapter met Tuesday, October 18, at the home of Mrs. Dr. Walter Wooster, at Berwyn, Md. Mrs. T. Temple Hill, regent, presided.

Plans have been completed for a card party to be given by the chapter at the Mayflower Hotel on Wednesday, November 9.

Mrs. Wooster was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Ralph Van Horn, in entertaining the large number of members present.

Marcia Burns Chapter.

Marcia Burns Chapter held its October meeting at the home of Miss Ethel Betts, with Miss Flora Shinn and Miss Marian Smith, assisting hostesses. Mrs. George L. Palmer presided. An invitation was extended to the members of the chapter to attend the reception to be given to the president general at the Washington Club, October 26, and the chapter donated $5 for this reception.

The chapter has secured three D. A. R. markers, two of which were placed on the graves of Mrs. Charles Gates and Mrs. William Betts last Saturday, October 22. The third marker is to be placed on the grave of Miss Jennie T. Gates, in Richmond. All three of the deceased were former members of the chapter.

Manor House Chapter.

Manor House Chapter held its October meeting at the home of the regent, Miss Lillian Chenoweth, with the vice regent, Miss Mary Lee Goddard, assisting hostess. Several members of the chapter gave accounts of the pilgrimage made in the early summer to the colonial home of Charles Carroll, at which time the District D. A. R. placed a wreath in the chapel in his memory. The regent and delegate, Mrs. O'Neal, and several of the members drove to Fort Tobacco a little later in the season, where they were guests at the D. A. R. camp and witnessed a pageant given by the Sons and Daughters of the Republic. Kenmore and historic Frederick were also visited.

A gavel made from an original beam from the home of Betty Lewis was presented to the chapter by the Kenmore Association in recognition of the chapter's interest in the work of the association. The chapter was represented at the reenactment of the laying of the corner stone of the Capitol and also at the Flag Day exercises. The delegate gave a comprehensive report of the executive meeting and gave an outline of the work planned for the coming season. A contribution was made for the entertainment committee. The chapter was extended an invitation to attend the reception to the president general, Mrs. Magna, on October 26, at the Washington Club.

William Braithwaite was song leader, and assisting artists were Fannie Shreve Heartsill, Alice Haig, Elizabeth Eaton, George Daw, Frank Sanderson and R. Deane Shure. The Francis Asbury Quartet opened the program, and the accompanists were Minnie Bailey, Doree Holman and Mrs. Sanderson. Mrs. John M. Beavers, national corresponding secretary; Mrs. Tonnis Holzberg, State chairman of national defense, and a number of regents and State officers were present.

The November meeting will be held at the home of Miss Helen Montgomery.

Capt. Joseph Magruder Chapter.

The October Meeting of the Capt. Joseph Magruder Chapter was held at the home of Mrs. F. R. Bichowsky, 3210 Macomb street, the assisting hostesses being her mother, Mrs. Jennie Mitchell, and Mrs. Thomas R. Roberts.

Mrs. Arthur S. Field presided. The chapter historian, Mrs. Thomas M. Roberts, reported an enjoyable trip with the historic committee to Doughreghan Manor in June. Mrs. Field was speaker at the first meeting of the approved schools committee.

Mrs. King, reporting for the State entertainment committee, announced that a reception would be held in honor of the president general, Mrs. Russell William Magna, on Wednesday evening at the Washington Club. The chapter voted to send a contribution to the committee for the reception.

Lucy Holcombe Chapter.

Lucy Holcombe Chapter met at the home of Mrs. W. W. Stewart, Forestville, Md. Mrs. Jean Labat was assisting hostess. The regent, Mrs. Fred M Hopkins, presided. The following were appointed to State committees:

Americanism, Miss Mary B. Anderson; approved schools, Mrs. John Paul Earnest; better films, Miss Virginia Patterson; conservation and thrift, Mrs. John T. Huddle; Constitution Hall Finance, Mrs. Charles S. Richardson; correct use of the Flag, Miss Alice B. Sanger; D. A. R. student loan fund, Mrs. George O. Sanford; Ellis Island, Mrs. F. E. Cunningham; entertainment, Mrs. Luther H. Waring; genealogical records, Miss Alice Griggs; girl home makers, Mrs. Joseph F. Lyvers, Mrs. Maude A. Harris; D. A. R. library, Mrs. Jessie P. Wood; D. A. R. magazine, Mrs. Eliot H. Thomson; manual for immigrants, Mrs. Marguerite Eyster; national defense embodying patriotic education, Mrs. W. W. Stewart; Revolutionary relics for Memorial Continental Hall, Mrs. Edwin A. Hill; Sons and Daughters of the Republic, Miss Alice Short.

The regent urged all the members to attend the reception in honor of the president general, Mrs. Russell William Magna. An appropriation of $5 was made toward the expenses of the reception.

Mrs. Jessie P. Wood, library committee, stated the catalogue of American writings was progressing rapidly, Lucy Holcombe Chapter reporting the highest number done for October of any chapter.

Other State committee reports were as follows: Better films, Miss Virginia Patterson; State historic, Miss Katie Edmunds; D. A. R. student loan fund, Miss Cornelia Cotton; Revolutionary relics, Mrs. Edwin A. Hill, conservation and thrift, Mrs. F. M. Hopkins.

Donations were solicited for the county fair November 16, at Pierce Hall. The following guests were present and addressed the chapter: Mrs. John M. Beavers, corresponding secretary general; Mrs. Harry C. Grove, State regent; Mrs. Ada Mills Payne, State treasurer, and Mrs. Arturo Y. Casanova, State historian.

Our Flag Chapter.

Mrs. Garrett M. Davis presided at the meeting held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. John Sadler, with Mrs. Thomas Oulette and Mrs. Davis as assisting hostesses. With profound sorrow, the chapter expressed itself when the announcement of the death of Mrs. Edward M. Weeks, former regent and State chaplain, was made. A poem dedicated to Mrs. Weeks, written by Mrs. Sadler after the State conference when Mrs. Weeks was elected State chaplain, was read with the letter of response written by Mrs. Weeks. A committee on resolutions on the death of Mrs. Weeks was directed to send a copy to the bereaved family.

Mrs. Grattan Kerans announced the date and requested contributions for the "county fair" and dinner to be given November 16 at All Souls' Church Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard streets, by the chapters of the District. Mrs. W. J. Showalter reported progress in the work of the card index committee working in the library at Continental Hall. The chapter contributed $5 for a book plate requested by Mrs. Showalter, member of the library committee.

Mrs. F. M. Merchant, chairman of the Ellis Island committee, reported attendance at the State committee meeting, and by vote a shower of gifts for this work was planned for the meeting in November, when Mrs. Merchant and Mrs. Edward Quintard will be hostesses.

A gavel was presented the chapter by the Kenmore Association. The gavel was made from a beam that was removed from Kenmore when repairs were being made. It was presented the chapter and accepted with expressions of pleasure.

State Historical Committee.

The State historical committee of the District D. A. R. held the first meeting of the season on Thursday morning, October 20, in the Louisiana Room at Continental Hall. Thirty chapters of the District Daughters were represented and there were visitors. Mrs. Arturo Y. Casanova, the State historian, gave a brief account of her historical activities during the summer. She had attended the S. A. R. ceremonies at the graves of Dr. Stephen Bloomer Balch and of Lt. Col. Forrest. Also the S. A. R. San Martine ceremonies. She was a guest at the dedication of Fort McHenry and at the Masonic parade, which reproduced the corner-stone laying of the Capitol by George Washington.

The corresponding secretary, Miss Garlick, read a letter from Mrs. John M. Beavers, in which she said the Louisiana Room would be reserved for meetings of the historical committee on Thursdays of the third week in each month. Miss Garlick also read a letter from Mrs. Charles Carroll thanking the committee for the wreath placed in the chapel when the D. A. R. visited Doughregan Manor last June. Copies of a letter from Mrs. William Lewis Dunne, the historian general, were distributed to members of the committee. In this letter Mrs. Dunne outlined the work which she hoped would be accomplished during the coming year.

Mrs. McCrory, chairman of historic spots, gave a description of the committee's pilgimage to Doughregan Manor. Miss Evelyn Yeomans, chairman of the filing and lending of historical papers committee, explained the method of lending papers and films and distributed a catalogue of historical papers now available.

The historian of the Major L'Enfant Chapter told of the visit of her chapter to the U. S. S. Constitution and of the presentation of several gifts to the boat.

DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA

Betsy Ross Council.

Betsy Ross Council will meet on Wednesday evening. The feature of the meeting will be the annual grand visitation at 8:45 o'clock. The State councilor, Mrs. S. Belle Gibson; associate councilor, Mrs. Helen W. Luckett, and other State Council officers and committees will be the special guests.

Eagle Council.

Morgan Reed Council, of the Jr. O. U. A. M., October 15, in the opening of Rhode Island avenue. Helen Richards, one of the charter members, carried the new banner. Remarks were made by the deputy, Julia Columbus. A card party was held after the meeting.

Pride of Washington Council.

Pride of Washington Council was officially visited, at its last regular meeting, by the State councilor, Mrs. S. Belle Gibson, and her staff of officers and State committees. The national and State council officers were escorted into the hall, and were greeted by Miss Lillian Allen, councilor. The councilor also welcomed a large attendance of 300 persons from the various councils, and also neighbors of Barbara Fritchie Council, of Potomac, Va., as well as a large number of members from Pride of Washington Council, No. 26. Mrs. Ada Radford, of the national good-of-the-order committee, a visitor from Augusta, Ga., gave a few remarks.

Mrs. Belle Gibson, State councilor, and Charles H. Miller, State council secretary, gave interesting talks. Other visiting officers and members were also heard from. A demonstration of the unwritten work was given by Mrs. Williams, inside sentinel. Past Councilor, Mrs. Stella Lewis, presented to the council a gold piece from the State body. A musical and literary program, under direction of Mrs. Lillian M. Martin, chairlady, and a sketch presented by several members of this council followed the close of the business meeting. Gifts were presented to the State councilor, Mrs. Belle Gibson; deputy, Mrs. Sadie Levy, and other officers.

Mizpah Council.

A reception was given in honor of the State vice councilor, Mrs. Ella Stone; Mrs. Mary L. Hoffman, of the State Council law committee, and Deputy Mrs. Ethel E. Burroughs, by the officers and members of Mizpah Council at the meeting on Thursday evening. Mrs. Lula Galleher presided. The State councilor, Mrs. E. Belle Gibson and her board of officers and committees were guests. After the meeting a program of songs was presented by Mrs. Eula Barnette, chairman. Mrs. Jennie Collier contributed several vocal selections. She was accompanied by Past State Councilor Mrs. Ethel Burroughs, at the piano. Songs were sung by the members and dedicated to Mrs. Ella Stone, Mrs. Mary Hoffman and Mrs. Ethel E. Burroughs. There was an address by the State Councilor Mrs. Gibson. Gifts were made to the State vice councilor, deputy and committeeship.

Wild West Saddle Found.

Pendleton, Oreg. (U.P.).—A reminder of the wild Western past in Umatilla County and surrounding territory was brought to recognition recently. E. B. Dockweiler, Pendleton, found a stock saddle believed to be at least 75 years old about 10 miles south of Echo, Oreg. The cantle, jockey and steel fork are all that remain of the probable possession of an early stockman.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

By ELISABETH E. POE.

The urge of book collecting is experienced by many, but the pleasure of possession of really rare first editions is limited to a few. But those who can collect rare editions and those who would if they could, can share the pleasures of knowing just where the treasures can be found. Therefore the Poe Census, compiled by Charles F. Heartman and Kenneth Rede for the revived monthly, "The American Book Collector," will be of great interest to all book lovers. The Poe Census not only tells where first editions, manuscripts, autographed letters can be found, but also contains detailed descriptions of the literary treasures and many interesting notes, bibliographical, biographical and literary, of this poet.

Rare law books, dating 1730 to 1919, have been presented to the School of Law of St. John's College, Brooklyn, N. Y., by Mr. Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, of the United States Supreme Court. Among these more than 1,000 volumes is the two-volume set containing the complete report of the trial for treason of Aaron Burr. The report was taken in shorthand by David Robinson, attorney at the trial, which took place in Richmond, Va., before Chief Justice John Marshall.

Many of the books were bequeathed to Justice Cardozo by his father, the late Justice Albert Cardozo, of the court of common pleas of Brooklyn.

Many of the personal notes of Mr. Justice Cardozo are on the margins of these books, which add to their value in a historical as well as legal sense. He has also presented his judicial robe, worn while chief justice of the New York State court of appeals.

Washington educators are very much interested in the reported success of the Library on the Common, the open-air library which was established in the Boston Common and continued until the cold weather forced those in charge to move indoors with their books. All the books were donated by those interested in the idea. The origin of the system has been attributed to Mayor Curley, of Boston. Here any one who wanted to read out-of-doors could secure a book without a deposit or reference of any kind. They simply signed slips agreeing to return the books the same day. Most of them did come back the same day, too, although a few were carried away and returned in three or four days. Very few of the books were permanently taken away.

Washington with its parks and open spaces might follow this example next summer.

Carnegie, the superman, rather than Carnegie the idealist, is presented to us in "The Life of Andrew Carnegie," by Burton J. Hendrick (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York). It is an Andrew Carnegie who is a brilliant opportunist, as well as a genius in the art of living and a man with a great desire to have the good that he did live after him. It is an Andrew Carnegie, the genius of steel, whose success is based on persistence and industry, that he gives us.

It is an honest Carnegie that Mr. Hendrick writes about in spite of the amassing of millions, and his keen insight into the industrial equation, which meant brawn and brains of other men. Not that Mr. Hendrick speaks of these, but the story as it is put before the reader is one of a captain of industry; and what is industry but human beings?

For those who would trace the source and watch the currents of the great river of success in the industrial, business and financial world this book will be of particular interest. The lay reader will be much more interested in the chapters of Mr. Carnegie as a man, as a philanthropist, and his friends and his pursuits in life.

Mr. Hendrick has given us a well-read, stimulating, cultured person in this man. Andrew Carnegie, who endowed our public libraries and gave many cities great reading and library centers which bear his name. He takes no notice of recent contemporary biographers of Mr. Carnegie who would decry the fact that he made these endowments for the cities' reading public contingent on carrying on his name after his death.

But, take it all in all, the story is one worth while not only as a history of the little Scotchman whose canniness in business and investing made him a great captain of American industry, but also as a history of the story of steel, which would make a good-sized volume in itself, and with whom the history and fate of the world are concerned.

As usual, this author has written well, and betrays his enthusiasm in his subject. He writes directly but interestingly and this book is most readable.

NOT TO BE REPEATED. The Merry-Go-Round of Europe. Anonymous. (Ray Long and Richard R. Smith, New York).

This book is not as disappointing as books of this kind written recently about Washington. But it does not startle and even shock as much as to be expected.

We learn from the publishers this "Anonymous" is not one person at all, but a number of persons writing the inside story of each of the European nations handled in this book. It is quite to be expected that a national would know more about what was going on behind the scenes in his own country.

It is not intentionally a book of scandal, of course, but the inside story of people and nations must contain some scandal, if the truth be told.

"It is safe to say," the British Anonymous writer writes, "that England completely excludes from her calculations any idea of war with America, though there was a lot of talk about it some years ago. But British naval power is one of the magnets that hold the empire together; it is the dominions' guaranty of safety. Britain surrendered naval supremacy, but she will not surrender naval parity, for American preponderance of naval power might well mean the breakup of the empire even without war * * *."

In another chapter the writer states the monarchy has been "kicked, so to speak, high above politics * * * Queen Mary is loved as much and works harder than any to keep royalty in the nation's affection. * * *"

The Duchess of Atholl, this anonymous English writer says, was "chosen to fill the bill for the minor office because, having a big family influence in Scotland, she was so nice and nebulous that none could say anything against her. Nor for that matter could any say much for her."

"The Astors," we are told, "are less famous in England than in the United States, where Lady Astor is thought to be more of a personage in her adopted land than she is in point of fact."

IN THE LAND OF THE THUNDER MOUNTAINS. By Robert Dick Douglas, jr. (Brewer, Warren & Putnam, Inc., New York).

This is a story of a typical American boy who accompanied Mr. Martin Johnson on an expedition through the wild game country of Africa in 1928 and since that time has been a member of the party of exploration of the little known interior of Kodiak Island, Alaska. This is the third book this young American has written and it is both exciting and instructive. He tells the story of exploring the inside of the world's largest active volcano, Aniakchak, in Alaska. It is a story of airplanes, of battling fogs and wind, of grizzly bears and climbing high rocky cliffs where to slip would mean a plunge to death into a great vat of molten rock.

BEFORE THE CURTAIN FALLS. Anonymous. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis).

The anonymous author gives no reason for not giving his name, but has written as if inspired by deep and idealistic patriotism. He has scourges and whips for the men of state and of business who he indicates have tarnished our honor. He takes care, however, to explain that, except for the obviously historical characters, the individuals in this book are either entirely fictitious or represent composite types, having no identity with particular individuals.

The book is written as an autobiography of one man from his life in a small Virginia town to his service in France with the Intelligence Department, and postwar Paris and relief work in Serbia. He takes a shot at the excesses of patriotic organizations and political corruption in America. He tells of his work in Washington with a press association during the Teapot Dome scandal. Of course, many will not agree with his point of view, but the book is very interestingly written.

GROVER CLEVELAND. A Study in Courage. By Allan Nevins. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

Mr. Nevins gives us a most fascinating picture of this Democratic President, who could come back after his first term. This is not a book that makes Grover Cleveland a man without faults It is a book which recognizes his virtues and attainments The story of the open break with Tammany which made him a national figure and the candidate for President is of particular interest just now. The view Mr. Cleveland held on tariff reform his prejudice against the efforts of silver agitators will prove particularly interesting to readers on both sides of the political fence at this hour.

McGoofey's First Reader

By H. I. PHILLIPS

WHO is this?

This is Prentice.

What is Prentice doing?

Prentice is boasting.

About what is Prentice boasting?

Prentice is boasting about the election.

What is he saying?

He is telling everybody that he could have told them just what was about to happen at the polls.

Is Prentice one of those I-told-you-so eggs?

Yes, indeed. From the way he is beefing around now you would think the election was fixed and that he was in on all the preliminary arrangements.

Does Prentice say he had it all doped out in advance?

Yes, he even says he forecast the election figures within a few hundred votes.

Did Prentice really make a fairly accurate prophecy?

Prophecy, my eye! Only last week before election he had the wrong candidate winning by a landslide.

Did he vote the winning ticket?

Of course not.

How do you explain it?

It's an old post-election custom for some people to say they knew it all in advance.

THE STORY OF PENELOPE.

PENELOPE was a smart girl.

She understood men.

Even when she was a very little girl she seemed to be able to see through people. Teacher said she was deep.

She had a penetrative mind and boasted that she could tell character at a glance.

When she was a schoolgirl she played only with the boys who were obviously of the better type.

When she grew up and went to college everybody remarked on her uncanny judgment about boy friends.

She was made business manager of the college paper because she had a way with men and could approach hard-headed business men with an air of complete superiority.

"Nobody will ever fool that young lady," they used to say.

She never seemed to have time for any youth who didn't appear to be the Ideal American Lad.

Looks didn't matter so much with Penelope; she said she looked below the surface and could sense character and all the nobler qualities.

She had no time for triflers and weak eggs.

She used to boast that the man she married must have depth and background. He must come up to all her standards.

The other girls envied her.

One day Penelope astounded them by eloping with a youth she had met the previous afternoon on a merry-go-round at a picnic.

When the haze lifted he turned out to be a saxophone player who had three other wives and couldn't understand why it should be illegal.

Moral—Anybody can make a mistake.

CURIOUS FACTS FOR CURIOUS PEOPLE.

The Connecticut River is located in Connecticut.

A shad lays 4,567,987 eggs a year and doesn't seem to mind.

Geraniums cannot live without sunshine and water.

Gen. Custer's last fight was the fight in which he was killed.

Crooners and cookoos are protected the year around by game laws.

There is said to be a man in the United States who owns an auto and never forgets about putting water in the batteries. The rumor has never been confirmed.

China is larger than the whole State of Rhode Island.

The Prince of Wales is an institution entirely surrounded by news reel camera operators.

There is a kingdom in Asia, which is the ideal state. It has no professional wrestling bouts.

The porpoise can not be raised in domesticity.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH THESE SENTENCES?

Stock market securities advanced 10 points and held their gains for a week.

The Broadway comedian refused to use any jokes that might be slightly ribald.

The maker of 50-cent cigars gave out an interview in which he said business was great.

"Never mind the musical program," said the radio fan. "All I want to hear is the announcer."

The specialist looked the patient over and did not recommend removal of tonsils.

The American voter refused to cast his ballot until he had weighed all the issues carefully and studied the speeches of each candidate.

The business manager, interrupted by the office boy who had come in to demand a raise and shorter hours, smiled cheerily and granted both requests at once.

About the Chess Table

By WILLARD H. MUTCHLER

The locks on the ticket tournament boxes at the Capital City Chess Club were recently opened, and for the first time since the tourney began, more than three months ago, the tickets were counted. Participants, to be eligible for positional prizes, were required to have competed in 50 games. First honors went to G. E. Bishop, who scored 98 wins as opposed to 21 losses. W. B. Mundelle, with a score of 247 wins and 163 losses, carried off second honors. With a prize offered for the contestant taking part in the greatest number of games, those familiar with Mr. Mundelle's skittling need not be informed that he won the reward with much to spare. On the 50-game basis, E. J. Simmons, with a score of 31 wins and 31 losses, finished third.

A total of 25 club members have competed in the tournament to date. The score of all those having an average of 50 per cent wins, or better, is appended.

Player.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
G. E. Bishop	98	21	82
H. E. Garner	29	7	80
J. B. Beadle	7	3	70
J. W. Apitz	10	5	67
C. W. Stark	24	14	63
W. B. Mundelle	247	163	60
J. E. Gould	21	18	54
E. J. Simmons	31	31	50

The club championship tournament also got under way. To date G. E. Bishop and W. S. Sullivan each have a victory over T. M. Wilkins to their credit, the former winning in ten moves and the latter in eighteen moves. Wilkins scored a draw against C. L. Snell in the only other game contested.

The Class C tournament at the local club has also commenced, with E. J. Simmons, F. T. Parsons, F. W. P. Gleason, C. B. Tompkins, F. S. Tilton, jr., and J. W. Apitz making up the list of entrants. To date, in the only game contested, Simmons has scored a win over Parsons.

Mexican Tourney Game.

Last week we promised readers a game from the recently concluded international master tournament in Mexico City in which World Champion Alexander Alekhine and Isaac Kashden tied for first honors. Appended is the final round game, which Alekhine needed to win from J. Medina, champion of Zacatecas, in order to tie for first place. Alekhine, we understand, had journeyed to Puebla the day on which Kashdan completed his schedule and was not aware until his return of the necessity for winning his adjourned game, which follows:

Solutions to Problems.

The key to No. 502 is R-Kt8. Among those sending in solutions were Jacob Frech, J. W. Harris, W. Rosett, John R. Brinton and Henry M. Ward. Solvers found this one quite difficult.

John R. Brinton comments: "My chess solving ability was surely tested to its limit on your No. 502. After working on it for four days I finally solved it. I am a new solver and enjoy working the chess problems each week. Have worked them all so far but found No. 501 was the toughest of the bunch."

Jacob Frech writes, "Problem 502 generates about 600,000 series. R-Kt8 is the key move. Our governmental investigation committees can learn from partly published comments on problem 501 how to acquire sagacity or genius to solve their problems and how educators could teach students to acquire that (sadly atrophied) intellectual power if we had adequate textbooks."

Henry M. Ward remarks: "Black has on first only six possible moves, 4 with Kt, 1 each with P. In each case where white's second is to move the QR from Kt8, black can move his K; as he can when white on his second moves his KR, but black's K is unable to take either R on move 3."

White Birds Resemble Snowstorm in Missouri

Kansas City, Mo. (U.P.).—Pedestrians gazing up at the brilliantly lighted tower of the Power & Light Building here one night recently noticed what appeared to be a flurry of large snow flakes.

Investigation revealed that a swarm of migrating warblers, southbound, had been attracted by the lights and had stopped to circle the building for an hour or two.

The birds departed only when the flood lights were extinguished.

Submarine Mountain Is Located in Pacific

Santa Cruz, Calif. (U.P.).—A huge submarine mountain, more than a mile high, has been discovered in the ocean 50 miles west of this city by the crew of the Geodetic Survey boat Guide, which has been making soundings near here.

A huge crater, 7,000 feet deep, was located some time ago. The top of the mountain is approximately 900 fathoms, or 5,400 feet, under the surface.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

AN ovation was accorded Eugene Ormandy, so well known to radio listeners, when he appeared last week as guest conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Ormandy is scheduled for nine more guest appearances with this famous organization during the forthcoming season.

It was just about a year ago that Ormandy was appointed conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, at a reported salary of upward of $20,000. At that time he was the conductor of the Melody Moments broadcasting orchestra. His work attracted so much attention that he was selected as general musical director for Columbia, but it was then that the Minneapolis people grabbed him.

Following a strenuous season in the Northwest injecting new life into the Minneapolis Symphony, Ormandy spent the summer driving through Germany, Austria, Hungary and Italy in his twelve-cylinder car. This included visits to Salzburg, where Mozart was born; to Bonn, where Beethoven was born; and Budapest, where Eugene Ormandy was born.

Ormandy was a violin prodigy at the age of 3½, and the youngest pupil of the Royal State Academy of Music at 5½. It was as a violinist that he came to the United States, but he soon found himself conductor of the Capitol Grand Theater Orchestra in New York City.

There was a great break for him about a year ago when Toscanini was unable to fill an engagement as guest conductor with the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. Ormandy was substituted in his stead, and today, at the advanced age of 32, the attractive blonde Hungarian finds himself sitting on top of the world of music.

WMAL is now going into its second week as an independent station and congratulations are due to Milton Baker and William Pierson on the good beginning they have made. Several commendations of their work have reached this writer.

"We haven't used a record since we left the network," Mr. Pierson said. "That we have been able to go ahead shows that Washington has as fine talent as any other city and that everything worth while doesn't originate in New York or Chicago."

Typical of the new local features introduced by WMAL is "Poetry and Music," which will be heard every Tuesday night at 8:15 o'clock. The first program was dedicated to "Autumn" and the next one will have as its theme "Indian Summer."

Eileen Fowler recites the verse, Dorothy Sherman Pierson sings, and Adolf Torovsky is at the piano. The initial performance was well done and brought in many congratulations.

"IT begins to look as if 1932, now eating into its last quarter, will pass away without giving television to the home, Orrin Dunlap, jr., radio expert, observes. The research experts who have been hibernating in their laboratories through the economic depression are working behind a curtain of secrecy seldom witnessed in radio science. Even Marconi in the '90s worked more in the open than are the television builders of the '30s.

"When inquiry is made relative to the mystery of their labor the research engineers reply that they have learned a lesson from the evolution of broadcasting. They plan to guard every device with patents and be absolutely sure of protection before they hand television to the public. They hope to avert a so-called patent war and general chaos in the television industry.

"On the other hand, Capt. Peter Eckersley, former chief engineer of the British Broadcasting Corporation, while visiting in New York recently declared in regard to television. 'They are on the wrong track in London.' And Charles W. Horn, chief engineer of the National Broadcasting Company, added, 'We are up against a stone wall in television.'"

THOMAS P. LITTLEPAGE, Jr., of Washington, has just been notified by the Patent Office that his application No. 239,766 has been allowed. This device is a long and short wave receiving set, and according to the statement of the inventor, "comprises means for adapting one receiver to stations both in the broadcast and the short-wave bands without sacrificing the efficiency of the receiver in either band."

GOV. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT will speak in behalf of the Welfare and Relief Mobilization of 1932 over combined networks of the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Co. tonight.

A number of opera stars, including Claudia Muzio, soprano, and Charles Hackett, tenor, will participate in the program. The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra also will be heard.

A varied program, including two rarely heard Busoni selections, "Berceuse Elegiaque" and "Rondo Arlecchinesco," will be presented by Arturo Toscanini, conducting the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra in the concert which will be broadcast (WJSV, 3-5 p. m.). Michele Raggini, tenor, will be the soloist with the orchestra for the Busoni numbers, which will be heard over the air for the first time.

OSCAR SHAW, musical comedy star, now playing the lead in the Chicago company of the 1932 Pulitzer prize success, "Of Thee I Sing," will use words without music during the presentation of "Roses and Drums," the radio serial depicting the historic struggles that contributed to the establishment of the American home (WJSV, 5 p. m.).

In this episode, which is based on the first battle of Bull Run, July 21, 1861, when the Confederate troops under Beauregard defeated the Union Army, Shaw will play the featured role of Brig. Gen. Pierre Beauregard.

ART JARRETT, Jr., the young radio tenor who has just concluded a week's engagement at Loew's Fox Theater, may be the next microphone star to sit in a darkened theater and watch himself on the screen. One of the handsomest men on the air, Art has distinct picture possibilities. Also Art should have inherited acting ability. His father played juvenile leads with Florence Reed, Chauncey Olcott and William Faversham and has since appeared in a long list of successes. He is now playing in "Keeping Down Expenses." His mother was known to playgoers of a generation ago as May Powers. His grandfather played with E. H. Sothern. His uncle, Dan Jarrett, is a successful playwright.

Through his early years Arthur toured the vaudeville circuits with his parents and even played regular roles. At 11 he visited Camp Dix to sing for the soldiers. Between road tours Art attended Public School No. 9 in Brooklyn. Clara Bow, Helen Twelvetrees and Dolores Costello were members of his classes.

THE morning period of the Church of the Air (WJSV, 10:30 o'clock) will be a Baptist service, conducted by the Rev. Gove G. Johnson, D. D., pastor of the National Memorial Church of Washington, D. C., at which the program will originate.

Dr. Johnson will give a sermon on "What Men Live By." The music will be furnished by the church choir of twenty voices, under the direction of George F. Ross, accompanied by the organ. The choir will sing the hymns "Thou My Everlasting Portion" and "Bread of Heaven" and the anthem "Holy, Holy, Holy."

The afternoon program (WJSV, 1:30 o'clock) will be a Christian Science period, conducted by Adair Hickman, first reader of the Second Church of Christ, Scientist, New York City.

ERNEST HUTCHESON, concert pianist, will play as a solo offering Liszt's concert study in F minor, a melodic and vigorous work, during the recital to be broadcast (WJSV, 8 p. m.). With the accompaniment of the Columbia Concert Orchestra, under the direction of Howard Barlow, Hutcheson will also interpret the third and fourth movements, andante and allegretto, from Brahms' concerto in B flat.

The waltzes from Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier," a comedy opera, will be offered by the orchestra as the opening selection of the program.

EDDIE CANTOR, sun-kissed from Hollywood, resumes his weekly broadcasts on the Chase & Sanborn program over WRC at 8 p. m.

The comedian, whose successful debut on the Chase & Sanborn program a year ago started a parade of famous stage comedians to the microphone, will be welcomed back to the air for an indefinite series in a special program prepared by his old radio "straight" man, Jim Wallington, and Rubinoff and his orchestra.

Cantor himself will have several new and characteristic songs to offer, including "If I Had a Five Cent Piece," "There Ain't No Harm in Asking," and "What Kind of Business Have You?"

Stanley Bell, chief announcer at WMAL, has been directing a musical organization for twelve years, but it has never been on the air. It is the choir of the McKendree M. E. Church, which will make its radio debut in the weekly choir period at 11 o'clock this morning on WMAL.

GLADLY complying with requests, the National Brass Quintet program today (WRC, 4:45 p. m.) will be dedicated to the memory of the late Percy S. Foster, nationally known sacred song singer and leader. Only hymns known to be favorites of Mr. Foster will be featured. They include "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," "I Am Bound for the Promised Land" and one of his own compositions, "Saved to Serve."

ROBERT STICKNEY, concert pianist, will be featured during the WMAL Little Symphony Hour tonight. He will offer Mendelssohn's "Concert in E Minor."

A concert under the direction of Raoul Da Costa, conductor of Maxim Lowe's Shoreham Orchestra, will be broadcast over the Southeastern Network of the N. B. C., but not over WRC, at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Wellington Koo, Chinese Minister to France, will speak from Paris in the International Radio Forum (WRC, 4:30 p. m.). Koo, who formerly was his country's minister to the United States, will discuss "China's Relation to World Peace and Prosperity."

FRITZI SCHEFF, noted as the star of Victor Herbert's immortal "Mlle. Modiste," will appear as guest artist with Fred Allen's Revue (WJSV, 9 o'clock) tonight.

THE FORCING BIDS.

IT seems to most people that the number of Forcing bids available are not sufficient. In the Approach-Forcing System there are five definitely Forcing bids—namely, the Opening two-bid, the Jump Takeout, the Forcing Rebid, the Overcall in opponents' bid suit, and the notrump Overcall of a Pre-emptive bid. These cover practically all situations where one of the two partners has a hand sufficiently strong to be 95 per cent sure of a game.

There are other cases where a player, after two or three rounds of bidding have gone by, wishes to play the hand at game, but is not sure, as yet, of the very best place, and has none of these bids at his command. Under these circumstances, the bid he chooses, if short of game, should be regarded by partner as an inferential Force, and under no circumstances should partner pass. Assume that a player opens the bidding with one spade and receives a two notrump response from partner. He knows that his hand, combined with partner's, is strong enough to produce game, but he is not sure whether this game is in spades or notrump. He therefore bids three spades, intending to pass a three notrump bid by partner. There is no hand which the two notrump bidder can hold which would justify a pass in this situation, even though he may have slightly overbid his hand by bidding two notrump. The three-spade bid calls on him to answer either with three notrump or four spades. In connection with the above bid he should not now suddenly branch out and decide to bid four clubs or four diamonds. This is a trap bid and is inexcusable in that it may now force a four notrump response and this may be one more than the hand can produce.

This same inferential Force occurs when the Opening bidder shifts to another suit. For instance—

1 spade	2 notrump
3 hearts

NOTRUMP FORCING BID.

The notrump Forcing bid, which has recently been incorporated into the system, is usually used as an attacking bid, and it is a little hard to visualize a hand which would justify its use as a defensive measure. Just such a hand occurred at a Duplicate game the other night, however, and the South player who used this bid was rewarded with an excellent score.

West—Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

THE FORCING BIDS.

At most tables the bidding proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1NT	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

One South player, realizing that there seemed to be little doubt of the four-spade contract being fulfilled, overcalled with five hearts. This bid was set 4 tricks, and although it was probably misplayed, the Declarer was up against a rather hopeless situation from the beginning, as he was immediately forced to ruff spades and come down to the same number of trumps as West.

Only one South player found the correct bid on this hand—that is, to overcall the four spades with four notrump. Undoubtedly it is a rather dangerous bid—but not as dangerous as it looks. West had shown a balanced hand by his notrump bid and East had shown an extremely unbalanced hand, consisting mostly of spades. He was almost certain, therefore, that North must hold a five-card suit, and in this case the set could not be too great in that suit. When West doubled the four notrump bid, North was relieved from bidding, but, deciding that his partner would be better off if some information were given him, he bid five clubs. This was passed around to West, who doubled again, but the Double was taken out by East with five spades. South now had a really difficult decision to make. His hand looked fairly strong defensively, but at the same time it seemed doubtful that 3 tricks could be taken with partner having inserted a free bid; however, six clubs did not look too disastrous and there was always the possibility of pushing the opponents one more. He finally decided to bid six clubs, and it turned out that his decision was a wise one, as perfect defense would only defeat the contract 3 tricks. Actually he only went down two.

The spade Opening was ruffed and the King of hearts led immediately (there was no danger of a singleton heart in either hand, as West could not have held five hearts originally). This was taken by the Ace and a trump returned. Declarer won in the Dummy and led the heart Queen, dropping the Knave. He now decided to play West for holding three clubs originally and played down three more rounds of hearts. The third round was ruffed by West and Declarer overruffed with the Ace. He then ruffed the last spade in Dummy, drew the last trump and conceded 2 diamond tricks.

The Opening diamond lead is the only defense which would have obtained the maximum. Incidentally, East and West could easily have made five spades.

* * * *

In general, when holding four of partner's trumps, that suit is the one chosen for the eventual contract; when holding only three, there is frequently a very close choice between the suit and notrump: when holding two, of course, the notrump is preferred unless partner rebids the suit three times. When holding five it would seem that no decision was involved—that unquestionably the suit contract is the best. This is not always true. There are certain hands containing five trumps in support of partner's bid which are also of balanced distribution. On these hands, if the pattern is such that partner's distribution may be very similar, the notrump offers a much better chance of game. This is especially true when partner shows that his bid has been made on a four-card suit.

♣ A Q 3

The above hand was played in a Duplicate tournament, and the majority of players reached either three or four spades—in no case were more than three made. One North player, being familiar with the above principle, raised his partner's opening spade bid to two spades, and when his partner bid two notrump, decided to bid three notrump. It is obvious at a glance that this bid can be made easily, as the club finesse is successful and provides the ninth trick. Played at spades it is impossible to avoid losing 3 diamond tricks and 1 heart trick; at notrump, 4 diamond tricks are all that East and West can take.

Trick 2. West leads club Queen and wins.

Tricks 3 to 5. South must get in to draw the other trumps, and North makes a heart.

THIS WEEK'S PROBLEM.

Each Sunday I will prepare a problem in end-play. In this week's problem, which is Number 11 of the series, hearts are trump, and it is South's lead. North and South are to win four out of the five remaining tricks against any possible defense. The answer will be given next Sunday.

CLUB WOMEN AT POLLS FIGHT COMMUNISTS AND SOCIALISTS AS COMMON FOE

45 Women Nominated On 'Subversive' Ticket

Democrats and Republicans Are United to Encompass Their Defeat for Posts in State and National Governments.

By VYLLA POE WILSON.

Women who have been carrying on a campaign since the World War against "subversive" groups of men and women are uniting against a "common enemy" to prevent the election of the 22 women Communists and 23 women Socialists, who are candidates in the coming elections for national and State posts. The Republican and Democratic women who have been leaders in the struggle against these groups in the United States are uniting in their efforts to effect their defeat.

Despite the protests of some of the men party leaders they are supporting the strongest candidate of a regular party in their States and districts irrespective of their own political convictions.

To defeat the women Communists and Socialists and, of course, the men, too, is considered by the women who feel that this element is a menace to the country much more important than local and State party victories. Of course, this situation does not effect the candidates for President and Vice President and these women leaders can be good party women in this regard and even carry on their fight to elect anybody but a Communist or Socialist as their representative in the House of Representatives or Senate or the State Legislatures or local governments.

It is interesting to note that of the 101 women running for office in the United States only 18 are listed as regular Democrats and 17 as regular Republicans.

There are two Independent Republicans and three independents. In spite of the fact that the only woman who was ever nominated and a candidate for President of the United States in the history of this country, the late Belva A. Lockwood, was the choice of the temperance element of women, in this day of the enfranchisement of women only 6 of the 101 women candidates are listed as prohibitionists. Among these are Esther Hill Elfreth, prohibition candidate for the United States Senate. The other two women seeking the senatorial toga are Senator Hattie W. Caraway, Democratic incumbent from the State of Arkansas, and Clara Harrigal, Republican, of South Carolina

The groups of women's patriotic organizations, determined that no woman Socialist will sit in the United States Congress if they can help it, are carrying on a particularly active campaign against Miss Mary Winsor, candidate of the Socialist ticket of her district in Pennsylvania for the House of Representatives

Miss Winsor was the center of a near riot in the lobby of the auditorium of a Washington hotel ten or twelve years ago when a group of women representatives of patriotic organizations attempted to interrupt the meetings of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Miss Winsor was in the center of the struggle in the interest of the Woman's International League for Peace and Freedom and told the angry patriotic women that she was coauthor of the so-called "slacker's pledge" circulated during the World War calling on the women of the Nation not to roll a bandage or to do any war service.

Woman's Club Of Bethesda Given Terrace

Memorial to Mrs. W. E. Perry Dedicated With Ceremony; Round Table Meets.

The unveiling of a beautiful stone terrace presented to the Woman's Club of Bethesda in memory of the late Mrs. Walter E. Perry by friends, made a touching scene at that club Tuesday. George P. Sacks, who succeeded Mrs. Perry on the Board of Education, made the presentation to Mrs. Edward M. Willis, president of the Woman's Club of Bethesda, who accepted in their behalf.

Miss Louise Massey, niece of the late Mrs. Perry, unveiled the terrace, reciting extracts from the poem, "The Other World," by Harriet Beecher Stowe. The hymn, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," was then sung by Mrs. Paul Demerest and Mrs. Elizabeth Eaton, which was followed by a benediction given by the Rev. Stanley White of the Bethesda Presbyterian Church, in which he commended Mrs. Perry's sincere love for mankind. Mrs. Lilly C. Stone, who presided over the dedication, donated the beautiful stones which make up the terrace.

Mrs. Charles L. Chambers presided over the round table meeting and introduced the two speakers, Miss Genevieve Hendricks and Furman L. Mulford. Miss Hendricks, first vice president of the Maryland and District Chapters of American Institute of Interior Decorators, talked on "Period Furniture" and related subjects. Some old and precious findings of her numerous travels were shown by Miss Hendricks.

Reservation Demanded by Federation

World Court Code Must Not Contain Set Inequalities, Resolution Says.

At the first meeting of the season 1932-1933 of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, held at the National Federation of Women's Clubs Building, the District of Columbia organization voted overwhelmingly in favor of the following resolution to be presented to Congress:

"Whereas the United States Government refused to be a party to the nationality convention adopted by the first conference for the codification of international law, held under the auspices of the League of Nations at The Hague in 1930, one of the grounds of its refusal being that this convention was not based on equality between men and women in nationality rights, for which equality this Government stands, and

"Whereas the Department of State has three times officially stated its disapproval of the convention; first, through the chief delegates to The Hague conference; second, through the State Department's press release of April 15, 1930, and third, in the Secretary of State's letter of June 23, 1931, to the secretary-general of the league, and

"Whereas American women have joined with the women of the world in demanding from the league the submission of a new convention based on equality; and

"Whereas the League of Nations has so far opposed all efforts by women to secure submission of a new convention; and is, instead, pressing for ratifications of the projected, unfair nationality convention; and

"Whereas the rights of American women and the American standard of equality will be endangered if the code of law to be established for the court to apply has injustice as its corner stone; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that in the event the United States adheres to the statute of the World Court it shall make the following reservation:

"That the code of law to be administered by the World Court shall not contain inequalities based on sex."

Victory Chapter

Study Group Of A. A. U. W. To Begin Work

Child Development, Dancing and Poetry Group Start Activity This Week.

The outstanding activity of the week's program of the American Association of University Women will be the opening of many of the study groups.

Among the classes beginning this week are the study group in child development on Tuesday at 10 a. m. with Mrs. Lucile Ezekiel as leader; the art of the dance group with Miss Evelyn Davis as leader on Tuesday at 8 p. m., and the poetry study group on Thursday at 11 a. m. with Mrs. Richard Hogue as leader.

The poetry study group will discuss during the coming winter the contemporary English poets and a synopsis of the winter's program will be given at the first meeting as well as a resume of the American poets who were studied last year.

Dr. Harrison Howe, editor of the Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, will be the honor guest and speaker at the weekly tea tomorrow, when he will discuss the subject, artificial silk, cellophane and cellulose products. Dr. Louise McDanell Browne will introduce the speaker and Mrs. Frank Ballou will be the hostess.

Dr. Edith Allen and Miss Irma Brown will be the leaders for the hikers this afternoon when the club walks through Rock Creek Park. The hikers will meet at Pierce's Mill at 2:45 and after the hikes will have supper at the clubhouse on I street.

Kensington Club

The Woman's Club of Kensington has enjoyed 32 successful years of work. The members have devoted much time to civic matters and are active in social service work. The club, organized in 1899, has entered upon its thirty-third year with an interesting program planned for the year's work. Officers' day was recently held at the home of the new president, Mrs. Edward A. Farrell.

Mrs. W. H. Ronsaville was hostess to members of the club at an open meeting held on October 21, with Mrs. Farrell in the chair.

Mrs. James Alburtus, of Chevy Chase, who recently returned from South Africa, was the guest speaker and the husbands and other guests enjoyed the moving picture illustrations and talk by Mrs. Alburtus. Her subject was "Our Vacation in South Africa." Carved ivory, wooden animals, hand-made wire and bead jewelry, which Mrs. Alburtus brought home from Africa, were on exhibition. Miss Marion Ronsaville and Miss Virginia Ronsaville served as models for some of the native attire.

A musical program was given by Miss Adele Merriam, pianist, a student of Mme. Marie von Unschuld. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mrs. George W. Ashworth.

Trowel Club.

The Trowel Club, one of the garden clubs of Washington, for its Bicentennial planting toward the beautification of this city, chose to improve the entrance of the Tuberculosis Hospital.

Through the most generous cooperation of Mr. John H. Small 3d, of the well known firm of landscape engineers, the very effective planting of evergreens has been completed. By adding to the attractiveness of the hospital entrance, it is hoped that some contribution has been made to the happiness of the patients.

Clan MacLennan.

Last evening Clan MacLennan, of the American Order of Scottish Clans, installed new officers for the coming year. William G. MacKay is the new chief, Lon Davis, tanist; Alexander E. Robertson, secretary, and James L. Ramsey, treasurer.

Zonta Club

The garden teahouse of the Dodge Hotel, delightful in its harvest-season decorations, beheld a strange sight Wednesday evening when members of the Zonta Club met for dinner, in fancy dress and mask. Farmer boys rubbed elbows with royalty while colonial dames sat at table with Turks or hula-hula girls; a handsome young Scotchman whispered in the ear of no less person than Satan himself, who, pitchfork in hand stalked in the midst of the company; gentlemen from the "gay nineties," a little girl from Holland, a British fox hunter riding her noble steed—all were there, and many others.

After dinner a business session was held, at the conclusion of which a musical program was presented by Miss Frances Gutelius, participated in by several club members, among whom were Mrs. Leonor Reed, Miss Ivalee Newell, Miss Ester Gude and Miss Nancy Lake.

Takoma Women.

The regular meeting of the Takoma Park Woman's Club will be held at the Branch Library on Tuesday at 1 o'clock. Luncheon will be served to members. Guest tickets may be procured from Mrs. Ethel Lamond, 7221 Blair road, up to noon tomorrow. An illustrated talk on "Some of My Recent Travels" will be given by Mrs. William M. Mann, wife of the director of the National Zoological Park.

The executive board met for luncheon and business at 210 Willow avenue Friday. "The Age of Romanticism" was discussed at Wednesday's meeting of the drama department of the club.

The music department met on Thursday at the home of Mrs. E. W. Bond. The life of Schumann was reviewed by the hostess, and there were songs and also piano music from the works of this composer.

Business Women.

The monthly meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club was held at the Willard Hotel Monday evening. Miss Stella Clodfelter, president, presiding. Action was taken to become a boxholder for the Sunday afternoon concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra. Plans were perfected for a benefit card party which will be given at the Dodge Hotel Friday, the proceeds of which will go to the club's relief fund for unemployed women.

Miss Ruth Finney was the guest speaker for the evening, her subject being "Publicity and Its Application to Presidential Campaigns." The program was in charge of Mrs. Jessie Eliot Perez.

Kenilworth Guild

The Ladies' Guild of Kenilworth held its meeting at the home of Mrs. Hatswell, October 25, fifteen members being present. Flowers and cards were sent to all the sick. A card party was given Friday at the home of Mrs. Lasley, 1503 Minnesota avenue northeast. After all new business was heard, the hostess served refreshments. The next meeting, on November 9, will be at the home of Mrs. Heinlein 1603 Kenilworth avenue northeast.

Art Treasures On Programs Of Delphians

Florence and Venice Discussed by Gamma Chapter at Shoreham Hotel.

The Gamma Chapter of the Delphian Society met at the Shoreham Hotel Monday evening with Miss Mary G. Wolford presiding. The program, in charge of Mrs. Pearl R. Friedle, consisted of art treasures of Florence and Venice. Some treasures in the Cathedral Square were described by Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, those of the Bargello and the Uffizie, by Miss Irene Westerman. Other famous art centers were discussed by Mrs. Viola S. Snyder. Pictures of the cathedral and Campanile of Florence were described by Mrs. Jessie Krause.

The study of art in Venice was next discussed, a description of San Marco being given by Mrs. Alice Cushman Eliot, after which Ruskin's essay on San Marco was given by Miss Lulu Adams. The ducal palace was described by Mrs. Mary G. Mathiot, and the guild halls and the academy by Miss Ellen G. Bulger. The evening's program was concluded by Miss Wolford's summary, which gave a vivid description of the contrasts in the two centers of art.

The next meeting of the Gamma Chapter will be on Monday evening, November 14, and the program will be in charge of Mrs. O. N. Fansler.

The Alpha Zeta Chapter met on Wednesday at the Washington Hotel. Mrs. E. E. Jones, president, conducted a short business session. Mrs. Charles Boteler was the leader for the meeting, and the following members took part in the program. "The Delphian Traveler," Mrs. Elmer Davis; "The Nile," Mrs. G. N. Warner; "Egypt and the Modern Man," Mrs. Samuel Montgomery; "Before the Pyramid Days," Mrs. Louis Puckett; "Our Sources of Egyptian History," Mrs. Harvey Zimmerman; "Life in Pyramid Days," Mrs. A. L. Riddick; "The Egyptian Life," Mrs. William Weber. An interesting discussion followed the presentation of each subject.

Chichester introduced the topic, "Oedipus the King," as a Greek drama. Mrs. E. H. Erickson gave the parode; Mrs. T. A. Huntley and Mrs. J. E. Kierman, the first and second stasimon; Mrs. A. J. Maxwell, the hyporcheme; Mrs. Floyd B. Olcott, the third stasimon. The kommos and epilogue was by Mrs. Retta Maybe. The character of Greek tragedy was by Mrs. Knowlton. Comparisons between the ancient and up-to-date dramas were drawn by the class.

The next meeting will be Wednesday, Mrs. Lawrence Douglas, leader. The chapter has accepted the invitation to hear Sir Wilmot Lewis, November 7.

Mrs. J. K. Freiot presided at the meeting held at the Willard Thursday morning. Guests were Mrs. Hillary Tolson and Mrs. Elmer Pefferr. Mrs. Grattan Kerans was the leader. Mrs. C. H. Potter was the Delphian traveler. Topics of discussion were presented on the study of Hebrew literature by Mrs. DeBurr, who spoke on "Hebrew Poetry;" Mrs. Alexander H. Bell on the wisdom literature, taking "Wisdom Described," with Mrs. Robert W. Howard talking on "Wisdom Dramatized." "Stories of the Social Life" of the Hebrews was discussed along with the stories of Ruth and Naomi and that of Queen Esther, then the "Song of Songs," the song of Solomon, was the topic presented by Mrs. G. P. Rawley.

The times as historically recorded in the reign of King Solomon with all the prosperity, its building program, the season of employment was followed by the period of depression when his son Rehoboam came into power, the protests of the populace, on the refusal of reduction of taxes bringing about the dissolution of the kingdom by the withdrawal of ten of the tribes, which were afterward known as the Kingdom of Israel, the remaining two tribes the Kingdom of Judeh. "The Message of the Prophets" was presented by Mrs. J. B. Tiffey.

The regular meeting will be held at the Willard Thursday morning at 10 o'clock. Mrs. A. B. Manly will be the leader and Mrs. J. K. Freiot will preside.

Quota Club

The Washington Quota Club celebrated its seventh birthday with a dinner party at the Women's City Club Thursday night. The past presidents of the club were the guests of honor, as follows: Mrs. Lilla G. Capers, who organized the club seven years ago and was its first president: Mrs. Sallie V. H. Pickett, Miss Alma McCrum, Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, Mrs. Eleanor Austin, nee Eckhardt, and Miss Frieda Kenyon.

With table decorations of chrysanthemums, autumn leaves and candles, and to an orchestral accompaniment, the Washington Quota Club ate its way heartily into its eighth year, as any growing child would.

After dinner Stanley Robertson, tenor, entertained with two numbers, "Gipsy Love Song" and "At Dawning," accompanied on the piano by Miss Beulah Chamberlain. As an encore he gave several short and snappy numbers, accompanying himself on the ukelele.

Eleanor Eckhardt Austin entertained with a humorous imitation of a radio talk, introducing laughable idiosyncrasies and mannerisms of the Washington Quota Club members.

Frederic William Wile, introduced by Miss Sybil Baker, gave a humorous and informative discourse.

The past presidents were each presented with a Martha Washington silver spoon, and Mrs. Wile, who was also a guest of the club, was presented with a Martha Washington States plate, these souvenirs being replicas of the originals, reproduced by Quota International for the Bicentennial celebartion. Miss Alma McCrum, presided at the meeting.

Beta Sigma Phi

The Alpha Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority announces that on Tuesday evening, November 15, there will be a joint meeting of the three District chapters of the sorority at 2400 Sixteenth street. Dr. Earle Wilfley, pastor emeritus of the National City Christian Church, widely known as a Shakespearean scholar, will speak. At the close of the meeting there will be a reception in honor of Dr. Wilfley and the new officers of the three chapters.

EVENTS OF THE WEEK IN WASHINGTON PARENT-TEACHER ASSOCIATIONS

The State president's message was read by Mrs. L. L. Scott, first vice president, after which the nominating committee for the current year was elected unanimously as follows: Mrs. March, chairman; Miss E. Goodpasture and Mrs. Spicer.

Mrs. Hildebrand, third vice president, made a plea for clothing, shoes and rubbers for the student aid work. Articles sent to the school at any time will be cared for until collected on Wednesday.

Miss Draney, principal, gave a talk on "The Relation of the Home and School."

The 2A, with Miss Gillis, teacher, won the grade count. "What Makes a Successful P. T. A.," was the title of a paper read by Mrs. Stickel.

The delegates to the Public School Association are Mrs. L. B. Habecker, Mrs. Gerald Hennessey and Mr. K. P. Armstrong.

After community singing, led by Mrs. H. Anson Hughes, at the piano, the meeting adjourned for room visiting and a social hour with refreshments.

ELIOT JUNIOR HIGH.

The president, Mrs. J. E. Holloway, requests all members of the executive committee to meet in the teachers' room for luncheon Tuesday, at noon. The regular executive meeting will follow.

Bundle day is to be held on November 17. All bundles are to be given to the matron.

The drive for membership is to start Monday.

HEARST.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Phoebe A. Hearst School held its first meeting in the new school October 17. The meeting was in the nature of a housewarming with a large attendance of teachers, parents and officers of the association. After an informal reception, a brief program was held, at which Mrs. J. N. Saunders, H. W. Draper and Miss Sarah Holland were the chief speakers.

An announcement was made of the card party which was held Wednesday, October 26, at the school, after which the meeting adjourned.

HINE JUNIOR HIGH.

The first meeting of the Hine Association was held October 20, under the direction of the new officers. President, Mr. R. L. Barnes; vice president, Mrs. J. S. Davis; secretary, Mrs. E. W. Frazier; treasurer, Mrs. Roland Rice.

The following committee chairmen were appointed: Finance, Mrs. E. E. Hess; membership, Mrs. C. L. At this meeting Henry Gilligan, of the Board of Education, presented the new six-room annex to the school. The principal, H. E. Warner, made the speech of acceptance.

JANNEY.

The study group met October 19 at 10 a. m. in Janney School. The discussion of the laws of learning given in Germane and Germane's "Character Education" proved to be very instructive and interesting. The group will meet again Wednesday at 10 a. m. in the first aid room of the Janney School. Mrs. Parks will lead the discussion on chapters 1 and 2, part 2. Germane and Germane. Mrs. Willis will review "The Wholesome Childhood," by Groves, and Mrs. Raymond "Mental Hygiene of Children," by W. A. White.

JEFFERSON JUNIOR HIGH.

Before a well-filled assembly hall last Monday evening, the Jefferson Association opened its first meeting of the school year. Due to inclemency of the weather, the gathering had been postponed from the week before.

Mrs. Freda Chamberlain presided, and presented the new officers as follows: First, second, third and fourth vice presidents, respectively, Mrs. J. M. Schaffer, Mrs. William Bonsall, Mrs. Mabel Newman, Ralph Strawbridge, prinicipal of the school; treasurer, Mrs. Elsie Welty; secretary, Van Dusen Rickert, jr.

Following the introduction of these officers to the audience, the committee chairmen were named as follows: Student aid, Mrs. Mary Bart; hospitality, Mrs. William Bonsall; Bulletin, Mrs. Fannie Litman; ways and means, Mrs. Carrie Jones; membership, Mrs. Mabel Newman; program, Mrs. Julia Zimmerman; child welfare, Mrs. M. E. Smith; scrapbook, Mrs. Sadie Henry; publicity, Miss Anna G. Walsh; home economics, Miss Irene Minear; health, Mrs. Grace Holmes; legislation, Mrs. J. M. Schaffer; music, Mrs. Fannie Litman; school, Otto Schiedle.

Miss Irene Minear, of the domestic art department, told the mothers about the model graduation dress on display in the sewing room, and asked their cooperation in securing material as soon as possible, so the February graduates may begin on their gowns.

President Chamberlain announced that the regular meetings would be held on the third Monday of the month, while the executive meetings would be held every first Thursday.

At the conclusion of the business meeting William E. Strovel, of the Southwest traffic division of the municipal police, spoke of the necessity of a well-trained schoolboy patrol in each school.

"It is remarkable to note," Mr. Strobel said, "that there have been no accidents where schoolboys are on duty. "Child mortality in traffic," he went on to say, "is decreasing, while adult mortality is increasing." Hyman Edlowitz, captain of the patrol, and his squad were presented. The squad consists of Henry Ward, Wesley Henley, Neville James, Douglas Muir, Robert Stoute, Boyd Hurley, Berkley Haas, Raymond King and Jack Lifshutz.

Ned Wallace, representative of the American Automobile Association, commended the Jefferson boy patrol. Not only does Washington and other large cities have the schoolboy traffic protection, but the movement is spreading to the United States' possessions, where their school children are aided in learning regulations by the young patrolmen. The Philippines have a splendid unit.

C. C. Cappel, of the National Symphony Orchestra, informed the parents of the series of children's concerts which Hans Kindler is going to conduct at Central High School on Saturday mornings.

Then followed selections from the prospective annual school operetta, "Tulip Time." Both boys' and girls' glee clubs are concentrating on this musical extravaganza. Solo and choral numbers were sung, Donna Mulloy acting as mistress of ceremonies, announcing the leading players, as follows: Dick, Tony Tinger; Christina, Donna Mulloy; Katrinka, Margaret Stanford; Ned, Russell Dant; Hans, Billy Whiting; Burgomaster, Richard Simmons.

The executive committee will meet in the school cafeteria, Sixth street and Virginia avenue southwest, on Thursday, November 3, at 3 o'clock.

BRYAN.

The association is holding a membership drive and to date has enrolled 150 members.

A meeting was held Tuesday at which 200 were present. Mrs. J. N. Saunders, State president, spoke on the "Assistance Parents Can Give Their Children by Proper Training." Miss Crook, the principal, spoke on the "Value of Attendance at the Meetings."

Bundle day will be held Thursday. A luncheon is being planned for some time in November.

EDMONDS-MAURY.

The fall luncheon will be held at Edmonds School Wednesday during the noon hour. All members and friends are cordially invited.

GORDON JUNIOR HIGH.

There was a meeting of the executive committee of the association in the school library at 3 p. m. on Wednesday.

KEENE.

The executive board meeting of the Keene Association will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the school, and the next regular meeting of the association will be on November 8 at 8 p. m.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY.

The Francis Scott Key Association held its first meeting of the new school year at the school October 12 with an attendance of 120. Mrs. David G. Morris was unanimously elected president to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mrs. Floyd E. Dotson. Henry W. Draper gave a brief talk on "The New Philosophy of Education," and little Misses Marion Depue and June Sorenson entertained with piano selections. The Francis Scott Key School has an enrollment of 258 pupils this year, 42 of whom are in the kindergarten.

KINGSMAN-PIERCE.

"Safeguarding the Health of Our Children Through This Economic Crisis" is the theme of the program of the Kingsman-Pierce Association for the year 1932-33.

At the first meeting held this year which took place October 12 at the Pierce School, the following committee chairmen were appointed: Mrs. T. W. Davis, membership; Mrs. Ruth Epstein, publicity; Mrs. C. Griffith, hospitality; Mrs. G. Hodges, ways and means; Mrs. M. Berger, Bulletin; Mrs. F. Hilton, milk, Kingsman School; Miss Bergen, thrift, Kingsman School.

A luncheon will be held at the Pierce School Thursday between 12 and 1 o'clock for the good and welfare of Parent-Teacher work.

PARK VIEW PLATOON.

Culminating the annual membership drive, conducted by Mrs. J. McKay, membership chairman, a reception to new members will be held Thursday at 8 p. m.

The annual children's Halloween party will be held on Monday, October 31, at 7 o'clock. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes.

The program committee, Mrs. Glen Leach, chairman, has chosen "Citizenship and Goodwill," as the year's theme. All afternoon meetings will be conferences of parents and teachers in the home rooms after routine business.

PETWORTH.

Petworth Parent-Teacher Association will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night, at 8 o'clock, in the Petworth School, Eighth and Shepherd streets northwest. Dr. Nolan C. Lewis will be the principal speaker. He will discuss the "Problem Child." Mrs. Fred E. Blood will preside.

WHEATLEY.

The executive board of the Wheatley Parent-Teacher Association met in the school library Tuesday to complete plans for the year's work of the organization. Miss Agnes Motyka was appointed Bulletin chairman.

Miss Florence Mortimer extended an invitation to all parents to attend the educational assemblies held by the primary grades on Wednesday and the intermediates on Friday mornings. Friday the assembly was addressed by the president and cashier of the Mount Vernon Bank, due to the fact that Wheatley had first place in the city in thrift.

Parents have been visiting their children's grades during the morning lunch hour period, at which time a brief constructive program, planned according to standard school activities, is given.

Accompanied by their P.-T. A. grade mothers, Miss Motyka's first grade visited a nearby farm Tuesday to enable them to start on their new class activity.

The next meeting of the association will be held Tuesday at 8 o'clock in the school auditorium. A representative from the Public Library will lead the members through "Book Lore Lane," after which there will be general discussion on literature.

News Notes of Y. W. C. A.

Loyal Order of Moose

The regular schedule of meetings has been resumed by Columbia Lodge, being the second and fourth Tuesday evenings in each month, at Moose Hall, 1414 I street northwest. The last meeting, Tuesday, was largely attended and marked the opening of the fall and winter activities of the lodge. Past Dictators Green and Lanahan made stirring addresses, outlining plan for a progressive membership drive.

The temporary regulations for the restoration of lapsed members, sanctioned and adopted at the recent forty-fourth annual convention in Cleveland, are now in force and it is hoped that all old members of the order now in arrears will take advantage of this unusual opportunity.

Past Dictator T. J. Lanahan, the delegate of Columbia Lodge to the Cleveland convention, presented his formal report. An outstanding feature, as disclosed by recent audit, is the fact that the supreme lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, now has a net worth exceeding $26,000,000, cash in banks, $2,636,940, with investments and savings accounts totaling $4,846,919. The financial affairs of the Washington local lodge also are in splendid condition.

The next meeting of Columbia Lodge will be held on Tuesday evening, November 8, at 8 o'clock.

Complete arrangements have been made by Benning Council for the United States flag presentation exercises to be held this afternoon at 2:30 p. m. at the Edmonston Public School located in Edmonston, Md., in Prince Georges County. Members of the State council executive board will be present to assist Benning Council, who will present the flag. All members of the fraternity and their friends are invited to participate.

J. Morgan Read Council met in Star Hall, Mount Rainier, Md., Friday evening and was called to order by Councilman Howard A. Milor. Further consideration was given the reports on revision of the by-laws submitted by Chairman George L. Tait. A large delegation from Star-Spangled Banner Council was headed by State Chaplain George L. Myers, State Conductor Garrett, State Outside Sentinel Harmon, Deputy State Councilor D. L. Smith and Councilor Boyd. Potomac Valley-Forge Council was represented by Past State Councilor E. G. Beck and Chaplain Schutt. At the conclusion of the business session the members were entertained by vocal selections by State Chaplain G. L. Myers and musical selections by the Star-Spangled Banner Council Orchestra.

Benning Council met Monday evening and was called to order by Acting Councilor Thomas Ingels. The degrees were conferred upon James N. Keyser, Roy Roberts, Martin White and Otis Brown. Two applications for membership were presented. The membership drive team with Capt. George Anderson has now gained the lead in obtaining new members. The guests of the evening were Past State Councilor F. D. Seiffert and E. H. Harmon, of Eagle Council. Members were urged to attend the flag presentation exercises to be held today at 2:30 p. m. at the Edmonston Public School, Edmonston, Md. Speakers of the evening were Deputy State Councilor W. H. McClung, State Treasurer R. W. Hawkins, J. R. Glenn, Arthur Austin and others.

Anacostia Council met in Masonic Temple, Fourteenth and U streets southeast, Monday evening and was convened with Councilor Little presiding. Plans were made for this council's participation in the Fraternal Day parade, which was held Thursday evening. One application for membership was received. Two applicants were elected into membership. The council had as its guest Member Wray, of Brunswick, Ga. Speakers of the evening were Past Councilor Samuel Hubacher and Messrs. Baggott, Thomas and Wray.

Reno Council was honored by a fraternal visit from a large number of members of Star-Spangled Banner Council on October 17. Musical selections and vocal talent were presented by the visitors.

Red Men.

Great Sachem Jacque Heidenheimer, with the board of great chiefs, will make an official visitation to Idaho Tribe Tuesday evening. Past Great Sachem Alva E. Thompson will deliver an address. The tribe appointed Past Great Sachem William B. Garner and Past Sachems George W. Lee and William H. Wells on the good-of-the-order committee.

The Thanksgiving services of the order will be held on Sunday evening, November 27, at the North Carolina Avenue M. P. Church. Past Great Sachem William Nally will be in charge of these services.

Past Great Sachems William B. Garner and Frank Seiffert represented the Great Council of the District of Columbia at the Great Council of Delaware held at Laurel, Del., last Wednesday, October 26.

A school of instruction will be held at Logan Tribe Thursday, November 3. Great Instructor Thomas H. Dennis requests the presence of tribal instructors.

Past Sachem Ralph Pimes, chairman of the great council jewel committee, announces the committee will hold a series of dances, the dates selected to be given at a later day.

The newly elected great junior sagamore of the Great Council of the United States, J. A. Kapps, will visit the tribes and councils of this city in the month of December.

Great Junior Sagamore Wilfred E. Lawson and Past Pocahontas Mrs. Louise Moriarty, respectively chairmen for the Improved Order of Red Men and Degree of Pocahontas George Washington Bicentennial committee, were guests at a banquet tendered them by the great council Friday for the impressive showing made with their earnest efforts by both branches of the order in the fraternal parade.

I. O. O. F.

Tuesday evening of this week Grand Master Thomas C. Mettler, accompanied by his official staff, will officially pay his annual visit to Golden Rule Lodge, meeting in Odd Fellows Temple. Golden Rule Lodge is the home lodge of Past Grand Master and Past Grand Representative James H. Crew, who has had an active participation in lodge work for many years. He served as treasurer of the lodge for over 30 years, and just recently resigned. Golden Rule invites all members of the order to be present on this occasion. All subordinate lodges are expected to be represented.

All branches of the order, including the grand bodies as well as the various subordinate bodies, will attend divine services next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Alban's Cathedral. The services will be held in the great choir, which has just been completed, and as an organization the Odd Fellows will be the first fraternity to hold services in this newly completed part of the famous cathedral. The services will be broadcast. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will deliver a special message. Grand Chaplain Ashlan F. Harlan, of the Grand Lodge, states that arrangements have been completed and hopes to see every branch of the order well represented. It is expected that there will be an attendance of at least 750 present. All subordinate, Encampment and Rebekah bodies are expected to turn out in full membership attendance of their respective lodges.

Grand Master Mettler and his associate officers accompanied Sister President Belle C. Thomson and her officers on the occasion of her official visit to Esther Rebekah Lodge Monday evening. The lodge room was filled to overflowing with the members of the various subordinate and Rebekah lodges. The lodge room was decorated with leaves, flowers, &c. and a Halloween atmosphere was prevalent in all parts of the room. Pumpkins, goblins, ghosts, cats and what not were everywhere. The official part of the visitation was promptly dispensed with and following this, Sister Gelman, member of the lodge and warden of the Rebekah assembly, on behalf of the lodge presented Sister Thomas, president of the Rebekah assembly, a large decorated pumpkin, which proved upon opening of same to be a beautiful electric kitchen clock.

Likewise the grand master was presented with a gift inclosed in a large pumpkin, presented to him by Sister Mary Cummings on behalf of the lodge. Sister Edna McIntosh, on behalf of the lodge presented Sister Marie E. Spekenheir, the instructress of the lodge, with a beautiful gift. On behalf of the officers of the Rebekah assembly, Sister Amie F. Glossbrenner, vice president of the assembly, presented Sister Marian Gelman with a beautiful basket of flowers.

Addresses were made by the president, Sister Thomson, Grand Master Thomas C. Mettler and Grand Patriarch Samuel F. Frye. Lieut. James E. Griffith spoke on behalf of the canton and for the captain, Alexander L. Hjortsberg, in his absence Sister Lady President Thomas C. Hellmuth of the ladies' auxiliary, also spoke. Following the official part of the ceremony, the lodge closed and the room was turned over to the entertainment committee, who took charge and presented a sketch in which Past Noble Grand Fannie Chaffee took the part of the witch and rendered a story through which goblins and ghosts participated.

Following the presentation, which was heartily enjoyed by all present, the members were led to the dining room, where decorations and foliage played an important part in the enjoyment of the bounteous refreshments served to all the tables.

Woman's Party.

Mrs. Andrew Stewart, vice chairman of the District of Columbia Council of the National Woman's Party, will preside this afternoon at a 4 o'clock tea to be given at Alva Belmont House, 144 B street northeast, in honor of Senor Dr. Don Luis Manuel Debayle, charge d'affaires of Nicaragua, and Senora Debayle.

Senor Debayle will lecture on the status of women in his country.

Mrs. Stewart has charge of the affair, in the absence of Mrs. Paul Linebarger, chairman. She is to be assisted by Mrs. Harry Moore Payne, Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel, Mrs. Easterday, Mrs. Lucia Hadley, Miss Marian Stewart and Miss Fanny Sevastos.

Miss Jane Wilson will sing.

TOLERANCE IN RANKS OF AMERICAN LEGION URGED BY COMMANDER BRISTOW

Virginia Department Head Explains Vote on Bonus

Tells Council in Alexandria He Cast His Ballot as He Thought Majority of Legionnaires in His Jurisdiction Desired Him to Do.

M. E. Bristow, of Richmond, commander of the American Legion, Department of Virginia, was the principal speaker at the Eighth District Council of that organization meeting on Tuesday, which included a short business session followed by a dinner at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria.

He urged tolerance in the ranks of the American Legion and spoke of his action at the national convention in Portland, Oreg., in September, when he voted in the affirmative on both the bonus and eighteenth amendment repeal. He said that at the department convention in Alexandria in August the vote was for the payment of the bonus when practicable, and when the vote was taken in Portland it had to be yes or no, and he voted as he thought the majority in Virginia would desire.

Commander Bristow referred to the statement of Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in Richmond in calling the American Legion the "American menace," saying his answer to Bishop Mouzon has been sent to the press, in which he calls him to account for such an unwarranted attack.

The meeting was presided over by G. Raymond King, commander of Alexandria Post; the invocation was by the Rev. N. A. Lineweaver, chaplain of the post; address of welcome by Dan S. Hollenga, business manager of the chamber of commerce, representing Mayor Edmund F. Ticer; response by John E. Haggerty, of Quantico, alternate district committeeman; address on child welfare work by Mrs. Richard B. English, department child welfare officer; song, Lawrence E. Roland, accompanied by Mrs. Anna Meeks; address, J. William May, president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce; address of rehabilitation, Harry G. Breckenridge, department executive committeeman; recitation, Miss Mary Lennon; address, Edmund H. Allen, Newington, Va., delegate to the Virginia General Assembly from Fairfax County; address, Robert Insko, vice commander of the Department of Virginia; address, W. Glenn Elliott, department adjutant; address, Commander Bristow, and song, Mrs. Margaret F. Bailey, president of the Alexandria American Legion Auxiliary, accompanied by Mrs. D. C. Book.

Service citations from the Department of Virginia were presented Maj. Edgar T. Hitch, manager of the Washington regional office, Veterans' Administration, and Dr. W. L. Kline, of the same office, in recognition of their help and service to the American Legion.

Commander Bristow presented to Howard L. Arnold, for Alexandria Post, the national citation for the most outstanding post in the State in community service. This is the third year in succession that the Alexandria post has carried off this honor. Williams-Thomas Post, colored, of Alexandria, was also awarded a citation for meritorious service.

John D. Crowley, chairman of the New England area, National Child Welfare Committee, was the guest of the local post and gave a short talk of greetings from that area.

AMERICAN LEGION.

GEORGE WASHINGTON POST.

The newly elected officers of George Washington Post have arranged a special program for the meeting Tuesday night at the clubhouse at 8 o'clock, with Commander Charles Demonet presiding. At the conclusion of the program refreshments will be served.

Members of the post are requested by Commander Demonet to participate in the parade on Armistice Day, which will start from Fifteenth and E streets at 9 a. m. The Legionnaires of the Department of the District of Columbia will take part in the dedication of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at 11 o'clock, in Arlington National Cemetery.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the members of the post will join with other organizations in the services to be held in honor of Armistice Day and the late President Woodrow Wilson, who was a member of George Washington Post by reason of being commander in chief of the military forces of the United States during the World War. A wreath will be placed on the tomb of the late President at the Cathedral of St. Alban by Commander Demonet. The colors of the post will be on either side of the tomb during the ceremonies.

The death during the past week of Past Commander Charles Jesse Painter has removed from the ranks of the post one of its most loyal and active members. He was elected a member of the post in 1921, and after serving in various offices in the post was elected commander in 1928.

The Rev. Howard E. Snyder, post chaplain, officiated at the services which were held last Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the post clubhouse, 1441 Rhode Island avenue. The clubhouse was filled to overflowing with friends and veterans, while many handsome floral tributes were banked in the spacious assembly hall. The pallbearers were from Masonic and veteran circles and included Frank Kelsey, Frank Feller, Past Commander J. O'Connor Roberts, of Stuart Walcott Post, and Past Commanders Howard S. Fisk, Charles O. Shaw and Bernard C. McGee, of George Washington Post. At Arlington National Cemetery the services were conducted by Acacia Lodge, with a brief prayer by Post Chaplain Snyder.

National Capitol Post.

John Neterko, who served with 320th Machine Gun Company, Eightieth Division, War with Germany, was obligated. Paul J. Christian, Second U. S. Volunteer Infantry, War with Spain, was elected to membership.

Dan Campbell, past commander of Equality-Walter Reed Post; Dr. Victor Cercell, past commander of Front Line Post, and Bernard S. Bladen, commander of Treasury Post, were guests of the evening. Past Department Commander Dr. Joseph F. Beattie entertained the post.

Federal Post.

Federal Post held its monthly meeting at Thomas Circle Club last Monday. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Commander, Harry F. Burke; senior vice commander, C. W. Burden; junior vice commander, George L. Parker; chaplain, V. O. Anderson; surgeon, Edward J. Sweney; post advocate, Charles Crowell; officer of the day, Thomas L. Clement.

Dan Campbell, past commander of Equality-Walter Reed Post, gave an interesting talk on the coming Armistice Day jubilee. Department Inspector Belt addressed the post on relief. After the business meeting the post was given a Halloween supper by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

All post officers will be installed at a joint installation at the Press Club by the department commander Tuesday night.

Herbert L. Edmonds Post.

Herbert L. Edmonds Post met at the Hamilton Hotel Thursday with Senior Vice Commander Owen Ryan in the chair. After a short business session some of the members of the post attended the banquet in honor of the commander in chief, Admiral Robert E. Coontz, U. S. N., retired.

Clarence R. Edwards Post.

At the monthly meeting October 21, the annual election of officers was held and the following were elected: Byron G. Carson, commander; David B. Herman, senior vice commander; John Caswell, jr., junior vice commander; Almon F. Rockwell, quartermaster; Harold De Couroy, advocate; Nathan D. Golden, chaplain; Maurice F. White, historian; William G. Nicholson, officer of the day; George J. Moran, surgeon; Brig. Gen. Pelham D. Glassford and Gen. George S. Simonds, trustees. Installation of officers will be conducted at the regular November meeting.

Harold De Courcy, of 321 Dorset avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., formerly of Lawrence, Mass., who served with the U. S. Army Ambulance Service in France, was elected to membership and was obligated.

Members interested in the organization of a bowling team should contact Senior Vice Commander Byron G. Carson, National 6788.

Advance Post.

This post's bowling team challenges all bowling teams in the District of Columbia.

The election of officers was held and they will be installed at the National Press Club, Tuesday night.

Potomac Post.

Potomac Post met Thursday evening at the Northeast Temple with Commander Krichton presiding.

The department commander, O. W. Hollingsworth, Department Trustee J. A. Praether and chairman of the joint installation committee, Dr. Victor Cercell, were present and addressed the post.

National Capitol Auxiliary.

National Capitol Auxiliary met at Pythian Temple Tuesday with President Gladys La Scola presiding.

Many of the members congratulated the newly appointed chief of staff for the District of Columbia auxiliaries, Mrs. Katherine Lawson.

Mrs. Kean Miller, national legislative officer, and her daughter, Mrs. Clifton Brode, president of Federal Auxiliary, and Mrs. Lohman, secretary of Federal Auxiliary, were guests of the evening.

National Capitol Auxiliary Bowling Team played Front Line Auxiliary Friday evening. National Capitol Auxiliary wishes to meet any auxiliary team.

Costello Drum Corps.

The Vincent B. Costello Drum Corps participated in the fraternal parade Thursday and led the patriotic division, composed of the Grand Army of the Republic and Women's Auxiliaries, the Spanish-American War Veterans, the Sons of Union Veterans, the Sons of the American Revolution, Daughters of the Confederacy and the American Legion.

An active part will be taken in the Halloween celebration and parade and appropriate costumes have been secured for this occasion.

Plans are being perfected to participate in the Armistice Day parade in conjunction with Costello Post and also to have a representation of the Drum Corps at the services in Washington Cathedral at the tomb of Woodrow Wilson. Consideration is being given to an invitation from Arlington Post, of Clarendon, to participate in the Armistice Day celebration in Clarendon.

G. G. Barclay, Simon C. Forinas, William D. Buck, Emil Staedtler and Robert A. Milburn have recently been admitted as members of the Drum Corps.

Lincoln Post.

The executive committee of the Lincoln Post met at the home of the post commander, Comrade Porter L. Bush, Monday.

The proposed winter activities of the post were discussed, among them a card party and dance in December and the annual banquet tentatively set for Saturday evening, February 11, 1933.

Plans for Lincoln Post to participate in the Armistice Day exercises were explained by Commander Bush, who urged all members of the post to gather around the post colors near the Washington Monument at 9 a. m. Friday, November 11, and march in the parade to Arlington National Cemetery.

The next meeting will be held in the Masonic Hall, Fourteenth and Kenyon streets northwest, at 8 p. m. November 10.

Auxiliary Notes.

The executive committee of the Department of the District of Columbia met on October 20, in the Board of Trade suite, with the department president, Mrs. E. E. Corwin, presiding.

Mrs. Joseph H. Mims, national executive committeewoman, gave a report on the national convention held in Portland, Oreg. Miss Gertrude Bacon, secretary of the District of Columbia delegation, made a report on the States dinner.

The Americanism chairman, Mrs. B. A. Y. Werthner, outlined work planned for her committee and urged all units to participate in the Armistice Day program. Mrs. William D. Mulkey, chairman of membership, has offered a membership trophy to be awarded at the next department convention, the basis of award to be decided upon at a later date by her committee. Mrs. Rose E. Levy, trophies and awards chairman, suggested a supply of American Legion Auxiliary emblem stickers for use on automobiles be obtained and sold to auxiliary members.

Mrs. A. N. Schroeder made a report on child welfare work done since the last meeting, and Mrs. Marion Martin reported on publicity. Finance Chairman Miss Mabel Staub is planning a card party to be held for the benefit of the department in the near future. Mrs. Dorothy Lodge, radio chairman, has arranged for a series of broadcasts for the American Legion Auxiliary through Station WOL.

The department president has appointed Mrs. Mae Loveless, of Vincent B. Costello Unit, chairman of war memorials, which appointment was ratified by the executive committee.

Mrs. Corwin is planning to attend the president-secretary conference in Indianapolis on November 19 and 20.

The first of a series of monthly programs was broadcast last Sunday over Station WOL. The department chairman of radio, Mrs. Dorothy Lodge, introduced the program and spoke of its purpose—the presenting to the public of the ideals and purposes of the American Legion Auxiliary. The department president, Mrs. Corwin, gave a talk. Mrs. Ruby McQuarrie, concert pianist and instructor of music, rendered musical numbers. Mrs. Lodge announces there will be a broadcast for the American Legion Auxiliary over Station WOL every fourth Sunday.

Sergeant Jasper Post.

Following an extended discussion at the meeting on Thursday, held at the Thomas Circle Club, the members of Sergeant Jasper Post voted unfavorably on a resolution proposing to amend the constitution, authorizing an executive committee. The annual election of officers will be held on November 10.

The post voted to subscribe for a box for the Bicentennial Armistice Day ball to be held at the Mayflower Hotel, November 11. Members serving on the ball committee in charge of this event include Col. John R. Thompson, Capt. William P. Kerschner, Past Department Commander F. G. Fraser and Maj. Thomas J. Fralley.

8 and 40.

La Societe des Huit Chapeaux et Quarante Femmes visited Mount Alto Hospital on Monday evening. Cherio Chairman Florence Beuchley and Vice Chairman Janet McRae presented a program for the patients. Bingo was played and prizes awarded. The Hawaiian Duo from the Honolulu Conservatory of Music contributed toward the success of the evening. Refreshments, typical of the coming Halloween season were served.

Partners are looking forward to the surprises in store for them promised by Entertainment Chairman Edna McIntosh and her committee. Chapeau Passe Emily Carey, now vice commander of the department of the American Legion, is visiting all legion posts at their installations, assisting in the ceremony. The next social meeting of Salon No. 14 will be on Wednesday at Partner Mildred Eckles' home, 1402 Girard street northwest. Chapeau Deseez requests all partners attending this affair to notify Partner Eckles in advance.

Takoma Park Post.

On Thursday Mrs. John Lind and Mrs. N. D. Guerrier will be the hostesses at a card party to be given at the Philadelphia Avenue Public School.

These card parties are given primarily for the purpose of getting the people of Takoma Park acquainted with one another, and also to help defray the expenses connected with the acquisition by the post of its colors. The presentation of these colors to the post will take place at the Armistice Day celebration to be held at the community center the evening of November 11.

Alexandria Post.

Arrangements are being completed for a series of dances and entertainments to be given by the Alexandria Post and the Drum and Bugle Corps, according to announcement by H. B. Lemon, chairman of the general committee.

The first dance will be a Halloween costume ball to be held tomorrow at the Virginia Public Service Auditorium. There are to be prizes for the costumes. The Drum and Bugle Corps is one of the leading Virginia musical organizations, having appeared throughout Virginia, District of Columbia, and Maryland at many outstanding patriotic functions, the last of which was the dedication at the war memorial in Richmond.

The series of dances are being given to raise funds for the convention to be held next year. Assisting the chairman are the following committees: J. Stewart Kimball, secretary; Harry N. Jones, treasurer; Messrs. George Wilsey, J. Stewart Kimball, G. Raymond King, H. B. Lemon, floor committee; Howard Arnold and Herbert Blunt, publicity committee; J. Harry Bettis, ticket committee; E. S. Williams, printing; J. J. Broun, patrons' committee, assisted by Messrs. J. T. Preston, Marc Freeman, J. Leonard Gibbs, Joseph Starry, Robert Webber, J. H. Berman, Peter Quirk and Christopher Newton. Invitations have been sent to veteran organizations, civic and social leaders of Alexandria, Richmond and Washington.

Stuart Walcott Post.

Stuart Walcott Post met on Tuesday in the rooms of the Washington Board of Trade. Senior Vice Commander Charles Curtiss presiding in the absence of the commander, Dr. Ray F. Guynn, on account of illness.

Six applications for membership were accepted and the following new members were sworn in: Arsenio Ralon, Raymond C. Hill, Byron R. Weideman, Frank B. Hill, Louis Green, Joseph Terranova. Comrade Ralon, who was brought in by Comrade Samuel Rose as a new member, is a member of the National Symphony Orchestra, and entertained the meeting with a selection of pieces on the violin. Nominations for officers for the coming year were made.

Comrade Rose, national radio officer of the American Legion, announced that the national headquarters and the Department of the District of Columbia headquarters are making arrangements for the largest Armistice Day program in the history of the legion. This program will include a parade beginning at 9 a. m. on that day; rededication of the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, placing wreaths on the tomb by the president, accompanied by the Secretaries of War and Navy, and also by the Diplomatic Corps of Washington; music by the Marine Band; an address by the national commander of the American Legion, and possible addresses by prominent officials of the Government. The National Broadcasting Co, and the Columbia Broadcasting Co. have allotted to the legion on Armistice Day the use of their radio facilities between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock. Stuart Walcott Post expects to take an active part in this program.

Action on the organizing of a fife and bugle corps and a vocal quartet among members of the post, as proposed by Comrade Rose, a special program of various forms of entertainment as suggested by Comrade Silverberg, and the matter of uniforms for all members of the post, was deferred until a later date.

Stuart Walcott Post will sponsor this year a football team under the management of the athletic officer, Dixie B. Guynn.

U. S. S. Jacob Jones Post.

The first meeting of the new advisory council was held on October 20 at the home of the commander, Mary Z. Weide. Plans were formulated for a very interesting and constructive program for the coming year.

The commander urged all the comrades to save or collect any clothing that they can, that we may be able to turn it over to our needy families.

The post is organizing a bowling team, and it is contemplating to challenge the women of the V. F. W. and other organizations in town.

Stephen P. McGroarty Post.

Stephen P. McGroarty Post met at Sears Roebuck Art Galleries October 21. The chief order of business was the annual election and installation of officers. Frank G. Howell was elected as commander. By the withdrawal of Comrades D. W. Close and Egbert E. Corwin, the position of first vice commander went to Alex P. Engen. Comrade Alfred Simon was the only nominee for second vice commander and he was elected to that position. Other officers elected were Oslin L. Bush, finance officer; Edward P. Davenport, sergeant at arms; David W. Close, quartermaster; Dr. J. Chester Brady, surgeon; Lewis H. Guenther, chaplain; Omer P. Anderson and Francis R. Bissell, color bearers, and Egbert E. Corwin, historian.

Past Department Commander Fred G. Fraser installed the new officers and made an interesting talk on the activities of the National Economy League. He also complimented retiring Commander Guenther for his cooperation and work during his year as commander, Past Commander Joseph J. Idler for his work on the department veterans preference committee, and Past Commander Egbert E. Corwin for his efforts and success in putting about 500 members of the American Legion in uniform during his term as department uniform officer.

Comrade Zaontz was accepted as a new member by transfer from the Kenneth B. Nash Post.

AMERICAN WAR MOTHERS.

A letter was received by Mrs. Zell Weaver Oatley, president of the State Organization American War Mothers, asking all War Mothers of the several chapters to participate in the services at the grave of Henry Landsburg on Sunday, October 23, to witness the unveiling of the monument in memory of "Call Me Henry." The District Chapter was there with both the large flag and banner presented to that chapter several years ago.

A number of the Bicentennial Chapter were in attendance. Songs were sung by the trio from Landsburg's store, addresses were also made by ministers of different denominations. Henry Landsburg expressed his devotion and affection for the War Mothers of the District when Mrs. George Gordon Seibold was president, at a banquet given at the Roosevelt Hotel by presenting them with their flag and banner.

Among those present were the flying ace of France, Capt. Charles Nungesser, who has since lost his life in an attempt to cross the Atlantic; Gilbert Gable, the producer of "Sky Rocket;" Frederick Stevens, who served on the Italian front with the Red Cross; Dr. William Seeley and Lieut. Charles Reimer, of the American Legion.

"Call Me Henry" will always be remembered by the War Mothers of the District of Columbia. Mrs. Sue Sharp, of the Bicentennial Chapter, last week organized a chapter of War Mothers in Wheeling, W. Va., which will be known as Wheeling, No. 1.

This chapter was begun with 29 members and Mrs. Sharp will organize two more chapters in the near future. The Bicentennial installed its new officers on Friday evening at the Hamilton, preceded by a banquet. Mrs. Sarah Deeds was the installing officer.

The chapters of the District placed a wreath on the statue of John Paul Jones on Navy Day.

The Robert E. Coontz Chapter, American War Mothers, will meet at the Willard Hotel, Tuesday evening at 8 p. m. Officers for the ensuing year will be nominated and elected.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS.

All posts of the department of the District of Columbia will be installed at the National Press Club Tuesday night. Commander in Chief Robert E. Coontz, admiral, U. S. N., retired; Col. James Van Zandt, junior vice commander in chief, and the national council member of the Fourth District, George Marshall Jones, will attend.

Mrs. Kean Miller, national legislative officer, will install the new chief of staff for the district, Mme. Katherine Lawson, after which the chief of staff will install National Capital Post Auxiliary, Equality Walter Reed Auxiliary, Follow-Me Auxiliary and Front Line Auxiliary.

Gold badges will be presented to several of the outgoing post commanders, also to the madam presidents of the several auxiliaries.

Band, Drum and Bugle Corps.

The Overseas Band, Drum and Bugle Corps will hold its rehearsal at the National Guard Armory Wednesday.

Armistice Jubilee Committee.

Plans for the mammoth Armistice Jubilee in the Washington Auditorium the night of November 11 by the District of Columbia Department, are being rapidly carried forward. Every indication points to another successful affair. The fifteen local posts are lending whole-hearted support to the committee. Each post has already selected its candidate for the title of "Madamoiselle from Armentierres" and much friendly rivalry is being created.

Department Quartermaster Walter P. Boehm has been named assistant to the director general of the jubilee. He has already taken hold of his job and made successful contacts for many of the big features that will be on exhibition at the jubilee. Leon Brusiloff, well known musical director, is lining up a pretentious program of entertainment for the big stage show. His music masters will furnish the snappy music in the "Moulin Rouge," one of the big features of the jubilee.

Walter Perry Johnson, baseball's idol, who is doing his bit for the V. F. W. relief fund by acting as director general of the jubilee, has announced to the committee that he will donate several hundred of the Walter Johnson Baseball Games, to be sold at the Auditorium in connection with the jubilee. Nick Altrock, comedian of the Washington Baseball Club, will aid in the sale of these games. Proceeds will all go to the V. F. W. Relief Fund.

Capt. Herbert Borchardt, in charge of the floor committee, will have 150 M. P.'s and Gendarmes on hand to handle the large crowd expected.

DISABLED VETERANS.

VETERANS OF NAVY GIVEN PROMOTION

Warrant Officers and Enlisted Men Retired Advanced to Grade Held in War.

Twenty-six local warrant officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps now on the retired list have been notified by the Navy Department that they have been advanced to the highest commissioned, warrant or enlisted grade held by them during the Spanish-American War or the World War.

The promotions on the retired lists of these men has been made in accordance with the provisions of an act of Congress of May 7, 1932.

Enlisted men in the Fleet Naval Reserve and the Fleet Marine Reserve who served as commissioned or warrant officers during the war will not become eligible for advancement on the retired list under the Congressional act until they have been transferred to the retired list.

Promotions for 337.

A total of 337 men throughout the country have been notified of the changes. The benefits accruing to the officers is that they will be entitled to wear the uniform of their new rank, use the title, and they will be entitled to the additional courtesy due an officer of their grade. It is probable that they will be entitled to burial in the plot set aside for officers of their grade at Arlington, but this point has not been definitely ruled on as yet.

The local enlisted men on the retired list of the Navy receiving the advances to commissions of warrant ranks are as follows: Solomon Berkowich, gunner; John P. Cooney, chief pharmacist; Charles J. Fitting, gunner; William Johnston, chief boatswain; Louis Johrden, acting pay clerk; Ernest C. Marheineke, lieutenant; Leo Mead, lieutenant; Frank D. Mears, chief pharmacist; Thomas E. Orr, lieutenant; Joseph W. Rabbitt, gunner; John W. Scanlin, lieutenant, junior grade; Benjamin Schooler, acting pay clerk; Alexander O. Schory, lieutenant, junior grade; William F. Sheridan, chief pharmacist.

List of Local Men.

The list of retired warrant and noncommissioned officers of the Marine Corps advanced to their highest wartime rank in accordance with the Congressional act is as follows: Edward A. Callan, second lieutenant; Patrick J. Carlos, quartermaster clerk; James L. Culleton, second lieutenant; Charles Kaiser, quartermaster sergeant; Michael Maloney, gunner; Spencer N. Phillips, first lieutenant; Olin Roakes, quartermaster clerk; Ollie M. Schriver, gunner; William Snell, quartermaster clerk; William E. Springer, second lieutenant; Herman G. Stroschein, quartermaster clerk; Daniel Sweeney, gunner; Wade Webb, quartermaster sergeant.

OFFICERS ENROLLED IN G. U. SEMINARS

World Political and Economic Developments Studied in Foreign School.

A score of Naval, Marine and Army officers, whose duties require them to keep in close touch with the latest world political and economic developments have enrolled in special seminars being conducted at the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

The Navy heads the list with sixteen officers in attendance, while the Marine Corps and Army are each represented by two.

All the officers are stationed here on departmental duty. They have enrolled in the seminars dealing with the armed intervention policy of the United States, Russian affairs, economic planning and political developments in the Far East.

Col. Philip Cole, of the General Staff of the Army, is attending the seminars conducted by Dr. James Brown Scott and Dr. Thomas H. Healy on recognition and armed intervention policies, and the Russian seminar conducted by Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J. Maj. Philip Faymonville is specializing in Russian affairs. From the Marine Corps, Capt. T. C. Brooks is enrolled in the armed intervention seminar and Lieut. J. M. McHugh is in the seminar on the Far East. Both officers are detailed for duty with the Naval Intelligence Bureau.

The Naval officers enrolled at the Georgetown school are Lieut. R. H. Mattox and Lieut. Comdr. P. S. Theiss, of the Bureau of Navigation, in armed intervention; Lieut. Comdr. E. H. McKenzie, Lieut. Comdr. P. A. Caro and Lieut. Comdr. G. A. Shattuck, of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, and Lieut. Comdr. R. V. Miller and Lieut. Comdr. J. W. Naval Reserve Corps Notes

By ENSIGN JACK STAHL, U. S. N. R.

Ensign William Simpson Carroll has applied for transfer from the First Naval District (Boston) to the aviation section of the Naval Reserve of the District of Columbia. Ensign Carroll has been attending drills with the aviation section for the past several weeks.

Chief Signalman Joseph J. Norwicki, who is a reserve on active duty under Lieut. (J. G.) Malcolm Cloukey, is his assistant in the training and instruction of the enlisted personnel. Chief Signalman Norwicki has had long experience in naval activities, having served eighteen years on active duty, six years of which have been devoted to actual reserve work. He served on the now decommissioned U. S. S. Indiana, Minnesota, Louisiana, Connecticut, Kansas, Utah, several smaller vessels and also on the U. S. S. Idaho.

A number of officers of the Aviation Reserve are connected with the various commercial aircraft corporations, thus keeping abreast with all new activities in this field. This factor is a very big help to these men and increases their usefulness in Aviation Reserve activities. Lieut. Comdr. Clarence H. Schildhauer and Lieut. (J. G.) M. D. Johnson are associated with the Martin Aviation Corporation and Lieut. (J. G.) Robert L. Earle is connected with the Curtiss-Wright Corporation.

Lieut. (J. G.)) Lloyd V. Berkner, of the Aviation Reserve, served with Admiral Byrd on his trip to the Antarctic in the position of radio officer. A vast amount of valuable knowledge was gained by this officer on the expedition and his training is of much value to him in his work with the Reserve.

The weekly drill of the battalion was held on Thursday instead of Monday, as is the custom. The change was made so that the reserves could participate in the Navy Day program at the Navy Yard. The battalion was inspected by Lieut. W. F. Hinckley the inspector-instructor of the Naval Reserve of the District of Columbia.

Navy Department Lets $161,300 in Contracts

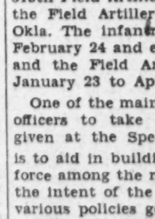
The Bureau of Yards and Docks of the Navy Department last week announced the award of contracts totaling $161,300 for various construction works.

These included a contract of $79,800 awarded to the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., of Washington, for equipment at Boston, Mass., and Puget Sound.

RESERVE CORPS NOTES

By Staff Sergt. A. S. DE AGRO.

Col. W. W. McCammon, the senior instructor of the Washington Reserve units, has directed commanding officers of the 320th Infantry, 313th Field Artillery, and 315th Field Artillery to select and submit the names of reserve officers assigned to their regiments who desire to pursue the three months course of instruction at Service Schools of their arm of the service. Commanding officers have been instructed to exercise great care in the selection of officers to attend the schools so as to insure satisfactory completion, and the preference should, as far as practicable, be given to those applicants who, as a result of extension school work, appear to be best prepared to pursue the courses effectively. The 320th Infantry has been allotted one principal and one alternate for the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., while the 313th Field Artillery has been given one principal and the 315th Field Artillery one alternate for the Field Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla. The infantry course will begin February 24 and end on May 24, 1933, and the Field Artillery course from January 23 to April 22, 1933.



COL. McCAMMON.

One of the main reasons in ordering officers to take the special courses given at the Special Service Schools is to aid in building up an instructor force among the reserve officers. It is the intent of the regulations and the various policies governing the reserve corps that the Organized Reserves shall be self-supporing in carrying out their own instructions. It is readily seen that no better ground-work to carry out this intent can be obtained than that which is given at these schools. Each regimental commander will give his personal attention to making the selection with the idea of using the officer selected for the benefit of his regiment when he returns from the school. The selection of officers this year for the Fort Benning and Fort Sill School course will be limited to lieutenants only.

A report from the War Department, showing the subcourses completed, number of students completing subcourses and the hours of instruction given in all line corps areas and the three departments, shows the Third Corps Area, of which the District of Columbia is a part, to stand third in the number of students completing subcourses, fifth in the number of subcourses completed and seventh in the number of hours of instruction given. The numbers shown in the report include all students, members of the National Guard, of the Regular Army, C. M. T. C. and civilians who are seeking appointments in the Officers' Reserve Corps, as well as members of the Organized Reserves.

The corps area commander, Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, comments on this report as follows: "While the results attained during the school year 1931-32 in this corps area are very gratifying and show a decided increase in the number of students completing subcourses, total number of subcourses completed and total number of hours of instruction over the preceding year, it is believed that greater effort, with more emphasis being placed on this method of instruction on part of officers in charge of subordinate extension schools and their staff instructors for the ensuing year will result in a further increase in results attained. * * * It is, therefore, desired that steps be taken to insure a maximum of effort by all instructors to create greater interest in this method of instruction for the future."

Students are urged to complete their subcourses as soon as possible after receiving them from the subordinate extension schools. It is expected that the extension school work for this year will progress as it has in the past; that same or a greater amount of interest will be maintained in the work; that the same or greater desire on part of the students to qualify themselves for promotion will exist; that officers who are contemplating attending summer camps next year and who are already qualified for promotion to the next higher grade will be anxious to refresh their memories on matters of tactics and technique that they will be called upon to know, and that, therefore, the above objective will be by no means difficult to obtain.

Five conferences will be held at Reserve headquarters this week, as follows: The 428th Infantry will meet tomorrow and the 320th Infantry on Tuesday. Col. Charles B. Moore will conduct the conferences on organization of the infantry battalion and advance guard, conventional signs and use of the Humphrey scale. The course in elementary ballistics and dispersion will be continued by Maj. John M. McDowell for the meeting of Field Artillery officers Wednesday evening. Lessons 6 to 9, inclusive, Field Artillery extension course, 20-6, will be covered by Maj. McDowell. Thursday Maj. H. C. Dagley will conduct the conference for the District cavalry officers. His subject will be "Training Management." District medical officers will meet Friday. Maj. Henry L. Krafft, Medical Corps, in charge of instruction of Medical Corps Reserve officers of the District of Columbia, will conduct the conference. "Flashes of Action" will be shown, in addition to the lecture to be given by Maj. Krafft.

NEW NAVY HOSPITAL WILL BE IMMENSE

Bids for Philadelphia Structure Will Be Opened on December 5.

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Ernest Lee Jahncke, announced last week that the drawings and specifications for the new Naval Hospital in Philadelphia would be completed and issued to prospective bidders on November 7. Bids for the construction of the hospital will be opened in the Navy Department, Washington, on December 5.

The architects for the group of buildings which will comprise the new hospital are Walter T. Karchner and Livingston Smith, of Philadelphia. They have been cooperating with the Bureau of Yards and Docks, Navy Department, for the past fifteen months in preparing specifications and drawings.

The site of the hospital will embrace twenty-two acres, facing the present League Island Park in South Philadelphia. It is bounded by Pattison avenue, Sixteenth street, Nineteenth street and Hartranft street. The architectural group will be composed of the main hospital building, with a capacity of 660 beds, including wards and single rooms, quarters for fifty nurses, quarters for 200 hospital corpsmen, a large garage, four quarters for officers, a greenhouse and a film storage building. The buildings will contain approximately 300 baths, utility and washrooms, and the latest development in heating and ventilation will be incorporated in the project.

The main building will be one of the largest hospital structures in that section of the country, and its dimensions will be: from east to west, 415 feet; from north to south, 328 feet, and its central portion will have a height of 200 feet. The roof area of this building will be devoted to six sun terraces, five of them to be approximately 25 by 100 feet and the sixth to be 12 by 126 feet.

The solaria, which will be a distinctive feature of the building, will face the south. These will be constructed almost entirely of aluminum, as will the prominent main entrance feature, three stories in height, in the central portion.

Mississippi Butter Industry Gaining

Farmers Overcoming Depression With Creamery Products.

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 29.—Mississippi farmers are paving their way out of the depression with butter. During the first seven months of 1932 the State showed a greater percentage of increase in the production of creamery butter than any other State in the country, Department of Agriculture reports show.

The high peak of increase was shown in March, when the butter production of Mississippi creameries was 50 per cent above that of March, 1931. The percentage of increase for all months over that of corresponding months a year ago, are as follows:

January, 38 per cent; February, 45 per cent; March, 60 per cent; April, 47 per cent; May, 37 per cent; June, 44 per cent; July, 51 per cent.

LOYALTY OF NAVY PRAISED BY UPHAM

Devotion, Efficiency, Success Lauded by Admiral in Radio Address.

"The United States Navy, though not always as large or as well equipped as Navy men could wish, has maintained a standard of loyalty, devotion, efficiency and success unsurpassed in history," said Admiral Frank B. Upham, chief of the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department, in a recent radio talk on "The Birth of the United States Navy."

Admiral Upham spoke on the Columbia Broadcasting Company's Institute of Public Affairs. He was introduced by Frederick William Wile. Admiral Upham said in part:

"You will have noticed that our statesmen used every expedient to gain fair treatment of our trade and shipping before they resorted to a navy. The march of world events inexorably forced them to build a navy. With every passing decade other events forced them to maintain their navy. Finally all recognized that it was indispensable to both national security and national prosperity.

Revolution Had Navy.

"During the American Revolution the Continental Congress built an American Navy. Naturally such a force as we could then hastily organize had no chance to wrest the command of the sea from the powerful British navy, which for centuries had ruled the waves. Nevertheless, our marine committee had high hopes. For on April 29, 1777, these far-seeing statesmen, looking perhaps two centuries into the future, wrote letter No. 78 to the captains of certain hastily improvised naval vessels about to commence a cruise. 'The Navy is in its infancy,' they said, 'and a few brilliant strokes at this era would give it a credit and importance that would induce seamen from all parts to seek the employ, for nothing is more evident than that America has the means and must in time become the first maritime power in the world.'

"Our vessels generally gave a good account of themselves. Some of them, under Paul Jones and others, attacked the British in their home waters with sensational success. They delivered the 'brilliant strokes' on which the marine committee had placed so much importance. But eventually most of our ships were lost. There was no money to build more. So when the war ended, only three of our cruisers remained in service. By 1785 the last of these was sold. The American Navy was abolished. Forgotten was the hopeful prophecy of our marine committee.

American Navy Opposed.

"Although we owed our independence directly to French naval assistance, many Americans objected to an American Navy. Some thought that regular military services would threaten our republican institutions. Others believed that financial bankruptcy rendered the building of a navy at that time impracticable.

"While at first American opinion did not favor a navy, it was nearly unanimous in demanding a rapid expansion of our merchant shipping and our foreign trade. These activities, before the Revolution, had the assistance of the ever-active British diplomatic service, which in turn had the support of those mighty squadrons of the royal navy which Nelson so aptly called 'the best negotiators in Europe.' But, upon our becoming independent, the American merchants and ship owners had to look for protection to a handful of diplomats, who entirely lacked naval support.

"These diplomats—John Adams, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, John Jay and George Washington—were certainly skilled in their trade. But they had to face a double problem: The ruthless commercial competition of England and France on the one hand and the piratical attack of Algiers, Tunis and Tripoli on the other. While the brutalities of the Corsairs probably attracted the most public attention, the commercial decrees of the European power certainly dealt far heavier blows to the foreign trade upon which American prosperity then, as now, so largely depended."

Coaling Station in Japan Is Closed Up by Navy

An announcement at the War Department last week stated the coaling station at Nagasaki, Japan, has been closed and the officer in charge, Capt. Truman M. Martin, has been assigned to Tokyo as assistant military attache.

The station has been in use 30 years, but the advent of oil-burning transports has made it unnecessary.

Izzy Einstein, Rum Terror, Makes Debut as Novelist

Famous Speakeasy Nemesis Fails to Mention Partner, But Denies Jealousy; Four Sons Took Dictation Until They Got Dizzy, Author Admits.

New York, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—Izzy Einstein, most celebrated of the thousand-and-one sleuths created by prohibition, has stepped back into public life. This time as an author.

Einstein, summarizing and rhapsodizing his ludicrous but efficient career as "prohibition agent No. 1," wrote the book himself, with the aid of his four sons.

"I dictated to them," he said. "When one got dizzy, then I'd start dictating to another."

In 1927, when Izzy was still in the prohibition service and making speakeasy proprietors shiver at the possibility of discovering that a potted palm or a Russian grand duke was really Izzy in disguise, publishers approached him to write a book. Immediately the press and the public hailed it. Then the prohibition department stepped in and said Izzy couldn't write it while he was in the service.

Today when the Frederick A. Stokes Co. announced publication of "Prohibition Agent No. 1" there was hardly a ripple. Only four reporters appeared for the "literary salon" staged by the publishers.

"What good is it to be famous yet when they forget you so soon?" Izzy wanted to know.

Izzy said he had discovered how fleeting was fame when he began passing out books to political figures. President Hoover's secretary wrote the President couldn't see him. Other political figures "feared" they would be too busy. Henry Ford, however, remembered. His secretary wrote that if Izzy should go to Detroit, Mr. Ford would see him.

"In the good old days," said Izzy, "I didn't have to tell who I was yet. I was prohibition agent No. 1."

The "good old days" were when prohibition became effective in 1927 when Izzy, "for the good of the service" was transferred to Chicago, "because I was enforcing prohibition too well." He couldn't leave his beloved New York, so he resigned.

"We really enforced the law. I've knocked off as many as sixty barkeeps in one day. You were taking a risk when you sold liquor while I was in the service."

Izzy stuck his cigar in his mouth and rested his hands across his ample paunch.

"Sure, prohibition can be enforced. Not 100 per cent, though. I think they ought to give people beer; then with the right kind of prohibition agents they can stamp out whisky. Sure, I've been known to take a drink. A man's got to be sociable. I like wine best, though, sacramental wine."

Izzy spoke of his many disguises with becoming modesty. He had been for business purposes, a street car conductor, a bum, a musician, a professor, a coal wagon driver, a Negro, a stevedore, a cowboy, a judge, &c.

"I fooled them all. They were always on the outlook for Izzy, but they never could recognize Izzy, even when he stood in front of them."

Izzy, in all of his 100,000 words, does not mention his stalwart and equally celebrated partner, Moe Smith. He denied vehemently that it was a matter of jealousy.

"He could write a book himself yet," he said.

AUTOGIRO IN STEPLECHASE

A Pitcairn autogiro goes over a hurdle in a recent autogiro steeplechase. Contestants are required to fly their ships over a course with large hurdles erected as obstacles. The planes must land in front of each hurdle before jumping it. The new sport has become popular with the large group of autogiro owners with headquarters at Pitcairn field, Philadelphia.

Take-Offs and Landings

By HARRIS B. HULL

CHARLES SHERMAN JONES, better known to you as "Casey" Jones, whose name has been closely allied with the development of aviation during a period of fourteen years, has resigned as vice president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation.

An outstanding national figure in the field of aeronautics, "Casey" Jones flew with the Ninety-sixth Pursuit Squadron overseas, later becoming a test pilot with the Curtiss Airplane Co. He rose to president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation in charge of public relations. He was also recently airport manager of the two Curtiss-Wright fields on Long Island, Valley Stream and Glenn Curtiss Airport.

WASHINGTON aviation enthusiasts will see something new in the line of airliners in the future when the Curtiss-Wright Co. turns out a new fleet of five new giant Curtiss Condors for Eastern Air Transport to be flown up and down the Atlantic seaboard replacing old equipment.

The new Condors, which will be flown into Washington Airport, will boast retractable landing gears. They will carry 15 passengers, a crew, 650 pounds of mail, baggage and express and two-way radio equipment. They will cruise at more than 140 miles an hour, and have a top speed of 165. Two Wright 675 horsepower Cyclone F engines will power each airliner. The propellers will be geared down to a top speed of 700 feet per minute, which will cut down on the motor noise to a considerable extent.

Construction of the fleet is already under way in the Curtiss-Wright commercial factories at Robertson, Mo.

THERE will be an interesting aviation program this afternoon at the Alexandria airport on the Washington-Richmond highway, just south of Alexandria, Va. Miss Helen Frego, a member of the D. C. Air Legion, will entertain the spectators by making her first parachute jump.

Francis Sheltz, a veteran flier, and former private pilot to Marshall Field, will entertain with an exhibition of stunt flying. All the maneuvers of the ships and the parachute jump will be broadcast over the airport's public address system.

American air traffic figures are not the only ones showing substantial increases. Figures released by the Deutsche Luft Hansa show decided improvement during the past months with twenty times as much passenger traffic in July as in January. Luft Hansa officials expected better results in the summer because of better flying conditions, but they were pleasantly surprised when the traffic jumped 2,000 per cent. Improved figures have also been reported by Imperial Airways in England.

LORD WILLIAM CECIL, Bishop of Exeter, and his wife, Lady Florence, were passengers last week with Eastern Air Transport on a trip between Philadelphia and Richmond. The English church dignitary, a brother of Lord Robert Cecil, English statesman, is speaking before universities and colleges throughout the country.

HOWARD C. STARK, instrument flying instructor for Eastern Air Transport, has recently completed a booklet on "Blind, or Instrument Flying?" Since the Department of Commerce will make it mandatory for all pilots flying for transport lines in interstate commerce to receive an instrument flying rating, and pass a rigid flight and written test to obtain it, Stark's booklet has attracted wide attention in the aviation industry as a text to help the fliers get through their exams.

In the book it is interesting to note that Stark says, "The majority of Army and Navy pilots who are now flying commercially, were not trained to fly blind by instrument during their period in the service."

Lieut. Howard B. Kaster, in reviewing the book, says, "Blind flying is impossible. The pilot can not distinguish between gravity and other accelerations and before long the plane is in a spin. But if every pilot would become familiar with the contents of this booklet the result would be a considerable decrease in prevalent misinformation and a marked increase in the safety of aircraft in bad weather."

Airplane Inventor Honored by Soviet Achievements of Aged Man Said to Have Antedated Wright Brothers.

Moscow (U.P.).—The seventy-fifth birthday of an airplane inventor whose achievements, it is claimed, predated the Wright brothers, has been celebrated throughout the Soviet Union. Fifty years ago Constantine Tsiolkovsky, a provincial teacher, began experiments and calculations on flying. Despite his advanced age, he still is actively at work on these investigations, with the full support of the Soviet Government.

The press devoted much space to his work and the government loaded him with honors. In his laboratory in Kaluga the old inventor is busy perfecting two of his life-long favorities: an all-metal dirigible and a rocket for investigating interplanetary space.

Long before the Wright brothers announced their ideas, Tsiolkovsky had published a theoretical article urging the possibility of the airplane, with detailed mathematical calculations which since then have been confirmed.

Only the backwardness of the Czarist government, it is said now, robbed Tsiolkovsky of the credit which should have been his. He not only was given no assistance but was hindered in his work. Tsiolkovsky's model of an all-metal dirigible has been adjudged practicable and will be built in the near future, it was announced on the occasion of his birthday.

Soldiers Force War's End

Professional Fighters Effect Peace in Brazilians' 13-Week Civil War After Efforts of Civilians Had Collapsed.

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 29 (A.P.).—Professional soldiers brought peace to Brazil after pacification efforts of civilians fell flat during the thirteen weeks of civil war.

Gen. Goes Monteiro

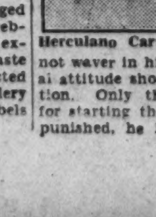
Principal figures in the finish were Gen. Pedro de Goes Monteiro, product of northern Brazil and French military schools, and Col. Herculano Carvalho, commander of the Sao Paulo state military police.

Gen. Goes Monteiro announced at the start that he was fighting, not a war, but for peace. At frequent intervals he sent airplanes to drop bulletins giving the rebels a chance to capitulate on liberal terms.

But at the same time he waged a campaign that enveloped the rebels on all sides, and he avoided excessive casualties by refusing to waste men on useless attacks. He effected most of his advances after artillery bombardments had driven the rebels from their positions.

Col. Carvalho precipitated the end of the rebel resistance when he, backed by his officers, told the rebel commander, Bertholdo Klinger, that it was all over as far as the state police were concerned. It was time, said Carvalho, for the police to get back to policing, and the people back to work.

When Klinger's peace negotiations failed, Carvalho reached a separate agreement with Goes Monteiro and took over the Sao Paulo Government, forcing Klinger to surrender.



Herculano Carvalho.

Goes Monteiro's peace terms including non-occupation of Sao Paulo City, caused an excellent impression among the Paulistas.

The federal general lost a brother, Capt. Cicero Goes Monteiro, who was killed leading an attack, but did not waver in his stand that the federal attitude should be one of pacification. Only the persons responsible for starting the revolution should be punished, he held.

7 D. C. BOYS TO TRY WEST POINT TESTS

President Names Group for Entrance Examinations on March 7.

The President has designated another group of local candidates for the March 7 entrance examinations to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point.

Among the Washington boys who will try for the Military Academy are William Allen Dodds, the Army War College; Augustin M. Prentiss, jr., Albert William and Leonard Johnstone Abbott, brothers, sons of Capt. Oscar B. Abbott, Army War College.

The Shipping Board last week authorized the transfer of a suitable vessel to the Navy Department as a loan by it to the State of Louisiana as a training ship. It is probable that a vessel now laid up at New Orleans of about 8,500 tons will be selected.

Promoted to Air Reserve.

Maceo Falco has been promoted to the rank of first lieutenant in the air corps reserve. Thomas Aloysius Lane has been promoted to the grade of captain in the engineer reserves. Emmett Robert Carroll has been promoted to the grade of captain in the engineer reserves.

Joseph James Greenlaw has been appointed a major in the Medical Reserve and Lee Johnson Rutz has been appointed first lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Reserve. Both of the latter two officers are recognized in the same grade and branch in the National Guard.

Honor for Garrison.

On being advised of the death of Lindley Miller Garrison on October 19, 1932, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff published the following general order:

The death of Lindley Miller Garrison, which occurred at Seabright, N. J., on October 19, 1932, is announced with deep regret.

Mr. Garrison was born in Camden, N. J., in 1864. During the period of his education he was for a time a special student at Harvard University. On the completion of his law studies he was admitted to the Pennsylvania bar, and was engaged in the practice of law in that State from 1883 to 1888. In the latter year he was admitted to the bar of his native State, New Jersey, and practiced his profession in Camden and Jersey City until 1904. He was vice chancellor of the State from 1904 to 1913, when he was called to the service of the Federal Government by President Woodrow Wilson, in whose Cabinet he became Secretary of War. He resigned from this position in February, 1916, and resumed the practice of law, locating in New York City. His standing in the legal profession was recognized by four leading universities through the award of the degree of LL. D.

Mr. Garrison was a man of strong personality and convictions, with sterling loyalty and devotion to the interests of his country; and availing himself of his opportunity as Secretary of War in the early days of the world conflict he learned to appraise the Nation's vulnerability and military inadequacy, and became conspicuous as an advocate of Nationwide military training and preparedness and of adequate provision for defense.

As a mark of respect to his memory, it is ordered that the flags at all military posts be displayed at half-staff on the day of the funeral, October 22, 1932.

By order of the Secretary of War:
DOUGLAS MacARTHUR,
General, Chief of Staff.

The schedule of release dates of the annual reports of the various component parts of the War Department has been announced.

The first report will be published on Tuesday, November 8, and is from the office of the chief of the Coast Artillery. Twenty-two reports in all will be released, the last one being published on December 5.

Cavalry Reserve, Plans Conferences

Four Dinners to Be Given by Second Squadron of the 306th.

The Second Squadron of the 306th Cavalry Reserve held their regular conference on October 20 with an exceptionally large attendance. Col. William A. McCain, director of the War Industrial College, lectured on "Industrial Mobilization," and there was another interesting lecture by the unit instructor, Maj. H. C. Dagley, on "Mobilization as Applied to Cavalry Arm of the Service."

Maj. Geary P. Eppley, Cavalry Reserve squadron commander, appointed Capt. Albert J. McCurdy as chairman of the social committee and Lieut. William I. Irby, jr., to head the publicity committee.

The social committee has planned four dinner conferences for this season, which proved so popular last year and which were attended by the Secretary of War, the Assistant Secretary of War, military attaches and many high ranking Army officers.

U. S. Coaling Post In Japan Is Closed

Army Transports Now Use Oil; Human Chain Did Work.

(Associated Press.)

One of the picturesque overseas activities of the United States Army which came in with American occupation of the Philippines was placed in the discard by War Department orders yesterday closing the Army transport coaling station at Nagasaki, Japan.

The coaling at Nagasaki was accomplished by means of a human chain of Japanese women and children who passed hand to hand baskets of coal from barges to the ship being loaded. Oil has replaced coal on most of the Army transports and the Nagasaki station is no longer necessary.

Capt. Truman M. Martin, who has been in charge at Nagasaki, has been ordered to Tokyo as assistant military attache of the American Embassy.

Businessman Uses Autogiro.

Philadelphia (U.P.).—There are no transportation problems for Harold F. Pitcairn, Philadelphia's flying business man. Pitcairn, who is head of the Autogiro Co. of America, uses an autogiro to fly from his home in Bryn Athyn to his office at Willow Grove.

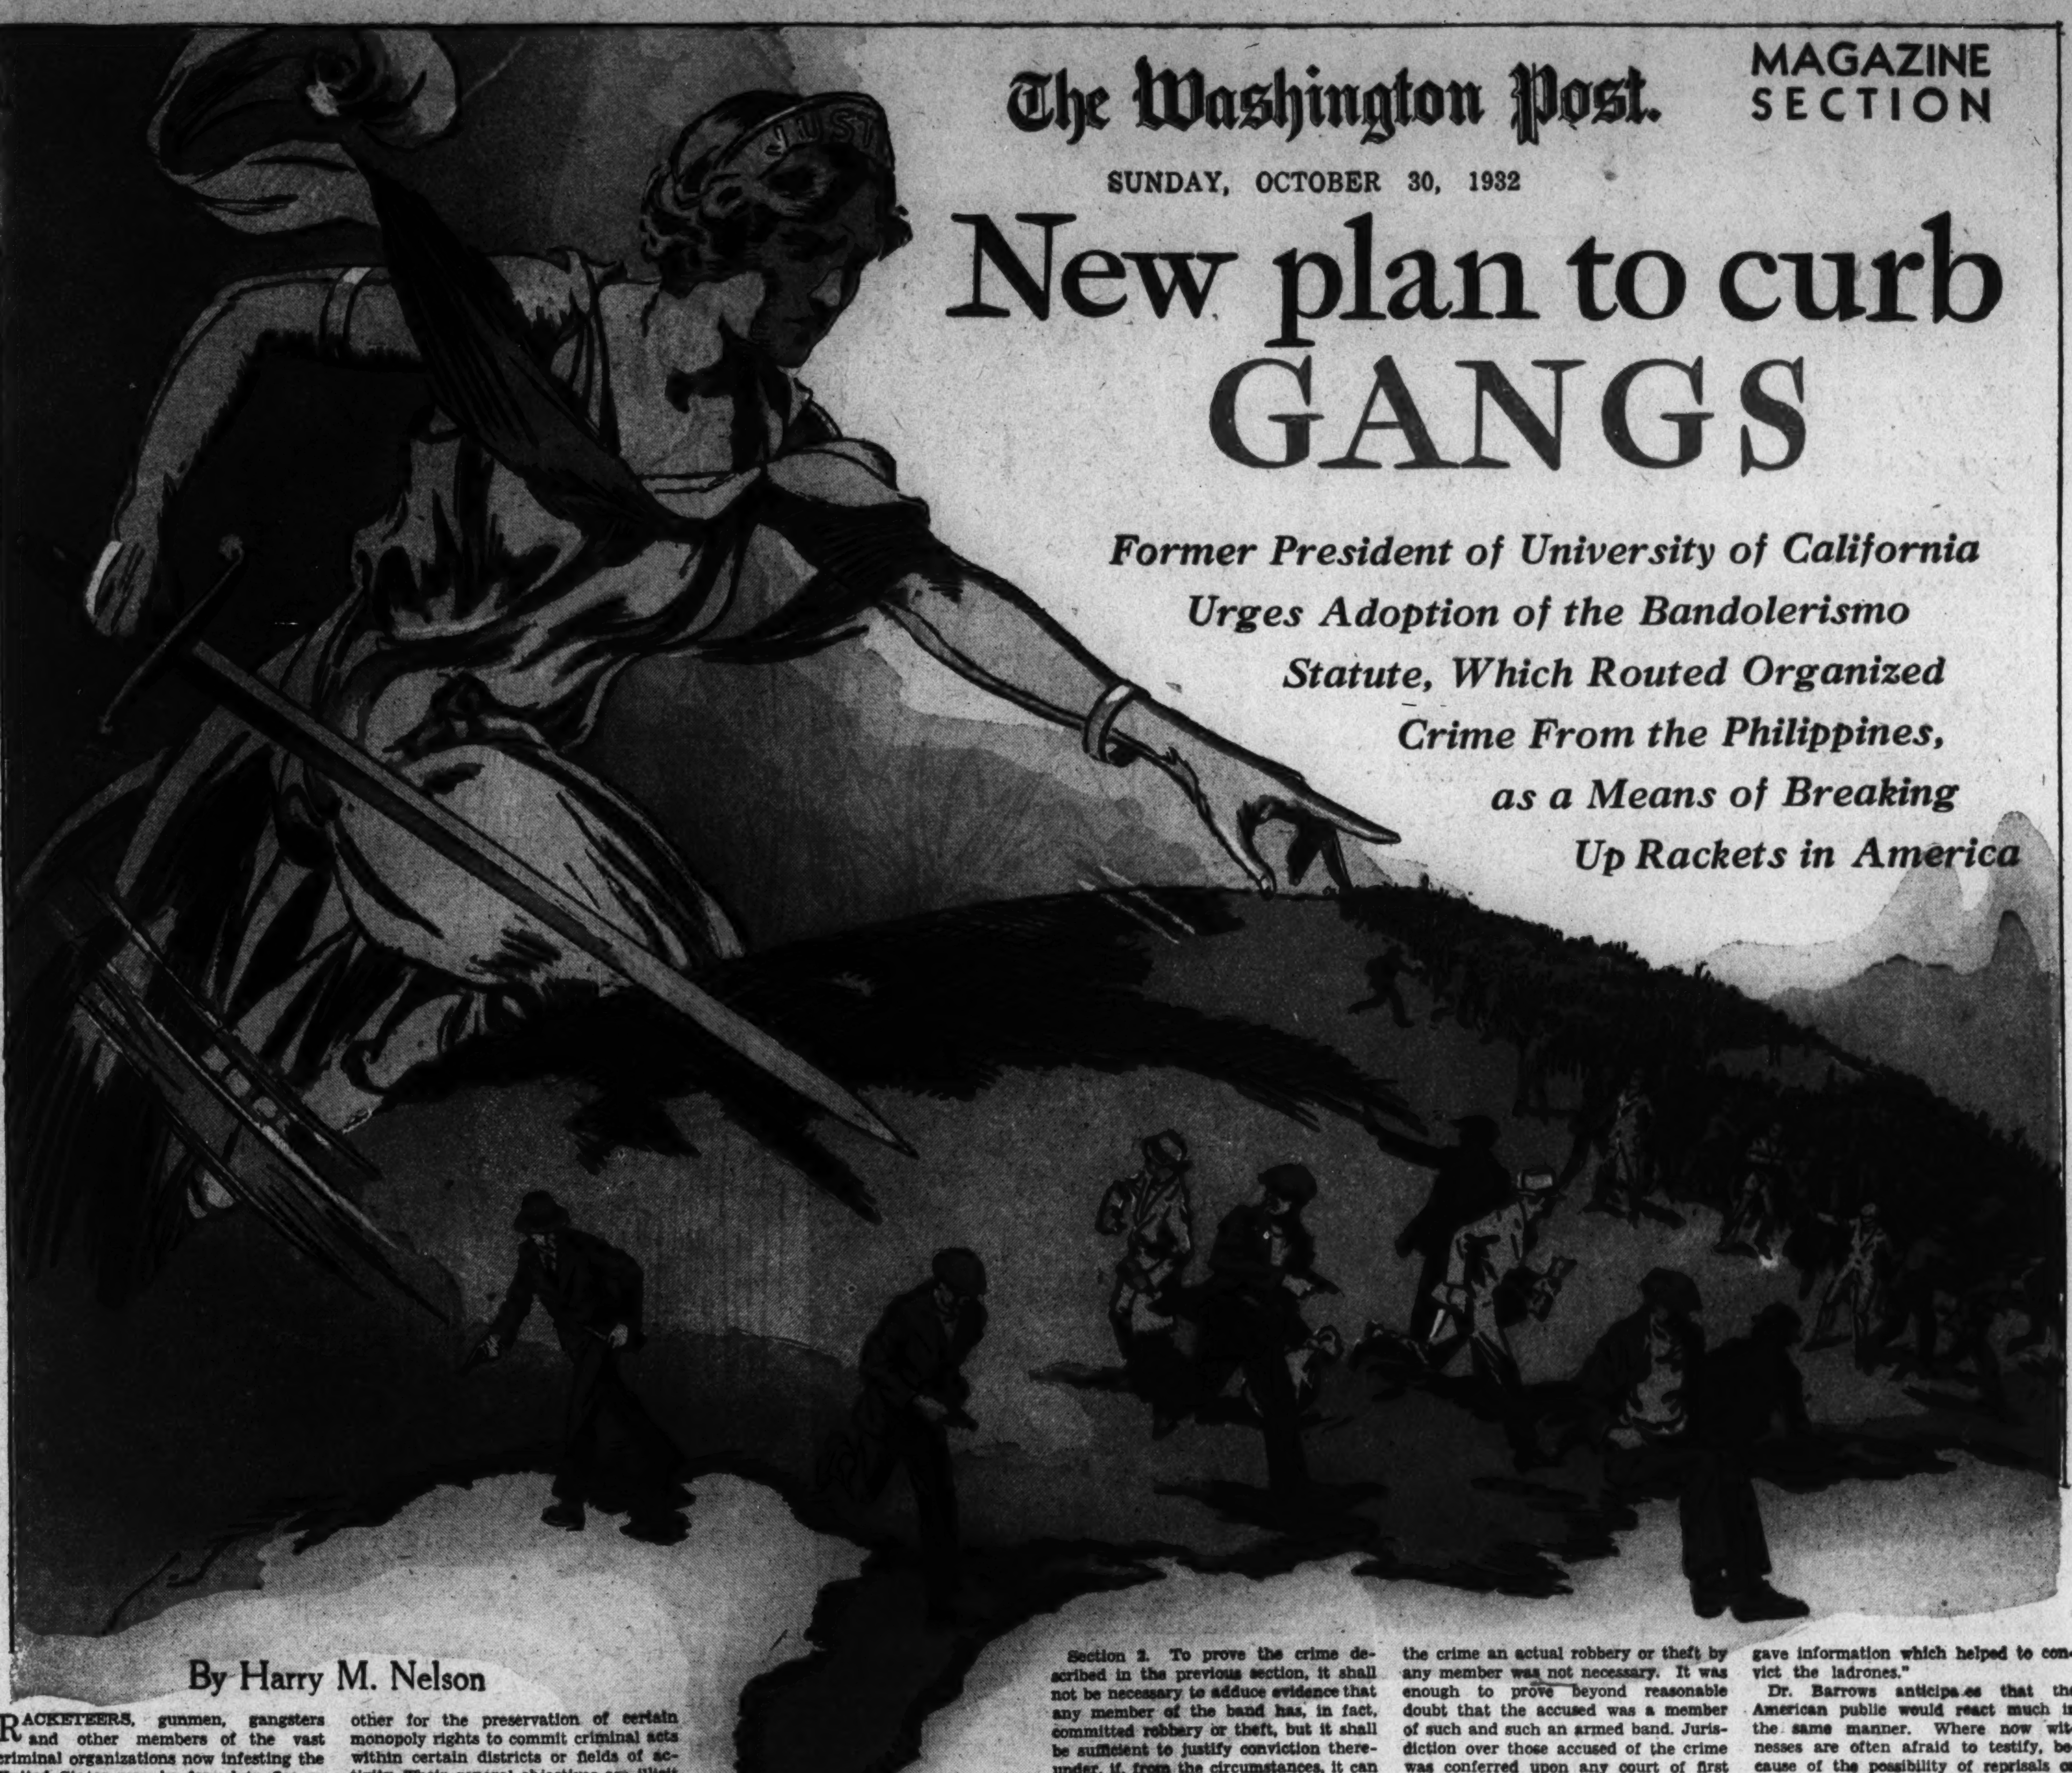
New plan to curb GANGS

Former President of University of California Urges Adoption of the Bandolerismo Statute, Which Routed Organized Crime From the Philippines, as a Means of Breaking Up Rackets in America



By Harry M. Nelson

RACKETEERS, gunmen, gangsters and other members of the vast criminal organizations now infesting the United States may be forced to flee or else surrender to the authorities, if a plan proposed by Dr. David P. Barrows, formerly president of the University of California, and since 1911 professor of political science, should be put into effect.

Dr. Barrows advocates adoption by the States of a law similar to the "bandolerismo statute" of the Philippine Islands, which makes it a criminal offense to join a band organized for crime. Under the terms of this measure, it would not be necessary to prove a gangster guilty of a specific crime. Instead, all that would be required is to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the accused is a member of a gang. Under the Philippine law such conviction carries with it a sentence of death or imprisonment for a term of not less than twenty years, in the discretion of the court. Also punishment is provided for those found guilty of aiding or abetting gang members.

STEPS are now being taken by Dr. Barrows to have such a statute presented at the next session of the California State Legislature. It is believed that passage of the act would necessitate an amendment to the State Constitution. It is also probable that most other States desiring to enact such legislation would have to take similar action.

As director of education and chief of the Bureau of Pagan and Mohammedan Tribes, in the Philippines, from 1900 to 1910, Dr. Barrows saw the actual working out of this law, which was enacted in order to handle a crime situation far older and more terrible than that existing in the United States today. The phenomenal results achieved by this act have convinced him that it is the one certain solution for conditions now prevalent in many of our great cities.

Reviewing the situation throughout the Nation, he says:

"Efforts are now being made to deal with a special type of criminals who have given a new menace to the underworld and who are described as bootleggers, gunmen, racketeers and gangmen. The special characteristic of these criminals seems to be that they are organised. They have well-known leaders, belong to groups pledged to common predatory interests and punish violations of gang code with summary execution.

"These gangs wage war upon one another for the preservation of certain monopoly rights to commit criminal acts within certain districts or fields of activity. Their general objectives are illicit business, blackmail, extortion and the murder of opponents, or defiant victims. The special characteristic of these criminals seems to be their membership in a specific group or gang maintaining a conspiracy against society.

"The ordinary methods of law enforcement seem to be powerless to destroy these parasites and the hold which they have gained. From current reports the membership of these gangs is known to the police. A man arrested for gun-toting, shooting, violent murder or lesser violence is recognized as belonging to such and such a gang.

"It appears that such membership could be definitely proved in a trial at court. The difficulty appears to be to prove an arrested gangster to be guilty of a specific crime. The usual police method seems to be to arrest a suspicious offender, subject him to interrogation, and within a few hours release him for want of evidence of his having committed a definite act of crime.

"A lawbreaker is entitled to a trial, and if he is hanged for murder the fact of his having committed the murder must be proved beyond reasonable doubt. Criminal organization, however, may be carried to such a state of perfection as to baffle all efforts to pin a specific crime upon a member, or members, of that organization.

"This seems to be the situation in many important centers of the United States. The question is: Is society defenseless? The answer is no. Faced with such peril and disorder, government, through its legislative power, may broaden the scope of crime. It may put a new crime on the statute book. It may fix penalties of exceptional severity upon those who merely conspire to break the law.

"IN THE year 1902 Philippine society was faced with a gang problem just as menacing, and even more general in area and population affected, than the gang problem in the United States. Most of the provinces of the islands were infested by bands of brigands commonly known as ladrones, or by the Tagalog term, 'tulisan.' Members of these bands lived sometimes in out-of-the-way places, sometimes in the midst of orderly populations. They had their leaders; they possessed arms; they levied extortion and blackmail. They robbed generally, on the highways, in the fields and in the villages.

"They barbarously murdered their enemies, those who opposed them and particularly those who gave information leading to their apprehension. For a great many months the problem of ladronism completely baffled the authorities. On November 12, 1902, the Philippine Commission, then the sole legislative authority in the Philippines, passed Act 518, adding a new crime to the statute book, which, in the Spanish translation, received the name of 'bandolerismo.'"

The act is as follows:

Section 1. Whenever three or more persons, conspiring together, shall form a band of robbers for the purpose of stealing carabao or other personal property, by means of force and violence, and shall go out upon the highway or roam over the country armed with deadly weapons for this purpose, they shall be deemed highway robbers or brigands, and every person engaged in the original formation of the band, or joining it thereafter, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by death or imprisonment for not less than twenty years, in the discretion of the court.

Section 2. To prove the crime described in the previous section, it shall not be necessary to adduce evidence that any member of the band has, in fact, committed robbery or theft, but it shall be sufficient to justify conviction thereunder, if, from the circumstances, it can be inferred beyond reasonable doubt that the accused was a member of such an armed band as that described in said section.

Section 3. Persons guilty of the crime defined in Section 1 may be punished therefor in the court of first instance in any province in which they may be taken or from which they may have fled.

Section 4. Every person knowingly aiding or abetting such a band of brigands as that described in Section 1, by giving them information of the movement of the police or constabulary, or by securing stolen property from them, or by procuring supplies of food, clothing, arms or ammunition and furnishing the same to them, shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment for not less than ten years and not more than twenty years.

POINTING out the salient features of this measure, Dr. Barrows says: "A certain remarkable characteristic of this act may be observed. It made a crime not an act of robbery but the conspiring together of three or more persons to form a band of robbers. The penalty for such conspiracy was fixed at death or imprisonment for not less than ten or more than twenty years. To prove the crime an actual robbery or theft by any member was not necessary. It was enough to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the accused was a member of such and such an armed band. Jurisdiction over those accused of the crime was conferred upon any court of first instance in the islands. Aiding or abetting such a band was likewise made a crime, punishable by imprisonment for not less than ten nor more than twenty years.

"Of the seven members of the Philippine Commission who drafted or enacted this law, three were jurists of high standing. The president of the commission was William Howard Taft, who had been a district Judge of the United States and who thereafter became Secretary of War, President of the United States and Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. The other two lawyers were Luke E. Wright, who had been Attorney General of Tennessee and was later to become Governor General of the Philippines, Ambassador of the United States to Japan and Secretary of War, and Henry Clay Ide, who had been Chief Justice of Samoa and was mainly responsible for the enactment of the code of civil service procedure for the Philippine Islands and who, subsequently, was United States Minister to Spain. I mention these three men as authors of the bill as evidence of its constitutionality; that it was not beyond the competence of legislative authority to act; that it did not deny due process of law.

"I SUGGEST, therefore, that the way to meet the gang problem in American States is for the Legislatures of the States to pass an act based upon this Philippine statute, the efficacy of which was demonstrated and the constitutionality of which was never successfully impugned."

In ridding the Archipelago of gangsterism, Dr. Barrows says the authorities had to contend with the fact that many of the bandits had become popular heroes in the eyes of the common people.

"Sagas had been written, glorifying the exploits of these picturesque outlaws," he explains. "Legends had come into being which extolled their invulnerability through the use of magic charms, called 'anting anting.' They occupied a place in the literature of the period comparable to that of Robin Hood. However, in spite of this fact, the great mass of the people gave their whole-hearted support to the 'bandolerismo statute.' They ceased contributing supplies to the gangsters or paying them tribute, and, assured of the Government's protection, they gladly gave information which helped to convict the ladrones."

Dr. Barrows anticipates that the American public would react much in the same manner. Where now witnesses are often afraid to testify, because of the possibility of reprisals on the part of gangsters, he believes they would be more than willing to assist the prosecution if assured that conviction for the criminal was certain.

"The public must give courageous support to the authorities if they hope to rid the country of organized crime," he declares. "If such a statute as I suggest were enacted, I imagine that in the beginning there might be some difficulty in obtaining witnesses to testify against gangsters, but I am sure this difficulty would be of short duration. Just as soon as the public was convinced of the iron-clad nature of the law, they would no longer fear to do their part."

TO CIRCUMVENT possible corruption in high places which might tend to take the "teeth" from the law, Dr. Barrows advocates the strengthening of our present courts. He suggests the establishing of special courts, such as courts of assizes, which would have a group of five Judges, who would arrive at a decision without a jury. These jurists would pass on the facts as well as the law of the case, and thus would be eliminated the danger of the jury system, with its frequent miscarriage of justice, due to a tendency to be swayed by emotional appeal.

Judges of recognised merit would be appointed to these special courts and would meet in session only when cases coming under their particular jurisdiction were to be tried. Thus, says Dr. Barrows, little or no extra expense need be borne by taxpayers in the establishing of these tribunals. However, he admits that a considerable burden would in all probability be placed on the backs of taxpayers through enforcement of a statute similar to the Philippine law. But he is convinced that this expense would be far less than the tribute being levied on industry by gang leaders.

"The situation today has become intolerable," he asserts. "Affairs have reached such a state that men in many lines of mercantile endeavor must first consult with racketeers and gangsters before they may carry on their business. Such conditions must not be allowed to continue. With an adequate law in force, I venture to predict that it would be only a matter of months before the country was delivered from gangsterism. In the Philippines the hold of the ladrones was broken within one year."

Crime's "Pied Piper"

THE "bandolerismo statute" is a law which was drafted and enacted by the Philippine Commission in 1902. It makes robbery where more than three persons are implicated a conspiracy, a crime punishable by death.

Dr. Barrows suggests such a plan for America, establishing special courts presided over by five Judges without a jury, whose verdict would be final.

He is convinced that such an adequate law would shortly break gangdom's rule.

College Students have their own "RACKETS"

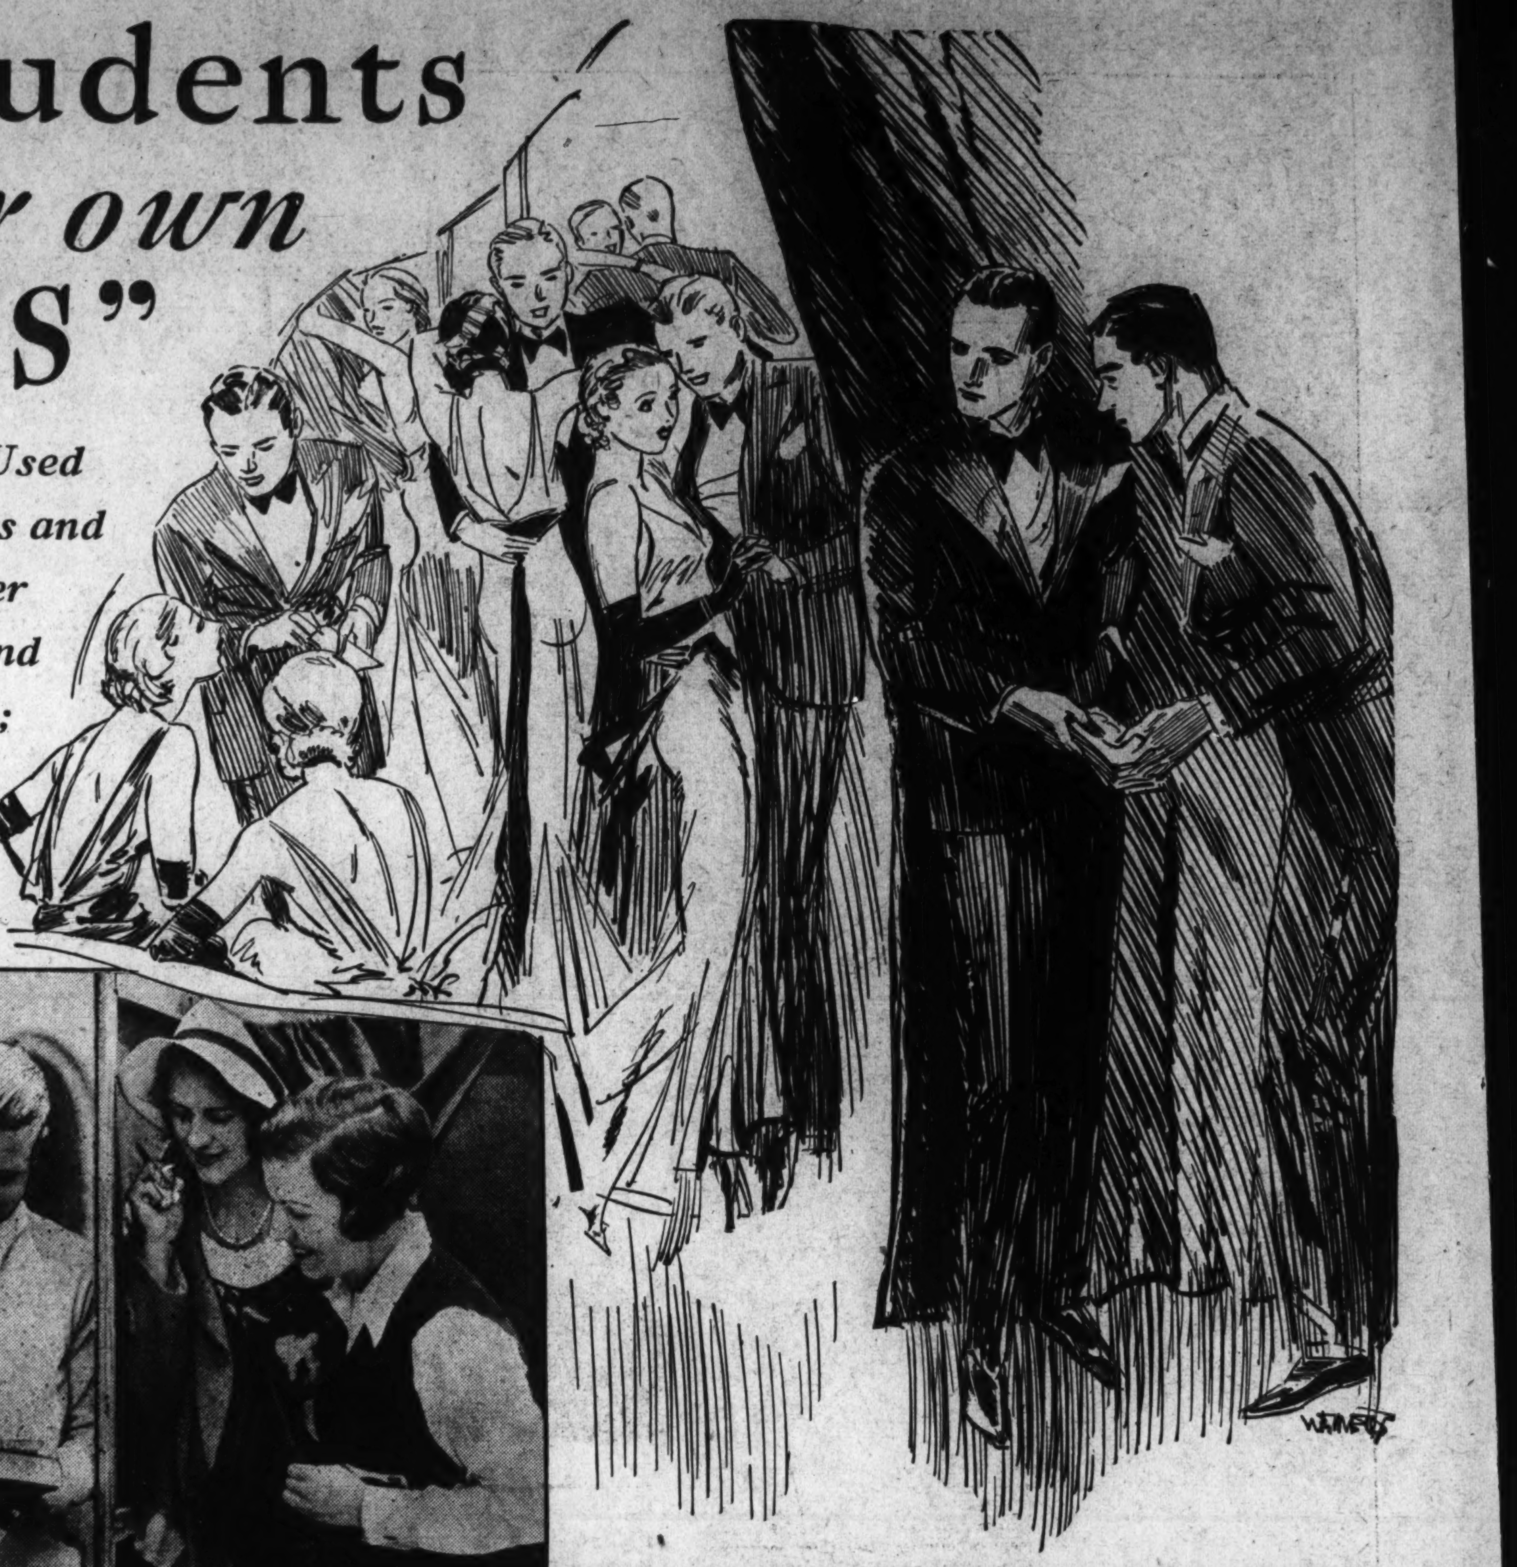
Many and Varied Are the Schemes Used to Raise Finances, "Crash" Parties and Athletic Events—One Embryo Lawyer Secures a Summer Course of Study and Lectures Without Even Registering; Popularity Elections, Writing Themes for Backward Students and Dance Favors Profitable



Proceeds derived from a successful prom often fall into the hands of unscrupulous dance committee members, who see to it that a comfortable profit is pocketed

This male student finds himself in an embarrassing predicament as he is besieged by four pretty coeds for his vote for the most popular girl

By Mary M. Zoretskie

COLLEGE rackets—eating meals and not paying for them, riding on trains without tickets, crashing the gate at parties or storming the theatre entrances without admission or passes, selling student passbooks at big games at hold-up prices, the involved politics of getting elected to "big pay" student offices—these are as old as college halls themselves, and only the term "rackets" is new.

Talk with any old grad and get him to wax reminiscent over his old college days. In the course of casual conversation he will mention this or that student who managed to rake off enough wherewithal to pay college expenses. At times (even recent times) one bold figure stands out as a master racketeer, on a par with beer barons and gangdom leaders.

Expulsion, not jail, awaits those offenders who are caught. University officials deal with university offenders, except when they transgress on Federal or civic authority. Such front-page news as wrecking downtown theatres in the spirit of football rivalry or tearing up a few monuments to vent the spirit of victory or defeat may meet up with the blue-coated police officials now and then. But most of the time they are set down as foolish student pranks, to be borne with bravely by citizens and officials with a "remember you were young once" attitude.

IN THESE days new rackets are being invented. A new one, practiced at one university during the last summer, has just been unearthed. It merited this newspaper notice:

> A new type of larceny has been committed at —— summer law school session, right under the very noses of the entire crop of budding young prosecuting attorneys and vastly experienced officials as well.
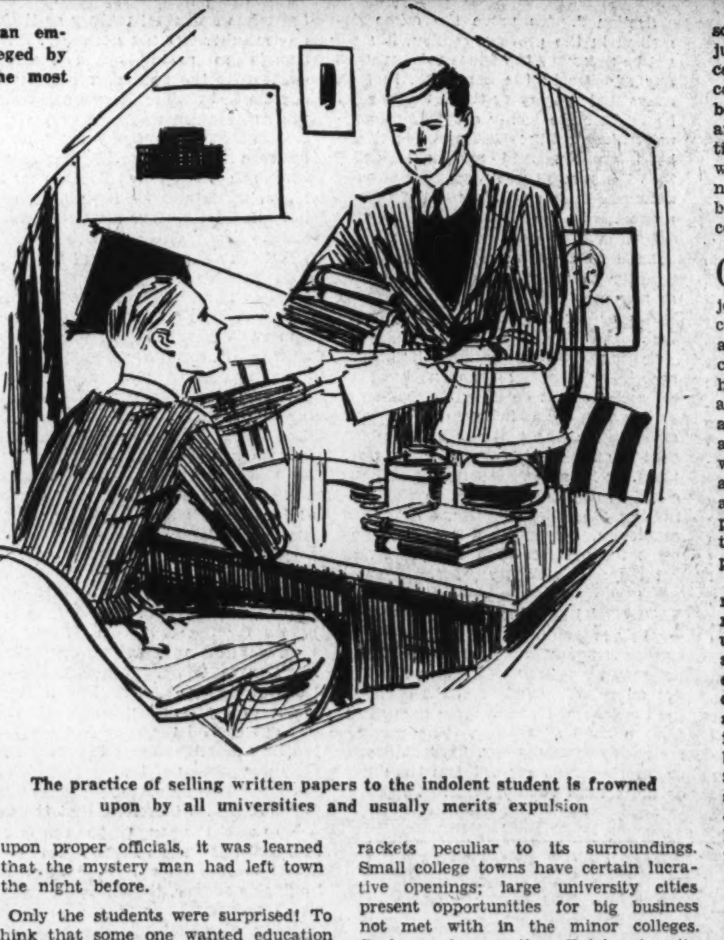
> As the term ended Thursday, the secretary of the law school learned to his dismay that a certain young man whose name never entered the registry books, the tuition receipts book or other official records has gratuitously received a full summer term's worth of the costly legal education given out at the new —— Law College.

When the knowledge finally dawned upon proper officials, it was learned that the mystery man had left town the night before.



The practice of selling written papers to the indolent student is frowned upon by all universities and usually merits expulsion

Only the students were surprised! To think that some one wanted education so badly that he actually went to classes voluntarily, when he couldn't even drag down a grade for it! Such action is to be commended, in student eyes, even though it reverses the usual form.

Not many campuses can boast of such a thirst for learning that classrooms are sought and lectures attended when no honor points or credits may be gained. Seeking knowledge for knowledge's sake is something new. Almost every campus can boast of a few students who, flunked out a semester or so ago, continue in their old surroundings, receiving tuition or expenses from home and to all outward appearances being on the student rolls, yet assiduously avoiding classrooms and any indication of educative pursuits.

And every college can report a few rackets peculiar to its surroundings. Small college towns have certain lucrative openings; large university cities present opportunities for big business not met with in the minor colleges. Such openings as the official university bootlegger go bigger and better in large universities, where enrollments are so large that officials do not gain wind of certain goings-on.

But all of them, where supervision is lax or where ambition has room to take wing, have certain "paying" offices. It may be the post of editor-in-chief of the college magazine, year book or daily newspaper, where advertising income is large and expenses may be kept down to a minimum; reports to the faculty advisers padded and the balance cleaned up as "proceeds."

It may be the chairmanship of a prom, cotillion or dance committee, an all-university affair which is the goal of every coed and the despair of every fraternity brother who feels he must attend. Certain "honorary" societies sometimes have charge, or a senior or junior class committee may direct proceedings. Tickets may vary from $3 per couple to a tax of $10. Orchestras may be nationally known, decorations lavish and refreshments of banquet proportions. What the dance cost and what was taken in at the door may be open news, or they may remain secret facts between committee members and their consciences.

CERTAIN it is that when these offices are elective, and there is grift in the job (grift is the term applied to proceeds which just escape being graft but are far from being gifts), college campuses are transformed into political hotbeds when election time comes around. Sorority and fraternity houses are canvassed; minor university dances are attended by candidates, who dance with every home economics girl present and pay attention to the most studious and bespectacled femme; paid ads appear in the university papers and electioneering is done by a regular campaign manager, a la national politics.

Election may mean hundreds, it may mean thousands. In fact, it used to mean enough so that at present most universities have rigorous supervision of all income-making activities. It means enough so that a prominent Southern college editor-in-chief absconded a year ago with the annual funds and police intervention was needed to bring him back to his alma mater, along with the $1500 he took with him. Student managing of the university advertising income may prove so sketchy that no one knows just what the income is, or if it meets expenses or exceeds them. Under such conditions, rackets flourish.

There are other committees connected with the sale of class blazers or class rings or university seals and insignia. The student committee merely passes on the selection—but sometimes the selection may be accompanied by a "commission" of a stipulated sum on each article sold, the amount of the commission being a secret between the committee and the person who gets the order, and merely added to the official price.

For instance, at a certain New York State university (for the male contingent only) a fee of 50 cents was added to each blazer sold, to be turned over to the committee by the salesman who got the order. A less expensive and better made blazer was turned down because the bidder for the order refused to "play ball" with the committee. And the "commission" did not include the percentage paid to student salesmen who solicited orders from the student body and were paid for their effort. Such work is legitimate, and not a rake-off fee, to be split by the committee.

Another type of petty larceny concerns public carriers—trains and trolley cars. The trains offer special inducements during football season or at vacation time, when specials are run. One ticket and one berth may entitle as many as can fit into a berth (limit said to be four) with comfort. Sleepers are better, but drawing rooms suffice during the day. Pullmans are easier to "work" than day coaches.

Vacation specials may also be worked by buying a ticket to Stumpville and riding on to Podunk, many miles farther on, at a saving of mere cents or dollars. With a milling student passenger list, when no one stays put for two minutes on end, harassed railroad conductors may miss a passenger or two, when students co-operate with each other. For instance, Alabama University still talks about that historic football special to California, when two boys went from Tuscaloosa and returned minus any railroad tickets. There may have been more; our particular informant knew of only two cases, but could tell of divers others, such as some of the students eating the whole journey long at railroad lunch carts and timing their exit with the departure of the train so that most of the meal was consumed and no check paid.

University of Pennsylvania contributes the tale of certain students buying tickets to Reading, Pa., when their homes were in the central State section; State College tells of pools collected for train fare, when a trio would reserve a drawing room occupied by a sextet. Syracuse University students can relate the occupancy of one lower by four on the "Orange Special" to New York and the Bronx. And any other school can relate similar tales, even to the deposit of a handful of pennies in payment for seven fares (with transfers) in Buffalo by Buffalo University students.

PARTICULARLY needy students may invent their own personal rackets. These may work for a while. They are called into service only in dire need, when no meals for a few days lend bravado to working-their-way-through-college boys. One good one "goes" into cafeterias or one-arm lunchrooms, where tickets are given at the entrance and holes punched for food ordered. The gag is to extract two tickets. The first big order is given with coat and hat on; dessert is ordered (preferably from another counter man) sans coat, hat, glasses or other identifying apparel. The second check is offered—and that is the one paid. This racket is not good if worked too often, nor is the one of "kitchen exits" to avoid passing the front-counter cashier.

These rackets do not include the scores of legitimate means of earning money at school by dint of plenty of good hard work. Nor do they include those frankly illegal practices, such as rifling the Christmas mail or appropriating some one else's package slips.

Such practices are frowned upon. For instance, there was the large-scale pilfering of December mail in our Southern tier of colleges, when Federal authorities stepped in and found that a professional criminal "employed" certain very needy students to filch the mailbags and gift boxes, paying them "wages" and promising "protection" from authorities. The checks, gifts and packages were disposed of from a "central office," and the students were pawns of real criminals.

IT IS the borderline activities that are termed rackets; the gaining of money without reciprocative labor. Sometimes the rackets are thoughtless. For instance, the dean of America's leading women's college relates how the telephone company complained a sudden dropoff of calls in a certain living center. Investigation revealed a nickel with a hole in it, coyly tied to the telephone hook. The girls were not attempting to defraud the telephone company; they merely had trouble finding nickels when they wished to make a call, so one of them conceived the bright idea of getting a nickel, having a hole bored in it and then tying it to the phone for general use. Experiments showed that when the nickel was lowered just to the point where it gave the ring signal to the operator, and held in place, it could be dragged up again when the hook was down.

At De Pauw University, when cars were ruled off the campus, one enterprising student earned his college expenses by renting out campus buggies and nags at $2 an hour. But such enterprise is to be lauded; it is legitimate, even if it is learned that said business embryo in turn rents the hacks from a livery for a far smaller fee and pockets the difference.

Getting percentages on tour tickets sold, managing tours, writing themes for those students who do not have literary ability, taking examinations for less able and gifted flunking students—these are the warp of racketeering. The woof is the more colorful big-time activities, the big-money boys, who hoodwink students and faculty alike. They are the ones who are the bookies at football game betting; they hold the chips at the end of poker sessions (and bets aren't always in the few-dollar class either, for at one college widow's apartment in a large Big Three university hundreds changed hands in minutes); they are elected to paying student offices and are in on every cut on a campus.

And when they are graduated they start selling bonds.

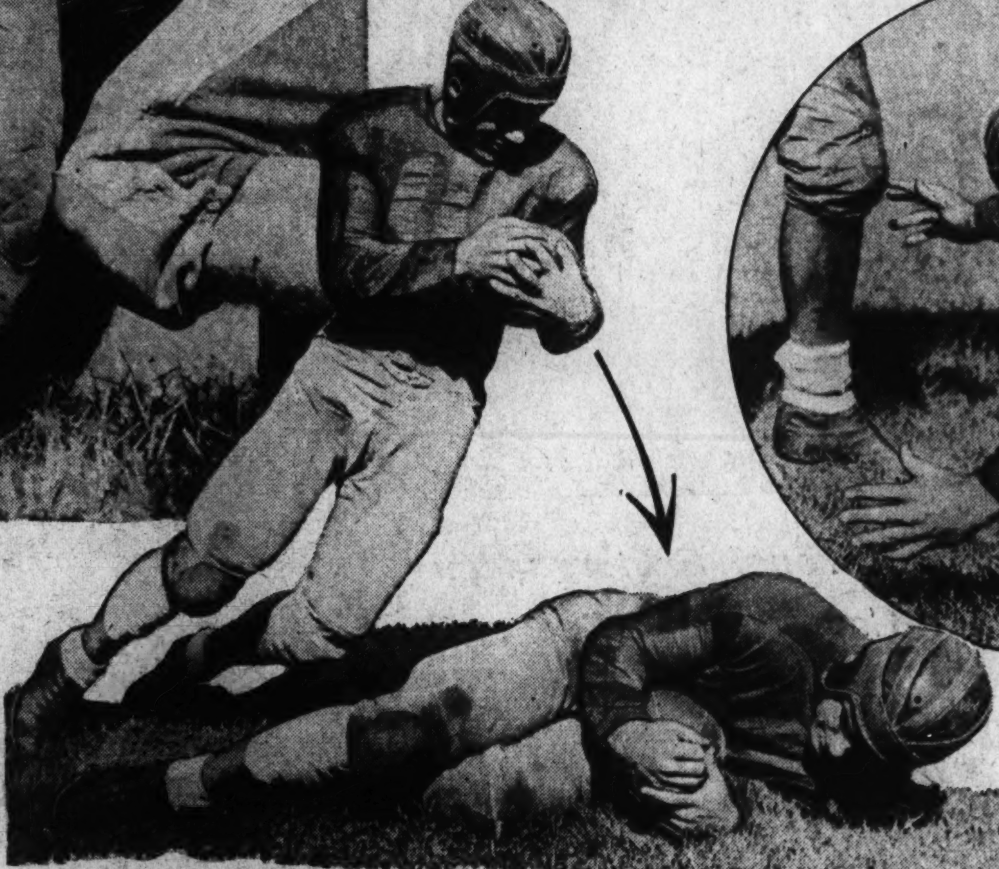
WHAT ABOUT FOOTBALL CASUALTIES?

Coach Mal Stevens, of Yale, Answers This Paramount Sports Question With Some Excellent Suggestions on How to Prevent Injuries to Participants in the Great Fall Pastime

The "rabbit punch," consisting of a sharp blow behind the neck to daze the opponent, is an illegal practice and one that Dr. Stevens condemns as cowardly



The proper way to fall is here illustrated in two positions as the athlete, with chin tucked in, both arms around the ball and body bent as far forward as possible, goes down with the least possible injury

Dr. Stevens is not an advocate of tackling at the knees or below that point because of the danger of the ball-carrier's leg colliding with the tackler's chin or neck with disastrous results

Dr. Marvin A. (Mal) Stevens, head coach of the Yale University football team and president of the American Football Coaches Association

"It is our belief that the legitimate use of hands produces a cleaner and more scientific line play," says the famous Yale coach, adding that the restriction of such play will result in a bumping contest and punch-drunk athletes

By Anthony Burnett

IT IS almost inevitable that the present football season will end with a high list of casualties. Thousands of virile American boys and young men are now playing the thrilling and glamorous game upon the uncombed, rock-bestrewn neighborhood lots and upon the trim, well-groomed fields within the walled inclosures of the imposing stadia representative of the country's major universities.

The youthful aspirant for athletic honors in his own little sandlot sphere, the high-school and prep-school players and the luminaries of the famous varsity squads, whose dazzling gridiron achievements make fascinating reading in the Sunday newspapers—all of these will contribute to the grand total of bruises and abrasions, sprains and contusions, fractures and dislocations and the few unfortunate fatalities which are a part of the toll taken every season.

BUT what about the causes responsible for the occurrence of these injuries? Must it be accepted with resignation that they are an inseparable part of the lusty, vigorous game or is it possible to improve playing standards and technique, coaching methods and present equipment so that the large number of injuries will be materially reduced?

It was to determine this possibility that Dr. Marvin A. (Mal) Stevens, head coach of the Yale University football team and president of the American Football Coaches Association, recently made an exhaustive survey of the entire technique of present-day football. In collaboration with Dr. Winthrop Morgan Phelps, professor of orthopedic surgery at Yale University, he has just written a book on the control of football injuries.

Dr. Stevens is singularly well qualified to approach this subject, for he is a coach, physician and a former star player on the Yale team. Just a few years ago, in 1923 to be exact, Mal Stevens was a great halfback on the championship Yale eleven.

Dr. Stevens, in making his critical study of the game, had an added advantage in his observation of slow-motion pictures of football contests in which Yale has participated. The university has taken motion pictures of its games for many years, and in utilizing them for his own purpose Dr. Stevens was able to stop the reel at any point to analyze a particular play.

As a result of his investigation, he holds the opinion that many of the minor and more serious injuries can be avoided by the adoption of proper precautions. Some of the faults which he considers are contributing causes to the occurrence of injuries are the improper conditioning and training of players, lack of correct coaching technique, inferior equipment, the prevalence of a few undesirable rules governing the game, inadequate supervision of the playing field and carelessness on the part of the players.

As in the case of Dr. Phelps, whose contribution deals with the proper treatment of injuries after their occurrence, some of his criticisms are highly technical and of interest to coaches only, but the individual player might do well to heed his suggestions in general.

IN DISCUSSING the subject in his office at Yale University, where he is associated with Dr. Phelps, Dr. Stevens said: "About the most important piece of football equipment for the player in the prevention of serious injury is his headgear, for concussions occur with much greater frequency than is generally supposed.

"The tendency in recent years has been to make the headguard heavier, harder and larger. It is now an offensive weapon of the powerful line-plunger, but while it provides protection against scalp wounds, it does not cushion the head from the force of blows which are transmitted to the base of the brain. The player would be much safer with his head swathed in cotton batting or in a casque made of Belgium rubber. It seems to me that a logical solution to the problem of eliminating the serious cerebral accidents would be the manufacture of a pneumatic helmet having a small spring shock absorber.

"There should also be better co-operation between the practical manufacturer, the experienced coach and trainer and the neurological and orthopedic surgeon with the object of designing better football equipment. I believe that this equipment can and will be materially improved.

"But the present headguard does provide much protection, and every player should be required to wear a helmet during practice and in games. Sometimes during the progress of a game a player will toss aside his helmet recklessly. This is a grandstand gesture intended to win the attention of the audience and the press, and it should be promptly discouraged by the coach. College men should remember that juvenile players imitate them and, therefore, they should set a more inspiring example of precaution.

"ONE of the wisest changes in the rules is that requiring all players to wear soft padding of at least three-eighths-inch thickness over the knees. The knee is particularly bony and poorly padded. The leg muscles are much more powerful than those of the arm, and it is much easier to deliver a knockout blow with the knee than it would be with the hardest punch of the fist. Hence, the heavy leather pads formerly worn gave no protection to the opponent. Incidentally, linesmen who are on their knees much of the time should wear a double thickness of this soft material.

"The elbow is especially prone to abrasions, cuts and injuries. Consequently, every player should be obliged to wear a soft pad of sheepskin or soft Belgium rubber which spreads completely over the elbow joint. This will lessen the number of abrasions and infections.

"The rule which discourages the bandaging of hands is a poor one. Properly to protect a sprained thumb or finger it is absolutely necessary to bandage the hand above the wrist, and such treatment would enable a player to continue in the game without any appreciable danger of more severe injury. But a ruling prevents this now.

"Many minor and serious injuries can be avoided by the use of the newest design of hip pad. There is not much natural padding of fat or muscle on the lateral side of the body at the pelvis, so it is vitally important that serious consideration be given to the type of pad to be used. The trainer or physician will do well to check the position of these pads, for experience has definitely shown that the player cannot be trusted to place his own equipment properly."

DR. STEVENS turned from the matter of equipment to the subject of various playing methods. "One widely debated question," he said, "is that pertaining to the use of the hands on the head and face. It has been the custom at Yale for ten years to have candidates for line positions use their hands ruggedly on the opponents' headgear as a part of the forward defensive line charge in all maneuvers.

"It is our belief that the legitimate use of hands produces a cleaner and more scientific line play, and curtailment of this may result in a type of line play requiring more strength than skill. If the legitimate use of the hands is further restricted, line play will deteriorate into a bumping contest between pachydermatous behemoths and our stadia will be filled with punch-drunk icemen.

"BUT the rules should prohibit the use of the hands on the head and neck of the center, who cannot duck or bob as his head is bent over the ball. As for the 'rabbit punch' and other similar blows, these are positively legislated against, and any man who resorts to such a method to daze an opponent stamps himself as a coward and a mucker."

Dr. Stevens then commented upon the method of tackling. "For the last fifty years," he continued, "'tackle low' has been a command issued by coaches. This is distinctly an erroneous procedure in teaching tackling. The tackle should not be made low, that is, at the knee or a point below the knee, or at any point where the lift of the ball-carrier's leg can collide with the tackler's chin or neck. Tackling low into the knees or ankles or feet of a ball-carrier merely invites disaster.

"Many coaches teach their players to tackle head-on, using the head as a battering ram. This method of teaching head-on tackles and blocks is dangerous and makes for less efficiency. Again, we find coaches who hold the opinion that a player is more prone to neck injury with his head up than down. Nothing can be found in theory or in practice to sustain this view. Every tackle or block should be made with the neck slightly extended, that is, with the head up.

"When being tackled, there is a very definite way to fall and to handle the body so that injuries will be prevented. At this moment, the ball-carrier should flex his neck quite firmly, depressing the chin down to the chest in the manner commonly referred to as 'tucking in his chin.' Both arms should wrap around the ball, the spine should be flexed with sharp flexion of the thigh on the hips and the body bent as far forward as possible. His position then approximates that of a porcupine on defense, and he is well prepared for scientific football tumbling.

"A BALL-CARRIER who is cornered should use the sideline as a safety factor, and either step out or tumble out of bounds. The runner should always use every opportunity to save his body, and this applies equally well to the tacklers and blockers who should avoid trying to tackle a man when he is out of bounds.

"Players when loafing, that is, taking things easy during a contest, seem to get more injuries to the knee and ankle than any other type of injury. This is probably because the ligaments are relaxed and do not form the same protective mechanism that they do when the player sets his muscles to tighten up all the protective forces around the joints.

"The new substitution rule allowing removal and re-entry of players gives opportunity for a better diagnosis by competent physicians in the doctor's quarters. This sensible rule also speeds up the game and improves organization."

DR. PHELPS at this point took up the matter of the treatment of injuries after they occur. "Competent medical men must have absolute charge of the player after he is injured," he said. "Diagnosis on the playing field should be avoided. And this taboo should apply to field treatment. For example, when one of the cartilages of the knee gets caught in the joint space, the knee locks in flexion of varying degrees and cannot be straightened out until the cartilage is replaced, or, as is commonly said, unlocked. If this occurs on the field, it is a most annoying sight to see coaches and trainers yanking and hauling at a player's leg in a blind effort to pull something back into place, despite the fact that reduction is usually a very simple matter in the hands of an experienced physician."

Dr. Stevens then discussed the difficult situation in which the coach is sometimes placed when he must make a choice between removing an injured player and probably losing the game, or retaining him in play to insure victory. "Every coach sooner or later must make such a decision," he said. "Too often, losing the game means that the coach loses his job, or else he is severely criticized by some grandstand quarterbacks for oversubstitution.

"However, it cannot be doubted that in the coach's mind the boy's well-being comes first. It has been my good fortune to have had intimate contact with hundreds of football coaches, and I know that in the hearts of all the player is paramount and that his welfare is guarded zealously at the cost of personal sacrifice to the coach."

Nature Discloses More QUEER LIFE

At left, Dr. Frank E. Nicholson holding a gray bat which was found in the Cascade Cavern near San Antonio, Tex.

Explorer Tells of Diving Through Subterranean Lake and Finding a Cave Where Blind Fish, Salamanders, White Crickets and Frogs, Bats and Oak Trees Grow in Black Void Hundreds of Feet Underground

By Frank E. Nicholson

I HAVE pierced a curtain constructed by Nature which, for ages, concealed amazing subterranean secrets!

On the other side of the curtain I wandered into a land that knew no light, that has never known sun nor rain nor wind nor seasons; yet, oak and hackberry trees are growing there; little brooks trickle through a forest of stone, spilling into basins of crystallized calcide—all within a black void in the cool, mysterious depths of Pluto's realm!

Along the shores of a subterranean stream I found blind albino frogs with translucent bodies, pale gray bats and milk-white crickets and beetles. Within the waters, queer blind fish and cave amphibians darted about. It is truly a cave where subterranean life abounds.

Caves have excited the awe and wonder of mankind from the beginning of time. They have been the centers around which cluster many legends and superstitions. Numerous of the classic Greek myths were built from mental conjectures of that which may exist within Stygian depths.

Gods of old, for whom no earthly residence would have been suitable, were reputed to live amid unimaginable splendors in the depths underfoot. And it was from caves that Oracles spoke their knowledge and directed the destinies of man.

In the light of present-day sophisticated wisdom such superstitions seem woven of thin and transparent threads, yet a cave exploration is never without its thrill to young and old. In excess of a million and a half Americans annually journey below the surface and are awed by the bewildering works of nature which adorn sixty-eight commercial caves on this continent.

To the left center of this subterranean landscape may be seen the figure of a weeping goddess, hands over her eyes, with a bustle and trailing gown—the spirit of Cascade Cavern

To a speleologist who spends his time exploring undeveloped caves, there is no thrill greater than the one which comes when his flashlight pierces the gloom of a glittering subterranean chamber never before seen by the eyes of men, and before him there opens a veritable underground fairyland.

After exploring caves on five continents, including the Carlsbad Caverns of New Mexico and the weird caves of Southern France, this writer has concluded that a cave near Boerne, Tex., on the Old Spanish Trail, which he recently discovered and explored, is one of the most bewildering labyrinths he has ever seen, due to the multitude of living things found therein.

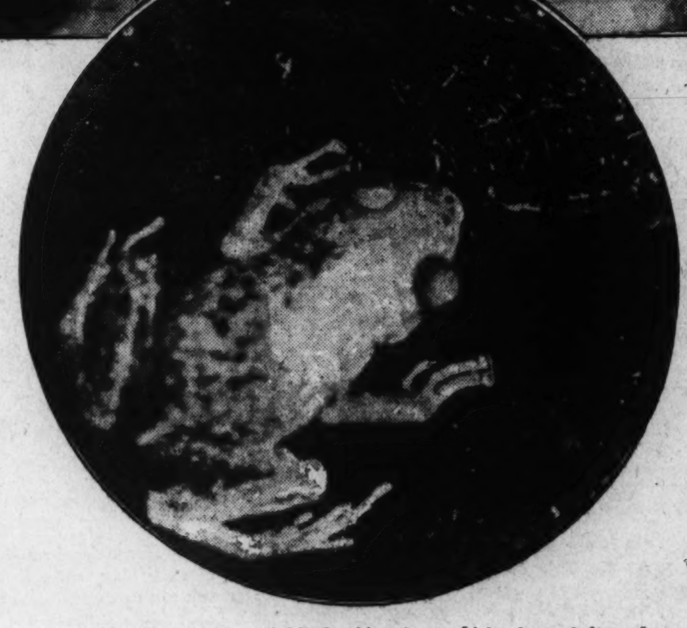
The spectacular entrance is a Gothic arch carved out by torrential waters in the face of a sheer cliff of honeycomb rock, some sixty feet high. The opening has long been known to the residents of Texas' famous "Hill Country," in Kendall County, but the cave was believed to extend but 500 feet. At that point a subterranean lake blocked further progress. From the ceiling above the lake there hung huge stalactites, reaching down and into the water, creating the aspects of a back wall of the cave.

For no one knows how many ages this dark lake with its formidable fangs of stone pressing downward from overhead, with jagged rocks and menacing bottom beneath its black surface, had stood guard as an ancient dragon over treasures beyond.

MUCH must lie beyond, I concluded, upon first visiting the lake. Why? Because evidence of erosion was so strong at the entrance and in the first room as to prove that the torrents of meteoric waters which carved the gigantic opening must have carved more than 500 feet before ceasing their labors. Furthermore, what appeared to be the back wall was stalactitic formation that hung down from the ceiling, rather than rising from the floor. Doubtlessly it would be possible to duck under the barrier—if one didn't mind getting too wet.

My assistant and I decided to find out! We stripped off our outer clothing and waded into the icy, black waters. The floor was irregular and we gyrated considerably as each step led us into deeper water. Yet we traveled cautiously and sure-footed, as there was the possibility of a jumpoff.

As we pushed forward the water rose higher and higher on our bodies, until it reached our armpits at the spot where the cave was supposed to end. We felt with our hands the bottom of the first formation—the tip was perhaps a foot below the surface of the water. The plan was to dive beneath, swimming under water until we had cleared the obstruction overhead and reached the inward shore of the lake.



An unidentified species of blind white frog which changed its color twenty-four hours after being taken from the Cascade Cavern

We were using three-cell flashlamps, which we sealed in half-gallon fruit jars, enabling us to keep them burning under water.

We soon grew somewhat accustomed to the chilly waters and with a deep breath dived down—not without silent misgivings as to what might await us farther on.

We progressed foot by foot. With one hand we held our light focused upward. Now and again we found "pockets" between formations into which we could lift our heads, bringing mouth above water for a breathing period.

At last, after having traveled approximately 200 feet of like territory, we crawled out on dry land. The smell of cool, musty underground was about us. We flashed our lights ahead, and were held spellbound at the spectacular sight which met our eyes.

Ahead, the ceiling rose, the cave opened into a great vaulted tunnel, hung with literally millions of formations of infinite variety, size and shape. Stalagmites, which in the distance looked phantom-like and forbidding, became gleaming columns of calcide as lights were brought nearer.

The formations on all sides of us, we soon noted, were tinted in pastel shades of red, gray and amber. To attempt a description of the natural beauty would be to find the English language wanting in superlatives. We came to spots where the ceiling disappeared behind millions of stalactites; some massive, others no larger in diameter than a wheat straw. Here and there against the walls were frozen cascades of flowstone. Jutting rocks supported lacy formations, like coral. One could let his imagination feast on the likenesses which these queer shapes suggest: jungle and barnyard beasts, flowers and tree trunks—all gracefully rounded, delicately etched, built by nature through the slow process of dripping water.

We pushed ahead until we came to a pool of pure water, as clear as glass. It was a subterranean spring, and the water, bubbling over the edge of the basin, flowed merrily on its way down the main tunnel. Following its course we finally stood beside a seemingly bottomless pit into which the stream emptied, the sparkle of the water losing itself in the gloom of a black hole—no man knows how deep!

ALONG the edges of the stream we noted living things. There were numerous white crawfish crawling about the sand bottom of the stream. The crawfish's ancestors were crawfish that, for some reason or urge which science cannot explain, left a world of sunshine to live in dark recesses underground. Their eyes became useless in the black abode, but Mother Nature caused a whisker-like growth to sprout from their nose—a sensitive "feeler" that connects with a nerve to their now useless eyeballs. This "feeler" acts as a detector of food, likewise a steering apparatus. The light of our lamps had no effect upon them, but the moment we touched a finger in the water near them, away they darted. Here and there in the water darted eyeless minnows.

We also found two rather rare pheletrodroid salamanders, cave amphibians, which we captured, and which are now on exhibit in the Witte Memorial Museum, in San Antonio, Tex.

Clinging on a shining onyx formation, we found a queer frog that, as yet, no one can identify. In some respects it resembles a tree frog, but other characteristics bear no relation to that species. Its forefeet have three toes each, and the hind feet four. On either toe is a "vacuum cup" arrangement, which enables the frog to cling to slick surfaces.

Apparently, it was as comfortable clinging on wall or ceiling, horizontal or upside down, as it was on the floor. We found that by placing the specimen on the lens of our flashlamp that it was translucent, almost transparent. We could see its entire intestinal tract. It was milk-white in color, but a few days after it was brought into daylight pinkish spots appeared on its back. The specimen is now in the Texas University zoology department for further study.

Along the trail we also found white crickets and beetles by the hundreds.

WE FOUND mystery abounding at many a turn of the winding tunnels and passageways. Fascinating, too, was this mystery as we realized we were the first human visitors to this strange country throughout its ages of existence. Each nook and crevice was filled with the uncanny air that comes from yawning depths.

Throughout the cavern we found no two rooms similar in decoration, nor did we find the formations alike in symmetry or shape. There was a constantly changing panorama of weird subterranean scenery. Yet, on the whole, traversing the main hallway was somewhat like a cloister walk in some Old World monastery—inviting peace and quiet; with at no time the feeling of being underground—but what can it be compared with when one has never seen nor experienced anything remotely like it!

In one alcove we found a hollow stalagmite, some three feet in diameter and equally high. A subterranean spring empties into it. Pure sparkling water bubbled over the upper rim. We drank our fill and dubbed it "The Fountain of Youth."

A mile inside we came into a gigantic chamber, the ceiling of which is a particularly interesting example of erosion. Eddying waters long ago ground out deep, inverted bowls overhead; some as deep as ten feet, and from eight to twelve feet in diameter. The ceiling bears striking resemblance to that of the old Alhambra.

We found a lower level to this chamber, with an opening that led on. It was a few feet down this passageway that we found Spanish oak and hackberry trees defying the laws of nature. More than a mile from daylight, in excess of 600 feet below the surface, denied sun and rain, this growth has carried on for years. There were perhaps fifty of them. We took specimens to William King, well-known Southern botanist, who made an examination of the gnarled roots, the semitransparent trunks and branches and the pale green leaves, and, according to him, they exceed fifteen years in age—though less than two feet tall.

We are taught that the reason for trees stretching upward is that they are reaching for the life-giving sunshine. Yet these scrub trees, which have never known sun, are growing absolutely perpendicular, although they have sprouted from a sloping floor.

Working Wives Write own TICKETS TO HAPPINESS

A Recent Court Decision Giving Woman the Right to Boss the Household Because She Is the Breadwinner Brings Judicial Advice on Guarding Against Marital Storms

TO TRAINS

The problems of matrimony are many and may be likened to the towns along a railroad, each having its peculiar advantages or disadvantages. True happiness may be achieved according to the wisdom of the individual in purchasing a "ticket"

Supreme Court Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo, of New York, who believes that a man loses the right of authority over his wife once she is permitted to go to work

By Lois Lorraine

THE working wife who writes her own check writes her own ticket. Whether that ticket is a fare to strife and futility or understanding and happiness depends upon her.

A separation suit decision which Supreme Court Justice Cotillo, of New York, recently handed down threw a new light on obedience. He decreed that a husband allowing his wife to work, even as a result of necessity, relinquishes whatever authority he might believe he has over her.

This decision, rather startling when analyzed, has caused controversial pros and cons in judicial minds all over America. A number of Judges have been free with their expressions of opinion on the matter.

Not so many years ago the husband was absolute lord of his domain. Upon the husband's generosity often rested the happiness of his wife. If he was mean and believed in squeezing pennies, his poor wife knew with every breath she drew his absolute dominance. It took the color from her life. She was his slave, his property. She might rebel inwardly. She might not speak her thoughts.

If her husband was thoughtful and provided money freely, she was a grateful wife, thankful that she did not have to go to him for every cent she actually needed.

Gradually a few girls who had moral courage and took the marriage vow seriously refused to have the word "obey" in their ceremonies. Their young husbands-to-be humored the whim. Not that it meant anything, of course.

The war came. Life was stepped up. Morals changed. Or if they did not change, they were forgotten for a while. Days were short. Death was waiting. And women went to work.

THE war ended. The men and boys returned. Women continued to work. Many times men went without work while women held their jobs. In some cases the women were kept because of their efficiency. In others, because their services could be retained at less wages than men's. At any rate, more and still more women went to work. Whether of necessity or for fol-de-rols, the fact remains.

Nature, however, recognizes no conditions which do not fall under her own law. Men and women continued to love and marry.

Perhaps shortly after the old shoe had been thrown merrily after them, the husband lost his job. The young wife in love still had her job and they decided that things could not stay bad forever. What had they married for, anyway—hadn't they promised to take each other for better or for worse? Well, if they couldn't have the better right away, they'd have to worry along with the worse, make the best of it, and soon everything would be all right again.

Who's the Boss?

A HUSBAND'S right to wifely obedience is limited and should never imperil mutual respect. The legal obligation is upon the husband to support the wife, but his failure to do so should not necessarily lose him her respect and love.—Judge John D. Humphries, Georgia.

The best relation of husband and wife is that of partnership, in which both should be anxious to do whatever is necessary to advance the firm's best interests.—Judge Francis H. Trimble, Kansas City.

I do not think a husband's claim to wifely obedience is a short-term obligation which must be renewed with habitual payments of money.—Judge Leo J. Yehle, Syracuse, N. Y.

Young people should not marry on an insufficient income. Disillusionment may follow. It is wiser to wait until there is enough income, and then money worries will not raise the issue of who is the boss of the house.—Vice Chancellor Davis, New Jersey.

Or, perhaps, even though the man was not working and the girl was, Nature had her way and they went ahead and married, figuring they'd at least have each other, and they'd manage somehow until he got a break.

Vice Chancellor Davis, of Woodbury, N. J., has excellent advice for prospective brides and bridegrooms.

"Do not marry on an insufficient income," he warns. "Disillusionment may follow. It is wiser to wait until there is enough income than to become tangled up in money worries."

Grand philosophy, to be sure, but what young couple madly in love can ever hear advice?

Some of the working wives discovered to their chagrin that their unemployed husbands were lazy, content to accept things as they were, and only too glad that they were lucky enough to have meal tickets. A few of these wives turned to nagging, a few to silence and a few wrote finis to their marriages.

Some of the working wives, after the first flush had been rubbed from romance, found that their unemployed husbands bitterly resented conditions, accepted help from them only as a loan to be paid in full plus interest one day, really tried to find work and were not too proud to accept any kind of work that would at least ease the burden carried by their wives. A few of these wives turned to nagging, a few to silence and a few put their shoulders to the wheel, rejoicing that they had real men for mates and were able to prove their loyalty.

It was easy for tyranny to creep in the homes housing working wives who were not quite big enough to make the grade. They flaunted their independence. They were their own bosses. Their husbands were merely good to cook meals, scrub floors, keep the place clean and make bodily comfort possible.

Perhaps these women were merely evening up old scores against the male tyrants who dominated their female ancestors. Let's see what several Judges have to say about the question.

HON. JOHN D. HUMPHRIES, Judge of the Superior Court of the Atlanta Circuit, Georgia, says:

"A husband's right to wifely obedience is itself limited and should never imperil mutual respect. The legal obligation is upon the husband to support his wife, but failure to do so should not necessarily lose to him her love and respect.

"If the husband should so demean himself as to command the love and respect of his wife, there is no reason for a wife to feel that she need not go more than halfway to make a success of her marriage when her earnings pay half their living expenses.

"And I do not believe that a working wife is tempted to tyrannize even to a small extent if the husband merits her respect. Furthermore, the fact that she works does not of itself cause her to lose respect for him. Loss of respect may arise whether she works or not."

From the West come the opinions of the Hon. Francis H. Trimble, Presiding Judge of the Kansas City Court of Appeals. Justice Trimble does not concede that a husband may have ever had the right to the control of his wife either because of his sex or because of a worn-out belief.

"The best relation of husband and wife is that of a partnership," he asserts, "in which both should be anxious to do whatever may be necessary to advance the firm's truest and best interests," he says.

Justice Trimble thinks if a wife, believing in masculine dominance, once became convinced that her husband, nonproducing, had no right to master her, she would not exert herself to make her marriage a go.

"If a wife thought she need not do more than her share because she was earning, it would be more than a suggestion to her. She would act upon it," he says.

He agrees with Justice Humphries on the point of tyranny.

"When a wife loves a husband well enough to work to support him, she will rather let him tyrannize over her if his unemployment is not because of his fault but only his misfortune.

"And if wives thought their love and loyalty must be paid for by their husbands," he concludes, "it would certainly tend to put the marriage relation on a commercial, and not a love, basis."

THE Hon. Leo J. Yehle, of the Court of Special Sessions, Syracuse, N. Y., makes known his views.

"I realise that there are some positions which can be best filled by married women," he begins, "and I appreciate that with the modern trend of the times, women have successfully advanced themselves in practically every field of endeavor known to man, but I am afraid that I am still old-fashioned enough to believe that it is the duty and responsibility of the husband to provide for the needs of his wife and family.

"In my opinion, there is one avocation which is tantamount to all others in this life, and that is the profession of properly guiding, training and caring for children," Justice Yehle solemnly states, "and although it is undoubtedly one of the oldest callings, I am daily impressed by my experiences in the local Children's Court with the fact that it seems to be the one about which the least is known.

"The primary task of performing this service, although the schools and churches do much to help, rests with the parents, and of the two the mother by her very nature is better endowed to give this problem more personal attention.

"In expressing this thought I do not desire to convey the idea that it is my opinion that 'woman's place is in the home,' for, as a matter of fact, I do not think the woman who confines herself entirely to her home can be a good wife or mother.

"I do feel, however, that in order to create happiness a woman must devote considerable time to understanding and interesting herself in the aims, desires and ideals of her husband and children."

AS A general proposition, Justice Yehle is convinced that a woman cannot be engaged in some business or profession and also devote sufficient time, interest and attention to the successful conduct and management of her home.

"To answer your questions specifically," he volunteers, "I do not think a husband's claim to wifely obedience is a short-term obligation which must be renewed with habitual payments of money for her support."

"I do, however, think that he is responsible for her support, but, in order to enjoy married life," the Hon. Mr. Yehle is emphatic, "the husband must go beyond this material duty."

Regarding tyranny, Justice Yehle concurs with the two former opinions set forth.

"The fact that so many wives are working to support unemployed husbands does not necessarily, in my opinion, tempt them to tyrannize over the men who are dependent upon them, especially," he adds, "under present-day economic conditions.

"On the other hand, I am of the opinion that the regular employment of a wife generally tends to create in her an independence which oftentimes leads to matrimonial difficulties. I think a great deal depends upon whether or not circumstances compel the wife to assist in assuming part of the responsibility for the support of the family.

"When this condition is brought about through absolute necessity, I do not think that the attitude of the wife toward her husband is altered; but when it is brought about because of the fact that the husband is not providing sufficient income to buy many of the luxuries of life, then it seems to me it creates in her a spirit of independence which tends to disrupt domestic tranquillity.

"I believe that if, under ordinary circumstances, the wife were held responsible for providing half of the living expenses, it would prove a great factor in breaking up the normal home life to which we have become accustomed in this country."

THE Hon. Edward E. Porterfield, Judge of the Circuit Court, Kansas City, Mo., expresses these thoughts:

"I do not think there ought to be any such thing as control on the part of the husband over the wife, or any domination over the wife. I think the husband and wife ought to be a partnership of love. They ought to be equal in all respects. Of course, as a matter of practical concern, the wife controls the husband. The wife is the boss, but if she does it right, she controls him through love and not through any right that either one of them has over the other.

"What either of them earns and contributes to the other ought not to affect the situation at all. If the wife earns enough to pay half the living expenses, that ought not to give her any more right than if she earned nothing.

"Of course, the tendency in the wife earning money to support her husband is to create a dominating spirit, but it is wrong. The fact about how much either one of them earns should not at all affect their marriage relation.

"When the wife supports the husband, or does it to a considerable extent," he thinks, "the tendency is to break up the home and not bring them closer together emotionally."

So there you are. There are countless disasters in matrimony. The problems are innumerable. Each one is different and must be solved in an individual manner. There is no formula to follow. Each couple must work out their own destiny.

Remember, the working wife who writes her own check writes her own ticket. Where are you going?

A serious moment turned into a humorous one when a cat decided to enter a scene of the Swiss Alps and leap from mountain to mountain

Earle Larimore, American actor, who tells some amusing incidents of his stage career

Embarrassing Moments behind the Footlights

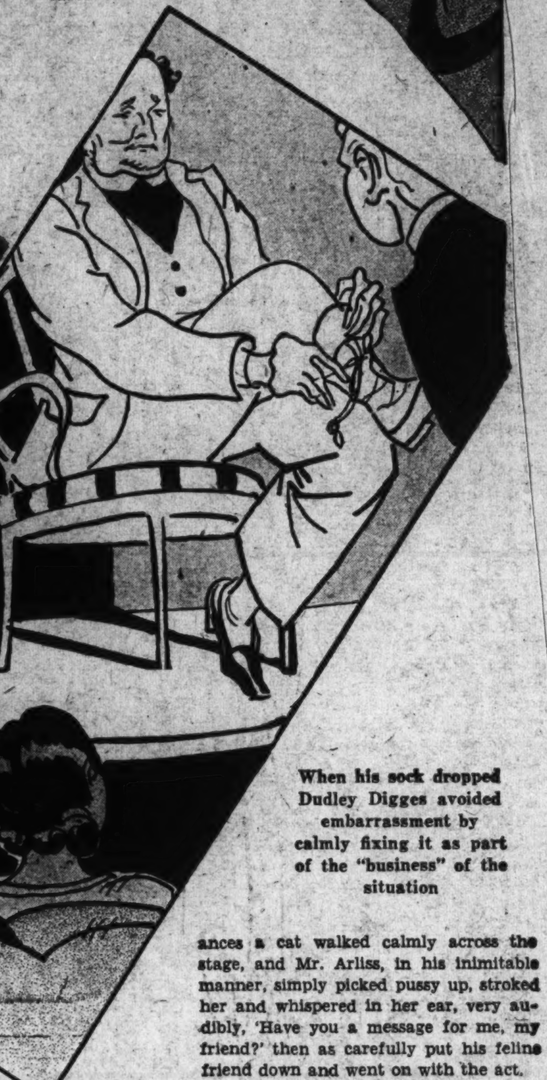
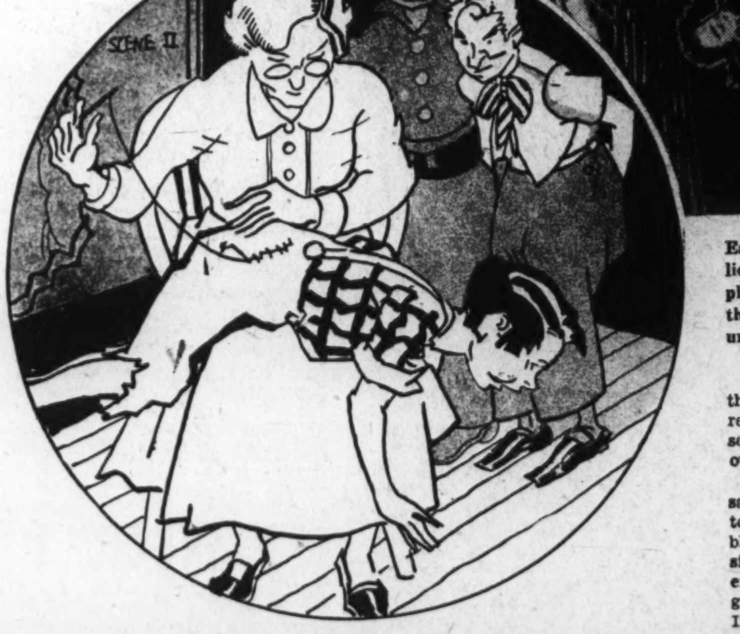
Playful Kittens, Rats, Fire, Real Death, Ripped Breeches and Skidding Garters Are Just a Few of the Things Actors Have to Cope With in Tense Comedy or Tragic Moments

By Irma Benjamin



When his sock dropped Dudley Digges avoided embarrassment by calmly fixing it as part of the "business" of the situation

Earle Larimore in "Marco Millions." During a love scene in this play the leading lady rushed off the stage to fall in a faint, her understudy meeting the emergency unknown to the audience



Losing part of one's clothing on the stage, having it repaired by the wardrobe mistress, only to lose it again, gave Mr. Larimore more than his share of embarrassment during one of his performances

LIFE'S darkest moments for an actor often lie in those fantastic and weirdly ironical farce tragedies written by the hand of Fate and diabolically injected into an otherwise perfectly orderly stage performance. The personnel of the grotesque drama may range from the stark tragedian—Death—to some momentarily capricious canine comedian. There is no order of appearance. At the most unpsychological moment of poignant and pulsating drama, that unseen creative genius—Destiny—may direct an entrance, center stage, of his own ominous or whimsical characters—scene and time unheeded.

And it is then that the legitimate actor, momentarily horrified at the untoward interruption, must put on an impromptu act outclassing any histrionic achievement acquired by infinite preparation.

Sometimes, of necessity, he lets his audience in on the unexpected drama, within the written word, but more often the actors only are aware of some untimely incident, while the crowd out front looks and listens serenely unconscious of the presence of drama more "melo" and comedy more uproariously farcical than could be conjured by the mind of the most imaginative and skilled playwright.

THE backstage whispers of Earle Larimore, that eminent American actor, starring currently in "Good Earth" and for seven years in many other of the Theatre Guild Productions, raise the curtain on a colorful panorama of personal and unexpected appearances in these unwritten dramas.

"They run the gamut of emotions, as well as the perfectly written and beautifully directed dramatic situations," began Mr. Larimore in answer to a request for a few instances of "embarrassing moments on the stage."

Carefully removing the last "make-up" evidences of the dementia precox of his stage character which had but a few moments before exacted the supreme quality of exquisite and convincing artistry, Mr. Larimore snapped out of that world of sordid sophistry into the more normal atmosphere of reality.

"I remember," he began reminiscently, with a merry twinkle in his deep-set, penetrating brown eyes, and a refreshing chuckle contrasting arrestingly with the erstwhile tragic voice of despair, "when I was playing in the comedy, 'The Whole Town's Talking.' I had a scene in which two men enter with malicious intent upon my person and leap on me. There is sudden darkness and a tense and exciting scuffle follows, after which the lights go on and the men are supposed to be discovered grappling with each other, while I hang safely upon the chandelier. Up to that point all went well. Then, as the lights went on, I suddenly felt an unseemly draft, caused by the ripping of a most embarrassing portion of my wardrobe. I got down and made a safe exit into the sympathetic arms of the wardrobe mistress, who in exactly three minutes, time before my next scene, turned me over her knee and did a most maternal mending and, incidentally, 'sticking' act.

"Quite set up, I got my stance and went to strut my love-making stuff. As I started across stage, I heard a titter—I should say a most contagious titter—in the audience, and knew, of course, that I, as well as they, was having a 'ripping' time. The object of my affections was facing me and hadn't the slightest idea of what the hilarity was all about. Fortunately my part was that of an awkward country boy, so I just backed against the nearest wall, assumed even greater self-consciousness than the part called for, spoke my lines accordingly and finally bashfully beckoned my love to come to my arms. Still unconscious of the cause of my unseemly bashfulness, she fell into my 'mood' and my arms, and we lived happily ever after."

"But what of the audience?"

"Audiences, I find, are beautifully sympathetic," said Mr. Larimore. "After the first outburst of mirth at my personal predicament, they settled down to the revived interest in my stage character, and with my bodily gesture of hiding my shame, they seemed to forget all about it.

"But one must always be prepared mentally and physically for any kind of emergency, and if it is discovered by one's audience, it is up to the actor to keep several steps ahead."

Mr. Larimore was made to realize that "all is not gold that smolders" while playing in "Volpone." During one of his most important speeches in this play, he suddenly felt an unusual restlessness in his audience and saw several people get up and quietly walk out.

"For the moment, I was so amazed," said Mr. Larimore, "I found it an effort to go on. Then, realizing I hadn't blundered, I looked for the cause and simultaneously saw and smelled smoke emitting ominously from the cabin of gold in which a fuse had short-circuited. In this case, there was nothing to do but stop the play temporarily, explain the condition to the audience, have the trouble adjusted and go on. It's diabolical to have a thing like that happen, but again I say, with the sympathy of the audience one can carry on and, with them, quickly forget the real in the make-believe."

MR. LARIMORE'S reminiscences were punctuated by the staccato movement of his long, sensitive hands, lighting an endless chain of cigarettes, dipping each one, before lighting, into a suspiciously "snowy" substance. "Menthol, not cocaine," he explained laughingly, anticipating my question, and adding an invitation to "dunk."

Then seriously: "Perhaps the most tragic backstage drama I've ever played was the time when a scene shifter had a stroke of apoplexy while shifting a scene. The horrible irony of that situation lay in the fact that the play was the most uproarious comedy I've ever played. We got the scene together as best we could, administered to the inert body, went on, spoke our lines, provoking side-splitting roars of laughter; rushed back to our patient, trying everything, until a doctor finally arrived and pronounced him dead, while the audience out front rocked with gales of laughter.

"Speaking of strokes, if I may digress a bit from the subject, I'll tell you of the time I unwittingly gave my own physician a terrible scare in the theatre. It was in my first performance in 'Strange Interlude,' when, as the prosperous husband, I grow stout and apoplectic and am supposed finally to die of a stroke in a moment of tense and joyous excitement.

"I studied minutely and medically all the symptoms of apoplexy. I had a body made by my tailor actuating all the measurements of a man of my height weighing 200 pounds. The body was laced up in the back for the final act and, curiously enough, the moment I entered that body, as it were, I automatically assumed the characteristics of an overstout man, and a real fat psychology, breathed spasmodically, walked with the legs of a fat man — and somehow, thought with the brains of one. It just happened to me, that was all. It wasn't hard then to work up the rest of my act and, incidentally, myself into a mental state of apoplexy, and after the death scene my physician, who had coached me in my knowledge, came rushing backstage to offer his services. He thought I had really suffered a stroke.

"THE lines of a play are the last thing I learn. It's the characterization that I study first. And that must be done from its very foundation. In 'The Silver Cord' and again in my role of Orin, it was necessary to study Greek. to understand the Oedipus complex and then thoroughly to acquaint myself with all the symptoms of dementia precox, so that the final disintegration of body and soul is a convincing piece of acting. It gets so that it just happens with each performance. One couldn't possibly actually live through that emotion every day.

"After seven weeks of constant rehearsals, I slept for two weeks, hours on end, before the first public appearance. Then, too, to get back to our original subject, it is, of course, much less difficult to return to character after an unusual interruption, if that character has become part of one's self.

"In one of our serious dramas laid in the Alps, much attention was given to getting a perspective of magnitude and expanse in the Alps scenery. We felt that this had been adequately accomplished, when one night our pet cat, named Guildie, decided, at a most unpropitious moment, to explore the mighty mountains. She leaped from 'Alp to Alp,' while the peaks seemed to melt into nothingness before our very eyes, and the audience roared in the midst of 'sorrow.'

"At one of George Arliss' performances a cat walked calmly across the stage, and Mr. Arliss, in his inimitable manner, simply picked pussy up, stroked her and whispered in her ear, very audibly, 'Have you a message for me, my friend?' then as carefully put his feline friend down and went on with the act.

"I was not so kind," continued the versatile Mr. Larimore, "when in the midst of a love scene, the lady of my dreams, until that moment comfortably seated on a sofa, suddenly at my approach jumped up on the back of the couch and sat there all during the remainder of my amorous appeal. I heard the audience buzz-buzzing behind my back, and finally discovered the cause of the disturbance in the presence of an enormous rat parked comfortably on the floor between my feet. I moved and so did the rodent, my pet aversion, just keeping a few feet ahead of me each time, until we were finally near enough to the wings for me to give it one impressive kick. He made his ignominious exit and the show went on.

"IT IS always amusing to see how pets react to audiences. I remember a puppy we used in one play was so vain that when a climax came he invariably would rush to the footlights and take a bow.

"The amount of poise one exhibits or fails to exert under stress in real life as well as behind the footlights is very often commensurate with one's personal indifference or unutterable embarrassment in certain circumstances.

"For instance, my favorite nightmare is the thought of my sock suddenly dropping to dangle conspicuously the ugly cause thereof—that skiddy garter. Somebody really should invent a non-skid garter," interjected this most delightful raconteur.

"Well, I have never forgotten the poise of Dudley Digges when, right in the middle of his dialogue in 'Man's Estate,' I suddenly discovered his sock down and garter dragging on the stage. We were both seated, I with my back to the audience. To me it was 'Life's Darkest Moment' for Mr. Digges. I nodded and gestured until he got my signals, and then, with never a break in his lines, nor a bat of an eyelash nor a change in intonation, he simply pulled up his sock, snapped the offending appendage with such calm and poise that if the audience thought anything at all it labeled his act as stage business. I don't mean to depreciate Mr. Digges' ability as an actor, but losing his socks just can't be his bete noir, that's all.

"But to have one's lead walk out on one in the middle of an ardent love scene is a bit disconcerting. And that's exactly what happened to me in 'Marco Millions.' The object of my exquisite ardor just walked off the stage, and I stood there and saw her faint as she reached the wings. But before the audience realized just what had happened, her understudy donned her costume and, without one rehearsal with me, came on and followed through."

And at this juncture, in a most fascinating "backstage" performance, the lights over Mr. Larimore's dressing table blinked a simultaneous and inarticulate cue for curtain and exit.

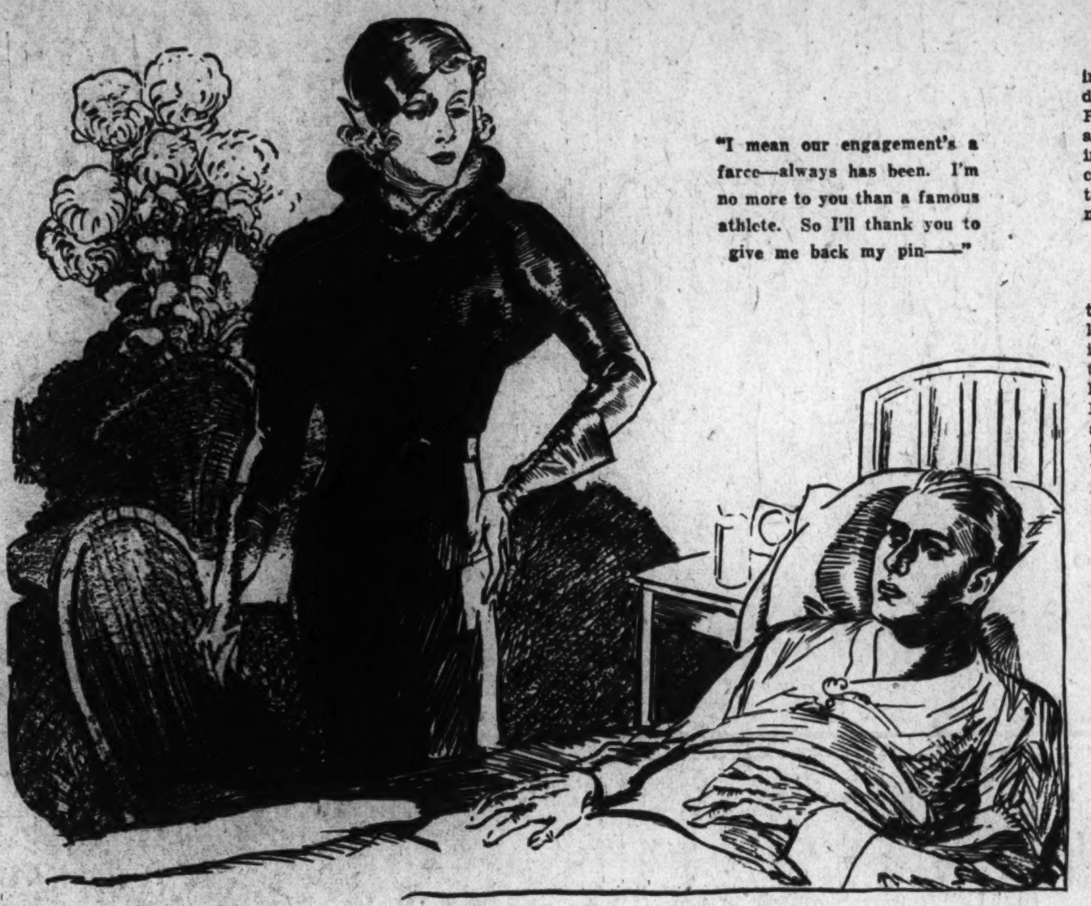
HELEN OF SURREY by Fred Lape

A Football Hero, a Campus Queen and a Fraternity Pin Play Three Prominent Roles in This Story of College Life—And Then Along Comes a Little Miss Nobody



"I mean our engagement's a farce—always has been. I'm no more to you than a famous athlete. So I'll thank you to give me back my pin——"

IT WAS a bad day for Surrey when, a week before the big game with Lick, Ted Basset went to the hospital with the flu. Sport pages headlined the news across the country. Surrey supporters went frantic. Everybody agreed that without Ted Basset, Surrey's chance at the big game froze. Indeed, one might almost have thought that Ted Basset was Surrey's whole football team.

No one was more annoyed than Helen Van Rennslaer, who wore Ted's fraternity pin. For according to that black-haired, brown-eyed hoyden, Eva Mae Norton, Helen was the blonde siren who had turned Ted from an embryo doctor into a dynamic football player. No doubt Helen was the type that inspires men to do heroic things. Her hair was the color of the highlights in old brass, her eyes were lavender, and her skin limpid white.

Even when Ted was running a temperature of 102, as he was when Helen came to the hospital to see him, her beauty made the muscles of his throat draw tight.

Helen said, after a summary condolence, "Well, you'll be ready for action by the day of the game, won't you?"

Ted felt 80. He ached in every bone. But he said glibly, "Sure, I'll be O. K."

"You better be," Helen said. "We're all depending on you."

It seemed to him at the moment that he himself needed somebody to depend upon. He reached up and took her hand. "Sit down by me a while," he begged.

"Oh, I can't, Ted," Helen said. "I've got to be running along—honest—I'm so busy—rehearsals for the Football Show—and everything." She took her hand away. "I just stopped in to make sure you weren't really sick."

He had wanted tenderness, but he hid the want under an impassive face. "Oh, no, I'm all right," he said.

"I knew you were," Helen said, moving toward the door. "Well, I'll be seeing you. Don't fall in love with the nurses. And remember—be hot and going for Saturday!"

"Come see me tomorrow," he said.

"If I can make it," she said, smiling back at him over her shoulder.

BUT she did not come the next day. Nor the next. She called up to say that she was still terribly busy with rehearsals for the Football Show and that Ted simply had to get well for the game.

Eva Mae, who was also in the Football Show, did find time to come in. She burst into the room running, snatched her hat from her head, shook back her black hair from her eyes, perched on the foot of Ted's bed, and grinned at him.

"Well," she said, "little boys that stay out till 3 in the morning on chilly nights will get the flu!"

He looked at her with wide-open and frankly amazed eyes. "How did you know?" he demanded.

Eva Mae roared with laughter. "You innocent! I always let Helen in the fire-escape."

"You would try to blame everything on Helen!"

"Would I?" She looked away. He saw her lips tighten. "Well, anyway," she said, "this is a simple way out of your difficulty."

"What difficulty?"

"You'd have been a washout if you had played in the Big Game."

All 200 pounds of him rose in the bed. "Eva Mae Norton, I'd like to smash your nose in! What do you mean—I'd have been a washout?"

"You haven't been keeping training. Too much Helen!"

"It hasn't hurt my playing, has it?"

"Yes."

"Oh, go to the devil! Anyway, I'm going to play in the Big Game, so chew that down!"

"You think you are!"

"I am."

"Oh, all right. I won't raise your temperature by arguing with you."

"I haven't any temperature."

"Oh. I suppose that's rouge on your cheeks."

"Shut up! Where's Helen?"

"Talking to Hart Williams the last I saw her."

"The devil she was!"

"Well, you asked me! If you want, I'll tell you she was shining her golden wings, or combing her golden hair——"

"Don't be a cat!"

"Why not? It's one of the joys of life. Anyway, she was talking to Hart Williams."

"He's got the lead in the football show, hasn't he? Is he good?"

"Well, if you weren't playing football, he'd be the coed's chief secret sorrow. That sleek black hair, you know—and the dissipated eyes. They get the women."

"Speaking from experience?"

"Sure. I went to a dance with him last night."

"How come?"

"Because he asked me, idiot! We took Helen along."

"I thought——"

"You thought she was terribly busy," said Eva Mae dryly.

HELEN did not come again until Tuesday. By that time Ted was sitting up in bed, a little weak and a little grouchy. He did not want to see anything or anybody.

Helen greeted him gayly. "Well, what have you been doing with yourself?" she asked.

"Thinking."

"Oh-oh!" said Helen. "Little boys shouldn't think. It's bad for their football playing."

"Well, I've been thinking anyhow."

"About what?"

"Plenty of things. Maybe, for instance, that I'll go on with medicine after all."

Helen scanned him quickly. "But, Ted, whatever changed your mind? I thought we'd decided—it's such a long grind—and it'll be ages before you'd be making any money——"

"But I've always wanted to be a doctor."

"Oh, well, childish ambitions, of course! I wanted to be an actress once——" She laughed as though it were a terrible joke that anybody should want to be anything.

"But I still want to be a doctor."

"Oh, let's not talk about it now." She was irritated. "Are you all set for the game?"

"That's another thing I've been thinking about. The doc doesn't want me to play. Says it might ruin me."

"Oh, doctors are always like that. You aren't going to pay any attention to him, are you?"

"I don't know whether I am or not."

"Well, if you're going to let a silly doctor scare you——"

"Listen, are you trying to insinuate that I'm yellow?"

Her lavender eyes gave him a bland glance. "I know you're not. That's why I know you're going to play."

"I suppose you'd be glad enough to see me killed off!"

"Why, Ted, what a mood you are in today!" She took his hand and began to toy tenderly with his fingers. He left his hand passive. She said softly, "Poor old Teddy boy—been so sick. I'm awfully sorry, Ted."

He never was able to resist her tender moments. He said thoughtfully, "You really want me to play?"

She said, "All Surrey is depending upon you. It's your chance, Ted. I don't want you to miss it——"

"Never mind my chance. Do you want me to play?"

"Of course. I want to be proud of you."

"O. K. You needn't worry. I'll play."

"Sweet boy!" She leaned over and kissed him. Her soft lustrous hair tumbled against his eyes. He forgot his grouch, he forgot his sickness.

BUT after she had gone the room was very quiet. He lay in bed, listening. Far off, the hum of the city and of the campus made the air musical. He heard a laugh somewhere below—Helen's laugh—and a man's voice answering it.

Rogers, his nurse, came into the room.

"Rogers," he said, "can you see—out the window—that girl that was just here—is there a man with her?"

Rogers did not even bother to go to the window. "Yes, there was a fellow waiting in a car," she said.

"What did he look like?"

"All I saw was black hair."

"Oh. That's enough." He leaned back against his pillow. His face was thoughtful again. "He had dissipated eyes, too, Rogers. The women all fall for them."

"Do they?" said Rogers.

"Rogers, shall I play Saturday?"

"Of course not."

"You wouldn't, under any circumstances, advise me to play?"

"I certainly would not."

"But, Rogers, suppose you were in love with me, and you didn't want to see me lose my last big chance—"

Rogers thought his temperature was going up again. "Any more wisecracks like that," she said, "and I'll cram a thermometer between your jaws."

ON THURSDAY Ted got out of the hospital. Some one had already spread around the campus the story that he was going to play in the Big Game. But no officials would confirm the rumor. The local sport pages flatly refused to accept the story. Discussion on the Big Game was therefore intense.

Would Ted play? Would the doctor let him play? Would the officials let him play? Would he be any good if he did play? Would Surrey be any good without him?

On Friday night Ted met Eva Mae on the street.

"Are you really going to play tomorrow?" Eva Mae demanded.

"Sure," he said. "I told you so before."

Eva Mae compressed her lips and regarded him contemptuously. "Ted Basset, you're a perfect fool!" she said.

"So Rogers told me."

"You'll only be a washout, anyway!"

It was his turn to glare. "Damn you!" he said furiously. "Don't you ever have anything else to tell me?"

"Not lately."

"Then why don't you keep your mouth shut?"

"Because I like you too well to see you kill yourself for the vanity of a gold-haired ——"

"That's far enough!" he said angrily. "You've been poisonous ever since I started going with Helen——"

"She deserves poison!"

"Will you shut up?"

"Not if I can stop you making a fool of yourself."

"Well, you can't. I'd play now, anyway, just to show you——"

He stopped suddenly. Her eyes had filled with tears. She looked away, angry at his seeing. Neither spoke. Two fellows walked past, laughing.

He felt very humble. "I'm sorry, Eva Mae," he said.

She made no answer. Still not looking at him, she brushed the tears away impatiently.

He said, "I've been in a bad temper all week. Now I've taken it out on you."

"You have," Eva Mae said.

"I'm sorry," he said again. "I know you're right, Eva Mae. But I said I'd play—and I'm going to play—I'm going to play if it kills me!"

EVA MAE jammed her hands in the pockets of her sport jacket. She looked at him and saw by the hard eyes and the set mouth that argument was useless. She drew one hand out of her pocket and extended it to him.

"You're a fool," she said, "but if you've got to be that way—good luck to you. I'll be cheering for you."

He took her hand and held it closely. "Thanks, Eva Mae," he said. "You're one swell kid."

Surrey's Big Game with Lick was as important in Surrey's world as any presidential election is to the United States. Even outside of Surrey it held major interest. Special trains brought grads and football fans thousands of miles to see it. Sport sections gave it page headlines. Two broadcasting companies arranged special hook-ups for the game.

By sunrise on Saturday the Surrey campus hummed with incoming cars. By 9 o'clock the streets were crowded. Old red-faced men loaded with pennants shouted on the corners. Returning grads welcomed other returning grads hilariously. Paper boys cried special editions: "All the latest about the Big Game! Will Basset play?"

Indeed, every group that stopped to discuss the game came sooner or later to that problem.

"Do you really suppose Basset's going to play?"

"I don't believe they'll let him."

"Surrey hasn't got a prayer without him."

"Oh, you never can tell. When it comes to a Lick game, Surrey will fight!"

"Well, here's $10 that says——"

So it went on, in restaurants, on street corners, on fraternity-house porches, under the arches of the campus buildings. And the cars kept humming in with new arrivals, stages slid in with people standing and trains let out their multitudes of chattering, laughing fans.

By 1 o'clock all of this heterogenous bedlam was concentrated in the stadium. Ninety thousand men and women talked, laughed, shouted, cursed, cheered. Two bands blared a confusion of sound. Hot-dog men shouted, peanut boys bawled. Cheerleaders leaped in front of rooting sections. Pennants waved. Colored balloons tugged in an impotent dance at short strings or escaped and went sailing jerkily upward into the gusty air of the vivid blue sky.

When the Surrey team ran on to the field, Ted Basset was not with it. The hearts of the Surrey supporters sank. They settled grimly in their seats.

THE game began as grimly. Surrey opened with her famous trick plays, but Lick had been watching those Surrey plays all season and was not fooled. Lick countered with an aerial attack and that, too, failed. After that the game settled into a straightforward plunging game of force against force—Ted Basset's game. But Ted Basset was not playing, and Surrey battered uselessly for the whole first half at the rock wall of the Lick line. At the end of the colorless, hard-fought half, the score stood 0-0.

When the Surrey team came running out for the second half, the Surrey rooting section went to its feet for its usual cheer. But with the cheer came hoarse exclamations:

"There's Basset!"

"Yes, sir, he's with 'em! Hot dog!"

"Good old Ted!"

"Make it a real cheer, boys!"

The Surrey rooting section gave the cheer. The whole stadium joined. They cheered for the team, but in reality it was Ted Basset they were cheering for. Fifty thousand strong, the Surrey men and their fathers and mothers and uncles and cousins shouted their lungs out for Ted Basset, the boy who was game, the boy who had come out of a hospital to play football for the glory of Surrey.

"Yeah, Basset!"

"Atta boy. Do your stuff!"

"There goes the kickoff."

"Come on, now, Surrey!"

"Give us some action!"

"Get going, Ted!"

Surrey knew her game now. No more tricks. Few passes. A good old-fashioned slamming fight—through the line—off tackle—left side of the line—through the middle. It was slow, it was exhausting, but inevitably it worked, because Ted Basset was there.

The write-up of that half next day would read: "Basset gained 6 yards through the left side of the line * * * Basset plunged for 4 yards through center * * * Basset made 3 yards through the left end * * * Basset made 2 yards through right tackle * * *"

The Surrey machine went steadily down the field. The Lick line was still a heavy wall, but it could not stand Surrey's battering. It could not stand thick-shouldered Ted Basset, the line-breaker.

Down to the 10-yard line. The 8.

"Come on, Surrey! Right through!"

"The old stuff, Basset! Hit 'em!"

First down. Basset gained 2 yards through center. Second down. Triple reverse. No gain.

"Come on, Surrey, use your beef! Give it to Ted."

Third down. Basset gained 2 yards. Fourth down—4 yards to go.

"Come on, Basset, don't weaken!"

"The old stuff now!"

"Four yards—he can make 10!"

They crouched. Signals. Basset plunged through left tackle for—2 yards. Lick's ball.

"Dammit, he oughta made that!"

"Guess he's a little weak."

"Gosh, all that for nothing!"

"Come on, get the lead out of you!"

Lick kicked. Surrey ran the ball back 10 yards. The march started all over again.

Basset made 5 at center. Lateral passes gained 4. Basset went around right end for 4. Basset went through center for 3.

End of the quarter. Score, 0-0.

"Poor old Ted. I've seen him do better."

"How that boy can plunge, though!"

"He acts tired."

"Come on, don't be a washout!"

"Get going! Now's the time that counts."

The whistle blew. The teams were lined up.

"Come on, now! Right over the line."

But the last quarter began slowly. Surrey advanced the ball 10 yards, lost it, got it again, spent eight plays advancing it 20 yards more.

The Lick line was tighter than ever. And Ted Basset was wearing out, no doubt about that.

"Ted, stick to it!"

"He'll go through yet."

"I don't believe it. He's full of lead!"

"He's got no business to be in there, anyway."

"Cheer up, we're on the 18-yard line."

"How long yet to play?"

"Five minutes."

"Gosh, what a game!"

"Come on, Surrey, go get 'em!"

Three downs—8 yards to go. Surrey would have to punt. Too bad. Wait—no—double pass behind the line made—they had to measure it—yes, made first down on Lick's 8-yard line. Lick, expecting the usual line plunge, had been for once fooled by a trick play.

Eight yards to a touchdown.

"Come on, Surrey, this is it!"

"Ted, Ted, go through!"

SURREY took time out. Ted Basset was weak. He staggered, shook himself, took a drink of water. They went back. Signals.

Basset went through left tackle for 3 yards.

The Surrey stands went to their feet. The whole stadium was in tumult.

"Atta boy, push 'em back!"

"Touchdown!"

On the other side the Lick rooters were chanting, "Fight—fight—fight—fight—fight!"

Second down—5 to go. A reverse around right end netted 2 yards.

Third down—3 to go.

"Come on, Surrey, straight through!"

Signals. Basset through center—2 yards—but he was spilled. And what a spill! He was out. Aids rushed on the field, lifted him up. He recovered sluggishly.

"Poor old Ted. What a game on him!"

"Ted, just one more!"

"Yeah, Basset!"

He stood up, dazed. They walked him around. He pulled himself together, pushed the helpers away. He was ready.

From the stands came one tremendous roar. Voices, horns, hands—this for Ted Basset, who couldn't be downed.

Fourth down—1 yard to a touchdown.

The Lick line waited like tensed steel. The stands were quiet. Signals. Ted Basset took the ball. He plunged, straight through center. There was a pile of bodies.

The whistle blew. The bodies unpiled, one by one. At the bottom lay Ted Basset—with the ball—across the line.

Touchdown for Surrey.

BASSET CRITICALLY ILL

SURREY, November 15.—Ted Basset, whose sensational playing won the big game for Surrey here last Saturday, was reported today to be suffering from pleural pneumonia. Basset had the flu only a week before the big game, and played against his doctor's advice. He collapsed on the field after the game.

FEAR BASSET MAY DIE

SURREY, November 17.—A consultation of doctors was held today for Ted Basset, Surrey football star, who is critically ill with pneumonia at the University Hospital. Basset's weakened condition makes his fight against death one-sided. The doctors were pessimistic.

AUTHORITIES BLAMED FOR LETTING BASSET PLAY

SURREY, November 18.—Characterizing Ted Basset's playing in last Saturday's game as mere foolhardiness, Prof. Rankin, of Surrey, blames the doctors and coaches for allowing Basset to go into the game when he was not yet recovered from the flu. Basset's condition at the University Hospital still remains unchanged.

DISCLAIM RESPONSIBILITY FOR BASSET'S PLAYING

SURREY, November 19.—Ball Turner, the Surrey coach, and Ben Curtis, athletic manager, have issued statements in reply to Prof. Rankin's criticism of their allowing Ted Basset to play in the Lick-Surrey game. They claim that Basset played in the game completely against their advice as well as against the doctor's advice. Basset, they say, was persistent in his desire to play, and finally persuaded them to let him take all responsibility for the decision upon his own shoulders.

At the hospital, authorities said there was very little change in Basset's condition.

BASSET MAKING BRAVE FIGHT FOR LIFE

SURREY, November 21.—Doctors said last night that Ted Basset was holding his own in his fight for life, and that if he has sufficient vitality to last him, they have hopes for his recovery.

BASSET WILL LIVE

SURREY, November 24.—Ted Basset, who developed pleural pneumonia after his sensational playing in the Lick-Surrey game, was announced this morning to be out of danger. So the name of another hero is written down in the annals of Surrey.

ROGERS, who had been reading the last notice aloud, folded the paper with a grunt of scorn and threw it on the floor.

"Humph!" she snorted. "When they didn't think you'd live they called you a fool. Now, after we pull through, they call you a hero. That's the way with 'em!"

"What do you call me, Rogers?" Ted asked.

"Fool," said Rogers. "I've told you so plenty of times. But fools or heroes, it's all the same to us."

She got up, adjusted his pillow, and stalked out of the room. In a few minutes she stalked back.

"Girl wants to see you," she said grimly.

"Blonde or brunette?"

"Blonde."

"Oh." Ted sighed. "Bring her in."

Helen came in. She looked ravishing. Her lavender eyes were like cool canyon shadows and her hair shone as if it held late sunlight. She leaned over Ted and kissed him. Her fingers ran over his brows and through his hair.

"Good old Teddy boy," she murmured. "Darling old Teddy."

He lay unmoved, smiling up at her curiously, his eyes half closed.

"Satisfied, eh?" he said.

"Everybody says you're the man of the year," Helen said.

"I guess you get a big kick out of hearing them say that," he said.

She looked at him sharply. There was something in his tone that she couldn't fathom. "I'm so proud of you," she said.

"Sweet of you," Ted said. "Bad break for you that I didn't die, though."

Helen's eyes opened wide in surprise. "Why, Teddy, what do you mean?"

He straightened up in bed. His lips tightened. 'I mean our engagement's a farce—always has been. I'm no more to you than a famous athlete. So I'll thank you to give me my pin back——"

"Why, Teddy, you're crazy——"

He held up one thin, white hand, palm open. "I may be crazy, but I'd like my pin.'

HELEN considered. Her lips pouted. "Well, if that's how you feel about it," she said, in a tone that put the blame on him. She took off the pin. She held it a moment and stared at it sadly. Then she dropped it in his palm.

He closed his fingers over it. He stared up at her grimly. She looked very beautiful, and helpless, and maltreated.

"Thank you," he said wearily. "And now get out—before I try to give it back to you again."

She went out. Afterward Rogers came in.

"A beautiful girl, Rogers," Ted said.

"Yes," said Rogers.

"Too beautiful, Rogers." He sighed.

"Yes," said Rogers.

"She won't come back."

"No?" said Rogers. "Thank God for that!"

He lay a long time silent. At last he said, "About time for Eva Mae to be coming, isn't it?"

Be it known right here that Eva had spent a great deal of her time in the hospital during the interim when the newspapers were reporting the progress of Ted's illness. During some of his conscious moments Ted, if he recognized her, failed to show any signs of it. Yet——

"She's only been gone an hour," Rogers said.

Ted bounced the pin tentatively in his palm. "Do you suppose she'd take a piece of second-hand jewelry off my hands, Rogers?"

"I suppose she'd take anything you gave her," Rogers said contemptuously. "She's that damned foolish!"

FOR THE WASHINGTON POST BOYS AND GIRLS

The Junior Post.

SECTION OF THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON, D. C., OCTOBER 30, 1932.

DO NOT OVERSTEP BOUNDS IN YOUR HALLOWEEN FUN

Then With Thanksgiving Near Take Stock of the Year 1932

Dear Post Boys and Girls: Three cheers for Halloween!

I am sure that you will enjoy all the Halloween stories, poems and drawings in The Junior Post. Tomorrow comes the big day of fun itself.

Have a good time, but do not get into trouble. Of course, mild jokes will not harm any one. But obey the rules laid down by the police and do not be rough in your playing or joke-making. Remember the rights of others and you will have just as much of a lark; in fact, more. For you will have no regrets after the night is over.

Halloween pranks and merrymaking date very far back into our histories. It is the eve of All Saints' Day, when we remember all the dead of the world. Think of that side of it as well as of the witches, pumpkin faces, bobbing apples and other quaint customs which have grown around the celebration until to some people its original meaning seems entirely lost.

Tuesday will be November 1. Just think of it. Only two months more left of 1932. It seemed just the other day when all of us were talking about the New Year and the Bicentennial of George Washington and other exciting things that were to happen this year, and now the old year is nearly gone.

What have you done with 1932? Have you gone ahead in school as you planned? If not, you have only two months in which to make good on your New Year resolutions. Still, that is a long time, when all is said and done, if you start at once without further delay.

The next big issue of The Junior Post will be the Thanksgiving Day number. Are you planning to send in a poem, drawing or story for that issue?

All entries for the issue must be in the hands of The Junior Post editor not later than November 21, for the Thanksgiving Day number is to appear on November 27. So get busy, Take plenty of time and remember to keep the spirit of Thanksgiving Day in your work.

It should always be remembered that in all The Junior Post contests if the entries are not up to the standard set by The Junior Post editor the awards will not be made.

Only the best work is good enough for The Junior Post.

Terry.

Terry was a turtle. He lived in our kitchen most of the time we had him, which was about four years. We would let him out in the yard and he would go away, but always returned. He had two saucers, one contained his water and the other contained his meals. He liked lettuce, bread, meat and especially apples. He was quite a large turtle and could climb up and down steps.

When the colored woman came to clean up she was scrubbing and stuck her hand under the ice box and pulled out the turtle. She let him drop and said: "Law's amercy, what's dat thing?" Terry did not mind being dropped, he just opened up his shell and walked away. After being with us four years Terry died.

I think my turtle came from a family of distinguished turtles, because his great-great and five more great-grandfathers was the turtle that beat the hare in that great race of which we now read about.

Halloween.

There are witches in the air
And ghosts and goblins everywhere.
On the fence black cats are seen,
For it is Halloween.

Children dress in costumes gay
And all sorts of games play;
Pumpkins lit up by candlelight
Shine through the dark night.

Owls hoot from tree to tree,
For night is only when they can see;
Elves and fairies are dancing about
Among the leaves in and out.

Apples bobbing in the pot;
Fires that are nice and hot;
Tonight all these things are seen,
For it is Halloween.

The Pets' Corner

Edited by Ding-How of Hydegree (Mascot of the Junior Post.)

Bow, wow, wow, wow! I am going to have such a good time Halloween. I will dress up like an editor, of course. I have a new necktie and will carry my typewriter on my back and wear eye-glasses all the time. I have a long pair of scissors.

Hop-Toy has been to another wedding., but what do we care? We had ice cream and turkey at our house. Hop-Toy rode on the bride's train again, which is all right for a reporter who never writes anything for the paper. An editor can not go around train riding.

Mike, Great Dane, has been going on long walks about the country side to write something about autumn in Washington. Mike is something like Hop-Toy, though. They both say what good reporters they are and never write anything for the Pets' Corner. Daisy and Spider are making up a poem. If Mike does not watch out they will get their names in the paper before he does.

Heigho, heigho, now that Halloween is soon over all the pets and boys and girls who belong to the Pets' Corner will have to be thinking about Thankgiving. Of course, an editor is above good things to eat. But one must eat to live, and good things to eat have lots to do with Thanksgiving.

The Honorable Mrs. Plum Tree Pekingese, who lives with the Smiling Lady down at our corner, has just come back from Paris. You should notice the Frenchified airs she does put on. She even says she can speak the language and has to have her cafe au lait every morning before she can come out and tell everybody about the art galleries and such things. She even says "bon nuit" instead of good-night when Johnny Bulldog tells us what he is going to have for dinner. Of course, we never use slang in the Pets' Corner, even in French.

Patrick Irish Wolf Hound has just been around bragging about the apples he has up on his place in Virginia. We are having lots of them ourselves for Halloween and are going to have more for Thanksgiving.

Ming Pekingese has gone to Hot Springs with the Gracious Lady and Little Laughing Waters. From his conversation over the telephone I gather that he thinks he knows a lot about playing golf. Oh, well, with the election coming on and everything, an editor does not have much time to play golf or even to look at other people playing it.

Mr. Tweet Canary is making up a new song for the next President of the United States to be sung on November 9. Mr. Tweet is a very smart bird, because he has carefully left out all names and all names of parties. He will put in either Hoover or Roosevelt on November 9. Just now he is skipping names and hopping around in his golden bungalow and looking so wise. He says he is a near relative to the Mlle. Little Bird, who whisper in the ears of candidates.

Dear Ding-How: Hello! How are those beautiful spectacles of yours today? Can I wear them for a change? I always had an idea that I would look particularly handsome in them. Wouldn't I be classy then? I bet I could strut around here. I guess you think you're pretty. Especially when you are wearing them. Oh, well! Some day I may own a pair that will be much nicer than yours are.

Nellie and Bubbles are prancing around here putting on airs. If all the silly mutts I ever saw they sure would take the prize.

Well, I must stop immediately because my time is far too precious to spend in writing you such a letter.

Bow, wow, wow! LINDY.
(Ellen Beaty).

Savage, Md.

Dear Ding-How: How are you, Ding-How? I am a new member of the Pets' Corner. My name is Beauty. Today my mistress showed me The Junior Post and when I saw the pets' letters I wanted to write, so I am. I saw that you were an editor, wore eyeglasses and wrote on a typewriter. I'd love to write on a typewriter. The other day I tried to, but I'll never do it again, because of the scolding I got. Do you need to wear eyeglasses or do you wear them just to distinguish yourself? I'd love to be an editor. Well, good-by, Ding-How. I'll write to you soon again.

Your new friend, BEAUTY.

P. S.—My mistress' name is Virginia Melling, 65 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

HALLOWEEN. Drawn by M. Rittne.

My Story of the San Cipriano

On Monday morning, September 26, a storm was reported to hit Puerto Rico between 11 p. m. and 1 a. m. Its speed was 16 miles an hour and the speed of its revolutions was 180 miles an hour. In getting ready for the storm, windows and doors were all nailed up so tight that the air could not get in.

When the storm hit Puerto Rico it had reduced its speed to 10 miles an hour, but its revolutions were going just as fast.

The night of the storm I went to bed about 7 o'clock. I was not afraid because I had gone through two other hurricanes in the same house. The names of those storms were the San Felipe, going about 200 miles an hour, and the San Nicolas, going 60 miles.

When the storm started at 11:30 I awoke. About the middle of the storm one of the windows blew open and my father caught hold of the latch or hook to close the window; the latch broke off. After a terrific struggle we finally shut it and held it shut with nails and a few belts.

After the storm a person could hardly go through the streets because they were piled with wreckage. St. John's School and many other schools were blown down. In a week's time almost everybody had electricity in San Juan and in Santura but a few.

Fall.

Fall has come once more,
With leaves of yellow, red and brown,
Heaped in piles before your door,
And all of the chestnuts have fallen to the ground.

Fall is a good season for us all,
With games of untold cheer;
We hear the school bells call,
And it will soon be winter drear.

Halloween.

Halloween—
Spooks and ghosts and goblins and clowns
Prowl around in all our towns;
The night is dark,
The moon is low,
And the wind whistles around us so!

Halloween—
Cats serenade us on the back fence
And their shrieks and howls just make us wince;
The sounds we hear
And the ghosts we see
Make us just as frightened as we can be!

Halloween—
Oh, Gypsies dance and witches fly high,
And the goblins shout us a lullaby;
The night is dark,
The moon is low,
And the wind whistles around us so!

Dear Editor: When I read the winners of the silver cup contest I was not only glad but somewhat surprised. I wish to congratulate Emily Franklin for winning, too. I hope she enjoyed the contest as much as I did. My pets sure did help me win.

Thanks for publishing my story Sunday. My scrapbook is becoming filled. I am inclosing some material for the paper. Among them is a composition which I wish to enter in the "What I Admire in Theodore Roosevelt" contest.

Well, I'll close, wishing the best of wishes to you and our little paper. A sincere reader. ELLEN BEATY.

What I Admire in Theodore Roosevelt

I admire Theodore Roosevelt because he lived a noble life. One in which I recognize my ideal type of manhood. His wealth did not make him conceited, his thriftiness did not make him greedy, neither did his generosity make him wasteful. He was kind, alert, ambitious, shrewd tempered and reasonable. He stood for publicity, a strenuous life and a square deal.

When the war with Spain broke out in 1898, Roosevelt, with his band of Rough Riders, went to the front. He did not stand back giving orders, but led the men.

When the World War started, Roosevelt was ready again to sacrifice his life, fighting. He sent his sons to war to fight for the American cause.

When President of the United States he saw that the poor man got a square deal. All through his life he stood for that. He treated everybody equally.

The various offices he held were all filled energetically and honestly.

When away he always sent his boys nice interesting letters, telling them about his various activities and inquring as to their lessons, games and good times. He always had time to chat with the boys and girls at various places.

What a remarkable friend of every one he was! In every stage of his life it is easy to discern a real hero, devoting his life to the public interests of his country and the people. No wonder every one admires, respects and honors him. ELLEN BEATY.

Why I Like Picnics.

I like to go on picnics because I have a good time wading in the water and playing ball and many other games.

Last year my teacher, Mrs. Coggin, planned a picnic. She said we were to go on Wednesday.

Wednesday we came to school early. The teacher told us to bring things for our lunch.

The children brought cakes, pickles, bananas, sandwiches and many other things. Mrs. Coggin made a very large bowl of potato salad.

We put the food in paper bags. We got on the street car marked "Rock Creek Bridge." The car was crowded and some of the people had to stand up.

When we got out of the street car we had to walk a long way.

When we got to the zoo we played ball and hop scotch. After playing awhile we got warm. So we took our shoes and stockings off and waded in water. But we found out we couldn't wade very long because the sand would sink with us, so we dried our feet and put on our shoes and stockings. One little boy fell in the water and got his clothes all wet. The teacher found a nice, sunny spot and told the boy to lie down and get dry.

After we had eaten our lunch we climbed trees and looked around. About 4:30 we left for home. I had a very good time.

I like picnics because I have a good time. FRANCES SUDER.

Halloween.

In the dead of the night, when the stars cease to shine,
While the needles are falling with the odor of pine,
There's a snap in the air
Which gives you a scare,
And behold I hear a scream,
For this is the night of Halloween.

Tonight is the night the witches
prowl,
When ghosts walk and black cats
howl.
Be very careful where you go and
what you do,
Or some one is surely going to grab
you.

THE JUNIOR POST AIRSHIP

"Well I guess you are all ready for the Halloween festivities tomorrow," said the editor to the pilot as they rose from the airfield to start on their weekly tour of the world for the readers of The Junior Post.

"Yes," said the pilot with a boyish laugh. "My sister's boys and girls insist that I make merry with them and my sister had made me a costume. We are going to have a party at our house and then go down street to the carnival."

"My boys and girls have invited me to go along with them too," said the editor. "Suppose we all go together. We will stop by for you and remember to bring plenty of confetti."

"That will be fine," said the pilot, "I think my sister's boy has a bushel of confetti, enough for all of us and some to spare."

"My girl has been very busy this week," said the editor. "It is Girl Scout week you know and she has been keeping each one of the seven days starting with church on Sunday; homemaking on Monday; handicrafts on Tuesday; thrift, on Wednesday; playing hostess on Thursday; community service on Friday; and health day yesterday. Tomorrow she is taking part in a celebration of the birthday of Juliette Low, founder of the Girl Scouts of America."

"My sister's boy was excited enough over the Boy Scouts yesterday," said the pilot. "He was one of the twenty Boy Scouts who received Eagle Awards at the Powell Junior High School."

"Just see how the tip of the Washington Monument shines today—just like a diamond," said the editor as they circled over the monument. "I have seen it before like that but never quite so clear and bright. It only occurs about twice a year early in March and towards the end of October when the sun is in proper position and the spectators take just the right view of it. It is the way the sun shines on the aluminum tip. I hope those photographers down there got good photographs of it."

"Science is an interesting study any way," said the pilot, "and I am glad that they are paying more attention to it in our public schools. My sister's boy was telling me all about plant producing rocks discovered by the geologists of the Geological Survey in the rapid waters of Furnace Creek, a little mountain stream that flows into the Potomac River at Harpers Ferry, W. Va. I have promised to take him up there some day."

"Yes I know," said the editor, "my boy has been reading about the recent discovery of Dr. Edwin P. Hubble, noted for his study of nebulae, who says he has found new evidence that the earth's stellar system is similar to spinal nebulae, great spinning pinwheels of stars. The boy knows all about the telescope Dr. Hubble uses, too, the world's largest, at the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson Observatory."

"There she is, Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, wife of the Democratic nominee for President of the United States, getting out of that airplane," said the pilot as they flew over the Washington Airport. "She is a constant flyer and only is stopping in Washington for a moment or two on her way back from Atlanta, Ga., in time to teach her school in New York."

"I guess we had better head straight for Italy," said the editor. "Remember we have an engagement with Benito Mussolini, or that is, we have an engagement to listen to what the people of Italy have to say about the proposal for a 40-hour week of work in order to give those without employment a chance to work and earn their livings."

"I was always interested in this village," said the pilot as they flew over Ruisagnach in the Province of Trieste. "A pretty village it is, too. All the boys in the village have the names of Felice and the girls Felicita, I have been told."

As they flew over Venice they were interested as every one always is in the canal streets and in the new bridge nearing completion which will give the city the first means in history for auto travel to the mainland.

They flew over Bucharest, Roumania, and saw the Princess Helen, mother of the Crown Prince Michael, arriving at her palace after being exiled a year. All the world hopes that King Carol and she will settle their difficulties so the handsome young crown prince who will one day be king may have both his father and his mother with him. Prince Michael is a nice boy and will without doubt make a very good king some day.

They lingered in the midocean on their way back in order to hear the voice of the Governor General of the Philippine Islands, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, broadcasting a Navy Day speech on his father's birthday, October 27, in favor of the reelection of President Hoover as President of the United States.

Joyce Kilmer.

Joyce Kilmer was an American poet and author. He was born in 1886 in New Brunswick, N. J.

He was engaged in newspaper work and worked on the New York Times' Review of Books in New York City in 1913.

Joyce Kilmer was killed while serving for America in France during the World War in 1918.

His published writings include "Summer of Love," which he wrote in 1911, "Trees," and other poems.

President Hoover Among Sponsors Aiding Movement

The long procession of members of the Knighthood of Youth, a great, Nation-wide organization of boys and girls under the age of 12 and under the direction of the National Child Health Society and the sponsorship of The Washington Post in Washington, has grown by thousands during the past three years. President Hoover and many other distinguished men and women who are interested in the boys and girls of the Nation, and want to see them all form habits of cleanliness and good behavior, which will insure healthy bodies and minds, have given their names and taken an active interest in this organization.

Habit is one of the greatest assets of a human being, a boy or girl or a man or woman. The Knighthood of Youth aims to form good physical and mental habits in the boys and girls of the Nation.

It is lots of fun to be a member of the Knighthood of Youth, too.

Every night before they go to bed thousands of members of the Knighthood of Youth mark up their reminder cards. Thus they can see just how far they are progressing on the road to forming habits of good health and good behavior. To realize a fault is to correct it with the members of the Knighthood of Youth. The reminder cards help members to get rid of bad habits

Flowers.

All summer long the flowers bloom,
Filling the air with their perfume;
They bring to every one delight
And the children love them all from sight.

Now that fall has come once more,
The flowers now about the door
Are fading fast, for their day is gone,
Just like the fading of the dawn.

THE STORY BOOK LADY

"Mother wants us to find out some good books to read over the Thanksgiving holiday," said Alice to Evelyn as they skipped along gayly to join the Story Book Lady and the members of the Knighthood of Youth and Junior Post Writers Club for the weekly pilgrimage to Story Book Land.

"I think that will be nice," said Alice. "I suppose a book on the early history of the country and the first Thanksgiving and the men and women who lived at that time would be nice."

"Well," said the Story Book Lady, "we will all keep an eye out for that kind of book in Story Book Land today. But, of course, we will have to think of our Christmas lists, too, for books are the very nicest things I think to give for Christmas presents. They are like giving our friends new friends to live with them and to have a good time with and enjoy."

"I do think the Story Book Lady says the very nicest things," said Margaret to Ann in a low voice. "I think the members of The Junior Post Writers Club and the Knighthood of Youth are so lucky to have her take us all on these weekly pilgrimages to Story Book Land."

"So do I," said Anne.

"Good morning," said Mr. Gnome, who keeps the gate of the Fairy Tale Bridge that leads to Story Book Land, as the Story Book Lady and the members of The Junior Post Writers Club and the Knighthood of Youth hurried across the bridge.

"Good morning," said the Story Book Lady and the boys and girls in a chorus.

"Good morning," said Blick and Flick and Little Mick, grandsons of Mr. Gnome, as they helped their grandfather fling open wide the gate of the Fairy Tale Bridge. Then they all stood in a row with their grandfather and took off their green hats with the scarlet feathers on them and made deep, low bows.

"Oh! Oh! Oh!" said Little Lillian, "the Story Book Fairy and the Story Book Fairy Children, Merry and Jolly, are all dressed up for Halloween, and what pretty costumes they have, and they are all riding in pumpkin coach airplanes, just like Cinderella would have used had she been a fairy and lived today to ride in airplanes."

"I am glad you like us," said the Story Book Fairy. "The Queen made our costumes and thought you would like to see them."

"Oh, thank her so very much. She must be very clever," said Little Lillian breathlessly.

"Well, of course, when you talk about clever people don't overlook me," said an Eskimo boy standing at the end of a book street.

"We will not," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses. "Let me see it is 'Kudlu, the Eskimo Boy' by Hoffman Birney (The Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia).

"The interesting pictures are by Jean Macdonald. Kudlu was out fishing when the Arctic ice moved inward, crushing his home to splinters. His father was injured, but little Kudlu worked hard all winter to support his family in the manner Eskimo boys do, fishing and hunting, which really is harder than ways our American boys have of earning a living. Of course he had to have help and one of the most interesting parts of this book is a description of Kudlu's long 'trek' or what we call 'journey' to bring help to his family."

"Oh!" said Agnes, as they came to another book street. "This book is just like a poem or an opera."

"It is indeed, dear," said the Story Book Lady. "That is just what it is. I have read about this book for young people, and which all the rest of us will want to read and look at as well. It is called 'Sons of Volsungs' and Dorothy G. Hosford has written a most beautiful version of the story of Sigurd and Brunhild as told in the long epic poem, Sigurd the Volsung,' which your parents can tell you about."

"And such beautiful illustrations, dear Story Book Lady," said Anne.

"Yes, they are, dear," said the Story Book Lady. "They are by Frank Dobias."

"I like this book, too" said Elizabeth, as they came to another book street. "Do tell us about it, dear Story Book Lady."

"Indeed, I will," said the Story Book Lady, putting on her magic glasses. "It is called 'The Mule of the Parthenon and Other Stories of Ancient Greece,' by Ethel Parton, with illustrations by Zhenya Gay. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.)

"This is a story of ancient Greece and of a most contrary mule who would insist on leading the mule train even after he was considered too old to be of service in the work of restoring the Parthenon."

Indifference Bad Habit to Acquire; Must Get Over It

Indifference is a very bad habit to acquire and all members of the Knighthood of Youth should try to overcome this habit if they have acquired it. "I don't care" never got very far in this world. And, of course, will not get very far up the rocky road toward the castle of the Heart's Desire, which all members of the Knighthood of Youth want to reach.

The boy or girl who is indifferent never gets very far in the world. Indifference means lack of interest in lessons or play and means that many of the good things of life pass you by.

The indifferent boy or girl who will not study lessons or even care to hear what the teacher is saying will make an indifferent man or woman, who will not care how work is done or what is going on about him or her.

Indifferent people do not care about the joys or sorrows of those about them and so when they themselves have joys or sorrows they have no friends to turn to. If you have the habit of indifference in even the tiniest degree start this very minute to get over it. Turn about and take an interest in what is going on around you. You will find that there are many things about which to care in the world. Of course, indifferent people are very selfish and selfishness is regarded by every one as a sin.

YES- CHESTER- WHEN IT COMES TO KNOWING HOW TO TAKE CARE OF ANIMALS- THERE IS NO ONE THAT CAN TELL YOUR FATHER ANYTHING ABOUT THEM-
WHY- WHEN I WAS A BOY- I HAD EVERY KIND OF A PET THAT YOU CAN IMAGINE- PET RABBITS- CATS- PIGEONS- DUCKS- CHICKENS- I HAD THE YARD FULL OF THEM- I EVEN HAD A PET GOAT-
DID YOU HAVE A DOG?
DID I? AND YOU YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN THAT DOG DO TRICKS- I CALLED HIM SPOT- AND HE COULD DO ANYTHING- I TAUGHT HIM TO STAND ON HIS HEAD- SNEEZE- SIT UP AND SAY HIS PRAYERS- GO AND GET A STICK OUT OF THE WATER WHEN I THREW IT IN- THERE WASN'T ANYTHING HE COULDN'T DO-
I COULD TEACH AN ANIMAL ANYTHING- IT WAS A SORT OF KNACK THAT I HAD- IT WAS IN THE FAMILY- MY FATHER WAS AN ANIMAL TRAINER- DID YOU KNOW THAT?
DID HE TEACH YOU ANY TRICKS?
FUNNY FACE! GET BACK IN YOUR CAGE- AS A MAID AND COOK YOU ARE TERRIBLY SIMPLE- BUT AS A WISE CRACKER- YOU ARE SIMPLY TERRIBLE-
YOUR GRANDFATHER HAD AN EDUCATED HORSE ONCE THAT HE TRAINED TO DO ALL SORTS OF TRICKS- HE TAUGHT HIM TO WALK THE TIGHT ROPE- ROLLER SKATE- TELL THE TIME BY RINGING A BELL- LIFT THE LATCH ON THE DOOR AND KNOCK TO GET IN THE BARN- RIDE A TRICK BICYCLE-
THEY CALLED HIM THE HORSE WITH THE HUMAN BRAIN- WHY GRANDFATHER TAUGHT HIM TO RUN ERRANDS- MAKE HIS OWN BED- HE'D EVEN CLIMB UP THE LADDER AND GET HIS OWN HAY OUT OF THE HAYMOW- THERE WAS NOTHING HE COULDN'T TEACH HIM-
HE WAS GOING TO TAKE HIM ON THE ROAD AND EXHIBIT HIM IN A CIRCUS- AND HE WOULD HAVE MADE A LOT OF MONEY- BUT THE HORSE HAD ONE BAD HABIT- HE WAS A HEAVY EATER- AND HAD A TERRIBLE APPETITE-
AND FEED WAS HIGH IN THOSE DAYS- SO TO CUT DOWN EXPENSES GRANDFATHER THOUGHT HE WOULD TRY TEACHING HIM NOT TO EAT- SO HE STARTED BY CUTTING HIS FOOD DOWN GRADUALLY- A LITTLE LESS OATS AND A LITTLE LESS HAY EACH DAY-BUT JUST ABOUT THE TIME THAT HE TAUGHT HIM NOT TO EAT-WHAT HAPPENED?
THE HORSE DIED-

THOSE PESKY KIDS HAVE SOAPED UP ALL THE WINDOWS IN MY CAR.
I'VE GOT IT ON YOU, WALT. ALL THE GLASS I'VE GOT IS A BUSTED WINDSHIELD.
KEEP IT DARK BUT I OVERHEARD, AVERY, THAT THE KIDS ARE PLANNING TO TAKE YOUR CAR ALL TO PIECES TONIGHT.
I WISH 'EM LUCK. I'VE TRIED IT AND CAN'T.
JUST THE SAME THEY AREN'T GOING TO PUT THAT ONE OVER ON ME.
IT'S GOIN TO BE AN AWFUL JOB TO TAKE DOWN HIS CAR. IT'S ALL RUSTED TIGHT.
AW GEE!
THAT'S BAD BUT I'VE GOT AN IDEA.
SPRING IT, SKEEZIX.
THIS'LL BE BETTER.
YEAH, WE'LL HAVE MORE TIME FOR OTHER WORK LATER.
DON'T ANYBODY DROP A CAN.
NO, IF ANYBODY HEARS US IT'LL BE ALL OFF.
TOO BAD! ONLY ONE HALLOWEEN IN EVERY YEAR!
YOU DOUBLECROSSED ME, WALT. YOU TOLD THOSE KIDS LAST NIGHT THAT I WAS HIDING IN MY CAR.
I DIDN'T, AVERY. THEY PICKED ON ME TOO. THEY TOOK MY WHEELBARROW.
OH THEY DID, DID THEY? WELL TRY AN' GET IT BACK.

DICK TRACY
by CHESTER GOULD
THE WAY DICK TRACY, JR. LOOKED BEFORE DICK TRACY GAVE HIM A HAIRCUT.
DICK TRACY JUNIOR HELD CAPTIVE BY DOPE RING!
DISCOVERING THAT JUNIOR IS "WISE" TO THEIR ACTIVITIES AND HAS TOLD TRACY WHAT HE KNOWS, THE GANGSTERS SEIZE THE BOY AND PREPARE FOR THEIR NEXT MOVE..
SO YOU'RE A LITTLE SQUEALER, EH KID? YOU THOUGHT YOU'D TELL THAT DETECTIVE PAL OF YOURS ABOUT OUR DOPE PEDDLIN' RACKET AND HAVE HIM CLOSE IN ON US, EH? BRIGHT KID, YOU.
WOT ARE YOU GOIN' TO DO WIT' ME?
YOU'LL FIND OUT, YOU LITTLE DOUBLE-CROSSER.
GET THE BRANDING IRON HOT, JAKE.
IF TRACY WAS HERE, HE'D—
GAG 'IM, JAKE—I'LL HANDLE THE HEAT. LISTEN, KID, WHEN WE SEND YOU HOME TO THAT DICK WITH YER INITIALS ON YER CHEST—IF YOU MEAN ANYTHING TO 'IM, HE'LL LAY OFF US, GIT IT?
NO MATTER WOT YU DO TO ME—TRACY'LL GIT ALLA YOU----I KNOW HE WILL—HE AIN'T AFRAID OF NOTHIN'—HE AIN'T—
YEAH? WELL HE THINKS QUITE A BIT OF YOU, DON'T HE? HE'D HATE TO SEE YOU TURN UP MISSIN' WOULDN'T HE?——WELL, THIS BRANDING BUSINESS IS JUST A WARNING—UNDERSTAND?
MEANWHILE, TRACY, HAVING TRAILED JUNIOR TO THE BUILDING WHICH IS SECURELY LOCKED AND BARRED, CLIMBS TO THE ROOF OF AN ADJOINING STRUCTURE AND MAKES HIS WAY TO A SKYLIGHT OVER AN UPSTAIRS HALLWAY.
THERE'S A LOOKOUT DOWN IN THAT HALL DIRECTLY UNDER THIS SKYLIGHT.
WITH LIGHTNING SPEED, TRACY DECIDES ON HIS NEXT MOVE. HE MUST JUMP THROUGH THE SKYLIGHT.
WHAT IN—?
DON'T OPEN YOUR TRAP OR I'LL——
NOW WITH THIS LITTLE PIECE OF ROPE THAT I BROUGHT ALONG FOR EMERGENCY USE—I'LL JUST LASH YOU TO THIS RADIATOR.
THE KID MUST BE IN ONE OF THESE ROOMS.

While the great Austrian composer, Wolfgang Mozart, poor in health although yet a young man, was working on his Die Zeauberflote, his labor was interrupted by a stranger. The stranger asked Mozart to compose a requiem—he offered to pay for it in advance.

So mysterious were the stranger's errand and manner that Mozart concluded he was a supernatural messenger of death—warning him that it was time to write his own requiem.

The composer, however, returned to his work on Die Zauberflote and finished it. The opera was produced and enjoyed a successful run. Then he was commissioned to write an opera for the coronation of Leopold II at Prague. He composed La Clemenza di Tito. The requiem lay unfinished among his papers. Again the mysterious stranger called, offering to pay further for the piece.

Firmly convinced now that he was writing the requiem for his own death, Mozart put his greatest music into it. It was still unfinished when the stranger called the third time—and Mozart was dead.

His widow induced Sussmayer, one of Mozart's pupils, to finish the work in his dead master's style, and in imitation of his handwriting. The completed requiem was a masterpiece—but it was not played at Mozart's funeral. Mozart was given a pauper's funeral—his grave was not even marked, and no one today knows where his body lies.

The mysterious "messenger of death" who so disturbed the great composer was eventually identified as an emissary of a Count Walsegg who wished to claim credit for having written the requiem.
